CLEVELAND'S SPEECH

At Newark New Jersey, Last Monday.

Grover Cleveland visited Newark, N. J., on the 27th, and spoke as follows:

Fellow citizens - I am here to visit the county and state where I was born, in response to an invitation of many political friends, and a number of those who have been my neighbors, remember my family, if they do not me. I do not wish to attempt any false pretense by declaring that ever since that day when, a very small boy, I left the state, I have languished in an enforced absence and longed to tread again its soil; and yet I may say, without affectation, that though the way of life has led me far from the place of my birth, and the place of my maturity, yet the names of Caldwell and Newark, and the memories connected with these places, are as fresh as ever. I have never been disloyal to my native state, but have ever kept a place warm in my heart for the love I cherish for my birthplace. I hope, then, that I shall not be regarded as recreant son, but that I may without challenge, lay claim to my place as a born Jerseyman. If you will grant me this, I shall not be too modest to assume to share the pride which you must all feel in the position the state of New Jersey and the county of Essex holds in the country to-day. The history of the state dates beyond the time when our union was formed. Its farm lands exceed in average value per acre those of any other state, and it easily leads all states in the number of important industries. When we consider the city of Newark, we find a municipality ranking as fourteenth in point of population among all the cities of the land. It leads every other city in three important industries; it is second only in another.

THE LABORING MEN.

Of course all these industries necessitate the existence of a large laboring population. This gives, in my opinion, a further element of strength and greatness in the state. No part of the community should be more interested in a wise and just administration of their government; none should be better informed as to their needs and rights, and none should guard more vigilantly against these smooth pretenses of false friends. In common with all other citizens they should desire an honest and economical management of public affairs. It is quite plain, too, that the people have the right to demand that no more money should be taken from them, directly or indirectly, for public uses, than is necessary for this purpose. Indeed the right of the government to exact tribute from the citizen is limited to its actual necessities, and that taken from the people beyond that required for their protection by the government is no better than robbery. We surely must condemn, then, a system which takes from the pockets of the people millions of dollars not needed for the support of the government, and which tempts to the inauguration of corrupt schemes and extravagant expenditures.

THE DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM.

The Democratic party has declared that all taxation shall be limited by the requirements of an economical government. This is plain and direct, and it distinctly recognizes the value of labor and its right to governmental care when it further declares that necessary reduction in taxation, and limitation thereof to the country's needs, should be effected without depriving American labor of its ability to compete successfully with foreign labor, and without injuring the interests of our laboring population. At this time, when the suffrages of the laboring men are so industriously sought, they should be careful to inquire, it seems to me, discover the party pledged to the protection of their interest, and which recognizes in their labor something most valuable to the prosperity of the country, and primarily entitled to its care and protection. An intelligent examination will lead them to exercise their privilege as citizens in the furtherance of their interests and the welfare of their country. An unthinking and slothful performance of their duty at the ballot-box will result in their injury and betrayal. No party and no candidate can have cause to complain of a free and intelligent expression of the people's will. This expression will be free when unimpeded by appeals to prejudice or the senseless cry of danger, selfishly raised by a party that seeks its retention of power and patronage, and it will be intelligent when based upon calm deliberation and full appreciation of the duty of good citizenship. In a government of the people no political party gains to itself all the patriotism which the country contains. The perpetuity of our institutions and the public welfare surely do not depend upon unchanging party ascendancy, but upon a simple, business-like administration of the affairs of the government, and appreciation by public officers that they are the people's servants, not their masters.

Political Excitement in Connecticut.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 27. - A scene of intense political excitement was witnessed here Saturday night. The Democratic managers resolved to prevent Alexander Sullivan from addressing a great meeting, which would attract, it was believed, hundreds of his countrymen accustomed to voting the Democratic ticket. A gang of roughs were sent to the hall, inflamed by violent appeals and whiskey. Their instructions were to show no personal disrespect to Sullivan, but to turn the meeting into a riot, and compel the managers to give up the hall to them. There were more than 3,000 people present, including a few hundred ladies. The riot began promptly, and was so vigorous that a number of the more timid withdrew. Efforts to obtain order resulted in greater disorder and some fighting. Sullivan was advised to withdraw, but kept his place quietly on the platform. The scene became so dangerous that it was resolved to have the police quell the disturbers, but as this could not be done without a probability of serious results, Sullivan would not consent to police interference, being confident he could conquer the mob without it.

After half an hour of yelling and fighting, his patience attracted the attention of the rioters, and there was a lull. He then spoke so earnestly and in such good temper that he secured attention. He told the mob that these were tactics by which the English government suppressed free speech in Ireland, and by which Orangemen kept national sentiment from growing in Ulster, and that to copy their example in behalf of the English candidate for the presidency, was to disgrace their native land, and outrage the hospitality of the country of which free speech is the fundamental principle. He completely cowed and won the rioters, and was cheered for minutes at a time. He proceeded with his address, and made more adherents for his cause than he might have done had the riot not occurred. The local managers are furious over their defeat and his victory. He took the midnight train for New York, and large crowds escorted him to it.

BLAINE'S SPEECH.

At Different Points in New York.

Blaine is traveling through New York. At Salamanca, on the 27th, he spoke as follows:

The American people never settled but one great question in a single presidential election. There may be other issues, but there is always one that leads and in the end absorbs popular attention. This issue in 1884 is the question of protective tariff on one side against free trade on the other side. Some Republicans have left us because they are free traders. They have acted wisely. If they want free trade the proper thing for them to do is to join the Democratic party. But for those who want the protective tariff continued the proper thing for them is to adhere to the Republican party. Any man who has decided convictions on that question should remain and abide with the Republican party. On the other hand, any man who has decided views in favor of free trade will better carry out those views by joining the Democratic party. I want to be very frank with you, and I want to be especially frank with the gentlemen who think other questions are to be settled this year. There is no real issue but the question of protection, and that other one which connects itself with it, and becomes a part of it, because the opponents of the protective tariff, if they have any hopes of prevailing, hope to do it by solidifying the vote of the south, and asking the men of New York and Indiana to join them. The question therefore is whether you are ready to take New York out of the great cordon of states that were loyal during the war, and tie her to the solid south, in order that free trade may triumph over protection. I could not, by multiplying words, make the issue any plainer than that. I believe when I look into your faces that I leave that issue in safe hands. I believe that western New York will show that she is not to be diverted by any side issue, especially by questions which cannot be settled this year, and which will only tend to unsettle other questions of great and transcendent importance.

THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY SEES NOW.

As it has sought since the war, to capture the national government by uniting electoral votes in the north with the solid south, and New York is one of the states in which efforts are being made. New York is asked to turn her back upon all her great memories and the great record of her own history, and unite with the south. I know that you will not do it. For the contest in behalf of a protective tariff, and a contest against the south, with its free trade theories for control of this government, I believe you are ready. Have you confidence in your ability to triumph? Do you fully realize your responsibility? Is your courage equal to your responsibility and your confidence? Gentlemen, Western New York has the result of the national contest largely in its keeping, and it is upon the loyalty, the courage, the determination and the number of the Republicans of Western New York that the whole north rules to-day, feeling confident that, as in past contests, you held aloft the banner of the Union, you will do the same now in a crisis not less grave than those in which you have always acted so patriotically and so firmly.
