as much as we do. At about eight o'clock this morning a merry party assembled upon the deck of the Gen, Miles. Basket after basket of choice luncheon came on board, and tho' the skies were lowering, The Kinney case, which has so long occupied the attention of the circuit court, now goes to Judge Smith for adjudcation. The case began in '81, in relation to sundry transactions in salmon. The principal points in the suit, briefly stated are about as follows: The estate of M.J. Kinney sness E. D. Heatly, et al., claiming that in settlement of accounts there is a matter of $18,000 interest wrongfully charged; a claim of $13,000 as commissions on purchases and sales for account of the cannery, in addition to the salaries of the trustees, is also a point of dispute, and another matter in reference to about $29,000 concerning alleged reclamations, constitutes another point of legal difference. Fullon & Stoll, after the plaintiffs. Killin Men. naths lead to sheltered nooks where quiet comfort and the bracing sea air may be enjoyed. Those who delight in the rear of old ocean may indulge their liking by a walk of about a mile, over a fine plank road, and gaze upon the kaleidosopic changes which the eternal sea is ever presenting. Poetic fancies perhaps en dure for a brief time, and they are doubtless an incentive to enjoyment of doubtless an incentive to enjoyment of luncheon. But how shall we describe that luncheon, prepared with knowledge and skill by Astoria's fairest daughters? Some of the club members were disposed to indulge in a second dinner, and if one of the party did pass his cup six times it was only an evidence that the coffee was excellent. Did it rain? Well now that is a leading question and the court takes the papers and reserves its decision. If it rained it did not harm the O. D. O. clab. The members returned inhibitat and the happiness referred palman, and the happiness reflected upon the faces of the ladies was fully shared by the gentlemen, who declared that it was a duty and a pleasure to "do it again."

The party returned at 6 r. M., and we shall be much surprised if we do not have the pleasure of noticing many recur-rances of this comfortable and happy sustom, for which Astoria is famous Spontaneous combustion has its responsibilities in this country, as the insurance companies realize. Statistics show that there were in the United States last year 208 fires of consequence attributed to spontaneous combustion, de stroying property valued at $3,115,168, upon which there was insurance to the amount of $1,864,202. In the statistics amount of $1,861,202. In the statistics referred to every fire is mentioned, and it is found that they occur in barns, granaries and stables, carriage and wagon factories and wheelwright shops, drug and chemical stores, dwellings and tenements, furniture and uphoistery factories, junk stores, printing and publishing establishments and vessels at wharves. There are more of this kind of fires in summer than in winter, showing that atmospheric heat helps along the chemical mospheric heat helps along the chemical action to which spontaneous combustion is due. The next question is as to how many of these cases of spontaneous com-bustion are due to careles nees.
