A remarkable feat is now being car-ried out by a young Englishman rep-resenting a party of English capi-talists who have acquired a large block of land from the British Columbia government in the exquisitely beautiful lower Kootenai valley, lying just over the northern confines of Idaho, where the international boundary line separates the waters of the Pend d'Oreille lake and Kootena river. This pass, traversed by a nar-row Indian trail, which winds through the almost impenetrable forests that clothe this great spur of the Bocky mountains known as the Clarke's fork range, has never been passed by a wagon, and now a steamer, the hull built of teak in one piece, is to be spirited across this mountain barrier for a distance of forty miles. A large force of Indians belonging to the Kootenai tribe, a race that has as yet remained perfectly untouched by civilization and who have never seen a white woman, have been engaged together with ten or twelve white men, to help in the work. The little steamer has seen much travel. Built last year on the banks of the placid Dee, that washes the Roman walls of beautiful Chester, one England's oldest cities, made a summer trip to the rock-bound coast of Norway, where the her owner explored some of the most inaccessible fiords of that picturesque coast, bent on salmon fishing and bear hunting. Brought back to England, she left Liverpool safely stowed away on the deck of the Polynesia, one of the ocean leviathans, May 21st. Landed at Montreal, she was placed Landed at Montreal, she was placed on deck of one of the large propellers running from that point to the west-ern extremity of the great lakes, Du-luth, when, after passing through some 150 locks that make navigation through the long chain of great lakes possible, and after a narrow es-cape from being wrecked on a hidden rock, on which the propeller struck one dark night heavily, she safely one dark night heavily, she safely reached the latter port, when she was immediately placed on a flat car, on which, after being placed in bond to enable her to pass through the United States, she began her long transcontinental journey of 1,500 miles over the Northern Pacific line to Sand point, or Lake Pend d'Oreille.—Spokane Falls Chronicle.
