

The Daily Astorian.

ASTORIA, OREGON:

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1884

BEN BUTLER is a grandfather. MR. BLAINE wears a No. 8 shoe. GOVERNOR CLEVELAND seldom jokes. JEFFERSON DAVIS is now the last of his line. THE Butler boom begins to sound like a dull thud. GENERAL SHERMAN occasionally attends the circus. SITTING BULL smokes a pipe over two feet in length. MR. ST. JOHN is not in favor of brass bands. He does not approve of anything that goes on a "foot."

A CINCINNATI writer is running for congress, and it is predicted that he will carry everything before him. RUSSIA is massing troops near Merv, and reports from India say she will soon declare a protectorate over Persia. A TOTAL of 118,695 cotton looms and 4,763,000 spindles are shut down in New England on account of over-stocked markets. CAMPAIGN documents are being distributed broadcast throughout the country, which is why the rag-picker rejoices and waxes fat.

BOTH parties are on a still hunt in Florida. A still hunt is a very good thing where the game is bear and you don't want it to find you.

It seems hardly possible that any new lie will be started between now and the 4th prox, but marvellous are the resources of political ingenuity.

NEWSPAPERS and narrow-gauge railroads are rapidly increasing in Texas, and patriotic Texans regard the increase of each as a good omen.

GENERAL GRANT now regrets that he had not adopted literature as a profession in early life. He finds $50,000 a very snug little sum for a few magazine articles.

SIX MOSES MONTEFIORE, the eminent Hebrew, is in excellent health, and services will be held in the synagogues all over Europe on the 29th and 27th in honor of his centenary.

THE great German political parties are alarmed at the possible success of the socialists in the coming elections. Bismarck thinks the law potent enough to keep them within bounds.

In Pennsylvania no man can vote who has not paid a state or county tax within two years previous to the election. The tax must be paid not less than thirty days before the election. There is no escape from this law.

THE financial writers of the London press have recently come to a conclusion which has been steadfastly maintained for several years by the tramps of our own fair land, namely, that there is too little gold to go around.

A Connecticut judge, week before last, sentenced a man to four years in the penitentiary for living in illicit relations with a woman who was the undivided wife of another man. Other states need laws which authorize such sentences.

It is solemnly stated that Mr. Hendricks sat on a stool at a railroad station in Buffalo the other day and ate a sandwich. Had he sat on a railroad station and ate a stool his great feat would have gone booming down the corridors of time.

FOR the past seven months the imports of wheat into Great Britain were 24,956,334 centals. The United States furnished 13,773,980 centals, a little over one-half; India less than one sixth, Russia about one-tenth, and Australia less than one-tenth.

TALKING of all the pseudo "generals" on both territorial tickets, the Olympia Standard says: "The military nominations made by both parties are ornamental appendages for which we can see no possible use. They are like the stops on some of the cheap organs which usually terminate in a block of wood."

YANKEE enterprise is again illustrated by a story which comes from New England. The state of New Hampshire pays a bounty of ten cents apiece for crows' heads, and a bright boy across the Massachusetts line has been making money by shooting crows and selling the heads for several cents apiece to a New Hampshire jobber in the same article.

JUDGING from the croaking of the English press, particularly the Pall Mall Gazette, the British navy is going down. The ships are no longer hearts of oak, nor jolly tars her men. With the pictorial of the past has gone the spirit of Trafalgar. Britannia no longer rules the waves. Has the dry-rot which has sapped the life out of our navy proved contagious to the British? Has iron proved too strong for England's naval blood? Does she pine for the bark that bore her to deeds of conquest? The modern style of navy may be a mistake.

A sub-marine navy is wanted, something that, keeping out of sight, will blow up creation. The coming ship will be very like a whale.
