An exchange tells the story of a boy who was sent to market with a sack of roasting ears, and after lingering about town all day, came home without selling them. When asked by his mother why he had not sold the corn, he said no one asked him what he had in the sack. How many of our merchants are like the boy? They have goods for sale, but they fail to tell what is in their sack. If you expect to sell goods in this day and age of the world, you must open the sack and the world, you must open the sack and ep shouting the merits of your stock trade, by judicious advertising.

DEMOCRATIC MEETING LIST EVENING. Address of Col. Cornelius Taylor at Occidental Hall.

Col. Cornelius Taylor, of East Port land, addressed a Democratic meeting at Occidental hall last evening. The speaker was introduced to the audience by A. A. Cleveland.

Colonel Taylor began by saying that he was not a soldier; he got his title in boyhood, and in that particular he was like Major Blaine. He was, however, a Democrat and would proceed to discuss the issues of the campaign. He would be candid and deal only in facts. In selecting a president it was evident that the selection was a matter of great concern to the people of this country; it was a matter that required careful thought. He thought that this time the people were in earnest. The Republicans had presented a candidate who was WELL KNOWN TO THE COUNTRY.

He would call attention to the record of the Republican party. That party claimed great honesty. How is this? Why have they the assurance to make that claim? The questions involved during the early years of that party's history are all settled; they require no discussion. While the war was successful the Republican party could not claim the workingman. The Republicans had not cared for the workingman. They have Jones at the head of the national committee. He had introduced pamper labor in this country. That is the kind of a man he is, and is a specimen of the party. It is a matter of record that while Republicans were asking protection, other men were hiring contract labor in Europe. The Republican platform was not in accordance with its actions. Their record on the Chinese question proved that. Blaine was all right on that topic, but where was his party on that question? They were not true to the interests of the working people of this country. Why did they put the notorious Logan up for second place on the national ticket? To capture the electoral vote of the Pacific coast, and for nothing else. for nothing else.

It was only a repetition of former history. When Rome ravaged Carthage, and had grown rich with spoil, she fell through demoralization brought on by the riches acquired by contest. These millionaires say, "Damn the people!" This is the language of Huntington, Vanderbilt and Gould. All this was brought about by the Republican party. They are dishonest. They rob the poor. General Grant fell into their clutches and after a while they will control the whole government.

they will control the whole government. That was what ought to pull down the enormous amount of rottenness, stealing, corruption and demoralization. Their interests are not the people's interests. They would never reform the government. It was for the Democratic party to do that. That party wanted to examine the books. Blaine was not the man to do it. He is not for civil service reform. Col. Tayler then passed on to the consideration of the Democratic nominee. He was a man with a different record, Cleveland, the proud governor of New York, like a tall cliff which though the storms much beat now its base, eternal Cleveland, the proud governor of New York, like a tall cliff which though the storms might beat upon its base, eternal sunlight settled upon its head. He had been elected sheriff in Buffalo; he had been elected apyor of that city; he had been elected governor of the great Empire state by nearly 200,000 majority over the candidate of the administration. In all these high offices he had been a to to corruption, a friend to reform; he wassober, honest, and economical. His record was a grand one. The same "apathy" that elected him governor of New York would elect him president of the United States. He was the peer of any for solid, upright, good sense. That was the Democratic candidate. He alluded to the Oregonian where the citizens of Buffalo had given their fayorite citizen a grand reception the like of which had never before been withessed by any city of its size on the continent. Mr. Dolph had tried to deceive the Astoria public in trying to make them believe that the people of New York didn't honor Mr. Cleveland. Was it right to utter deliberate falsehood? The New York people said that Cleveland's vetoes were right. They ought to know. There was some dissatisfaction, but that was only natural, and would not affect the result. Mr. Cleveland was not an enemy of the people. He was their firm friend.

the Republican party could not claim sole credit for that success. Democrats fought on every battlefield and share the glory of a common triumph.

After the war the Republican party was full of patriots and cursed with vampires who wanted office and spoils. In July, 1867, as much territory was given away as would make three such states as Ohio. The speaker thought Mr. Blaine would to-day give all he possesses if he had half as fine a record as Mr. Cleveland was her thought that men high in office should walk in rectitude, and that scandal had no part in the campaign. Mr. Dolph had saw fit to impugn Mr. Cleveland was not an enemy of the people. He was their firm friend.

THE NADDENING WALTE.

Prof. James P. Welch, of Philadel an old-time dancing master, is going to begin a crusade against the walts. He says that the waltz, as now danced, is peculiarly immoral and shockingly vulgar. We thought likely that just as we so that we could walk around over a lady's train to waltz time, and felt as though we could mingle in good society and join the giddy throng, some great reformer would sail in and bust the whole business. This is not the first time we have been left in a similar man-

per. Prof. Welch claims that the dancers, especially among the lower classes, become too contiguous, and that at the seaside resorts waltzers are too sociable altogether. This is a natural result of seaside resorts waltzers are too sociable altogether. This is a natural result of the two sexes going in swimming together. It was not allowed when we were a boy. Of course, the Atlantic is a pretty big pond, and there is room for all; but man is a social being, and he hates to go four miles away and bathe by himself when he is liable to have a cramp and get drowned. He naturally wants to bathe somewhere where a young woman, wearing a blue dressing-sacque and a bracelet, can run in and rescue him when he gets a cramp. Waltzing, however, should be reformed somewhat. The young man who thinks he ought to insert his nose in the ear of his partner while dancing ought to be taken out in the cloak-room and his attention called to his error. A large man with a two-year-old club could explain it to him so that the whole matter would be perfectly obvious. Waltzing is just like everything else—it can be perverted. Even the camp-meeting has recently been the subject of harsh and bitter criticism. When the camp-meeting gets perverted, it is time for us all to beware. None of us are safe. Whether in the ball-room, at the seaside, the camp-meeting, or in the sleeping-car, the journalist is surrounded by a cordon of disguised foes, any one of whom will down him if he don't keep his eyes constantly peeled. We live in an age of temptations, and consequent victories or defeats. Let us, therefore, brethren of the press, so live that the first man who points the finger of scorn at us may be worn out on the cold bosom of earth.—Laramie Boom-erong.

THE CRAZE FOR KNRE BREECHES.

Ladies are wearing their last year's dresses, writes the Isles of Shoals, N. Y., correspondent of the New York Graphic and the decorative art which now disp'ays itself in clothing children has adopted cheaper and less fanciful mate rials. Broad Mackinaw hats and a few yards of white illusion are all that is necessary for a fashionable hat this season, while last year everybody run to expensive plumes and the breasts and the wings of bright-hued birds. As for the men, those who have good calves are all wearing knickerbockers. Even the spindle-shanked fellows will have to come to it or people will think their limbs are worse than they are. Nine out of every ten men I've met here have appeared in Ocsar Wilde's costume, lacking the velvet and long hair, but I think the new fashion is due quite as much if der, 7 cs 14 kgs 4 bbls butter, 3 hf 8 cs ba-con, 2 kgs catsup, 11 cs cheese, 1 bbl 31 all along the beach, and in the mounall along the beach, and in the mountains it is even more prevalent. It strikes one oddly at first to see a man of 50 dressed in the same pattern that is common for boys of 10, and you mentally conclude that you wouldn't do it if you were in his place, but the convenience of the dress is at once acknowledged, and after a little when you become accusationed to the nevelty you say to yourself: arter a little when you become access tomed to the novelty you say to yourself: "Well, if everybody's going to do it, I'll get a pair of these myself." In boating, fishing, tramping and other pursuits which the man at the sea-other pursuits which the man at the sea-side is naturally expected to follow, the knickerbockers are a great improvement over the ordinary pantaloons, and to a man who has a good pair of legs there is a certain amount of gratification in be-the board of trade or in the countinghouses at present, you may expect to see them pretty generally in the country next year, and perhaps in the cities during the society season as a part of evening dress.

The ladies have gone back to their grandmothers for styles, and why shouldn't the men? The test of a modiste's art is in making a sleeve fit at the shoulder; the test of a tailor's art is in cutting a pair of pantaloons so they wont bag at the knees and flop around the shoe topa; but if you will observe the next hundred men and women you meet you will dismen and women you meet you will dis-cover that both are at a very imperfec-stage of evolution. The new custom will
