When it goes out to the world that there are "dull times" in Oregon it should also be stated that in these "dull times" alse be stated that in these "dull times" there is more activity in railroad building right here in this state to-day than in any other section of the Union. The O. R. & N. and Oregon Short Line are pushing things to make railroad connection between Union Pacific points and the Columbia river. Down at Yaquina they are crowding ahead with all possible speed to make completed track between Yaquina and Corvallis. The general stagnation affects Oregon in common with her sister states, but it may fairly be asked: "What other state to-day makes be asked: "What other state to-day makes better showing in the face of these dull times' or has a brighter prospect in the immediate future?

The following is from the Occupation It is a report of that portion of the proceedings of the Board of Trade of Portland relating to the matter of pilots and pilot comissioners:

The matter of the election of a pilot commissioner came up for consideration. Mr. Laidlaw said there was no use in electing a pilot commissioner. Our law was totally inoperative. There is not a single Oregon pilot on the bar. All the pilots are employed by the tugs and are charging Washington territory prices, but the idea that the pilot charged these rates was merely figurative, as he does not get them. Parties here interested in the tug get them. He would move that the navigation committee be instructed to look into the matter and see whether the Oregon law cannot be put in force on

Mr. Dodd said the law was framed by the board. It all hinged on one little vessel, the J. C. Consins. The law grant-ed her peculiar privileges. She was lost, and the moment she was gone our law went with her. We cannot send out a pilot to-day. He cannot go on the tug and there is no vessel to take him. Therefore the Washington territory man omes in under his law and charges $8 or 10. There is no way to fix the matter except to make the pilot commissioners collectors of pilotage. We must have a new law at the next meeting of the legisload, and also from the increased demand in California. Whether this state of things will last long it is impossible now to tell. If this demand should continue, to tell. If this demand should continue, it is uncertain whether logs could be obtained to keep the mills running until next spring. The mill owners claim that they have sufficient logs to last them until the 1st of January. But this is doubtful. All the little camps are closed down, and not many of them like to start up at this rainy season of the year. The mill companies' camps, although large ones, will not be sufficient alone. Very high prices for logs will be the only inducement for many small camps to inducement for many small camps to start this winter. The price of logs is better than it has been for some time past, and now rules from $5 to $5.50 per 1,000 feet, while not long ago it was as low as $3 to $3.50. At the figures now ruling, however, there is just as great a profit to loggers as last year when the prices ruled from $7 to $7.50, because of the lower price of supplies and wages. From the indications, it is probable that the price of logs will be higher before spring. With more logging, the better the times on Puget Sound.—Olympia Transcript.

orth, N. J.

My DEAR LADY;—I received your note just as I was starting for the train, and, therefore, I enclose my autograph for your thoughtful couriesy and compliment in naming your boy for me. There is, however, one thing you sho id think of. When you name your child for a living man you take the risk that he may go astray. I will emeasure so to live that that risk in your case will be nothing. Yours faithfully,

BENJANIS F. BUTLER.

Mr. Holmes found a cold dinner await ing him on his return from work. On his plate lay General Butler's note. The cause of it all was squalling from a cradle under the table.

"He didn't even send the child a bottle," said Mrs. Holmes, tearfully.
"I shall sue him for trying to obtain the Presidency under false pretences," howled the father.

The babe stopped crying to hear the discussion that followed.

"Mrs. Hoffman got $20 for naming her child for Governor Cleveland" sobbed Mrs. Holmes. "It's worth more than that," replied Mr. Holmes, "but to think that Ben Butler only sent us an autograph and a promise to lead a better life."

OOLACHAN AND GEODUCE.

Away up in the waters of the northern Pacific there swims what might be called the olive of the seas. The Indians call it the colechan. It is the fattest of all fish, and from it the oil absolutely drips, an oleaginous fluid as sweet and limpid as that which comes from the fruit of those ugly, dwarfed and rusty looking trees which gives so little shade on Mediterranean coasts. Perhaps some of these days colachan oil will go to France and Italy and come back to us as the best salad dressing. This fish is so fat that if a dried specimen is taken, as was shown at the United States national the tail in the fingers, and it blazes away like a spermaceti candle, giving light without smoke or smell. But the colachen like a spermaceti candle, giving light without smoke or smell. But the colachan might be cloying as a constant food, though explorers of the northwest coast declare that when fresh it is the sweetest of all morsels, being the ortolan, the rice or reed bird fish of the sea. But the colachan pales before something called the "geoduck." This name alone has an inviting sound. You find the geoduck principally in Puget Sound and in San Diego bay, though it is scattered all along the coast from San Francisco to the north. It might be a pity to call it a clam, though it belongs to that humble family, and unpoetical naturalists call it Glycimeras generosa. "I think," writes a careful observer, "that its flesh is too rich to permit of regular stuffing or gormandizing, although I ate quite heartily of it for several meals, and experienced no bad or disagreeable sensations afterwards." When the geoduck is served it delights the eye, for one of those happy ichthyophagists who had the good luck to eat one, says it looked "like a perticularly plump duck." Let us suppose a huge soft clam minus the grit, and we will have an idea of what the Glycimeris generosa is. The method of cooking is to cut off four pounds of the geoduck in slices, to roll it in meal and fry it. Then says a gustatory critic, "You have something like scrambled eggs, but with a flavor of its own." Why should not the geoduck be sent to us? If we have given to the west coast our shad they might return favors by sending us the geoduck for cultivation. We ought to try and propagate this prince of clams. — Exchange.
