A well-known physician of this city, appreciates the kindness of some of his friends, who last Friday evening took his gate off the hinges and flung it in the mud. He "took in" the whole business and is delighted with the attention.

The play of "Damon and Pythias," in which George C. Miln appears next Thursday, will doubtless afford a brilliant occasion, as Astor and Pacific Lodges K. of P. will be present, it is said, in the handsome regalia of the order. An amateur theatrical society has been organized, and about December 1st, will organized, and about December 1st, will present to the Astoria public that sterling drama entitled "All that glitters is not gold." The ladies in the organization are Mrs. J. W. Hume, Mrs. J. G. Charters, Miss Maggie Davidson. The gentlemen are John Brown, C. H. Stockton, B. S. Worsley, F. D. Blake, R. V. Montieth, Jr., and Mr. Collins.

The Blaine and Logan club had a bus iness meeting last evening at which it was decided to have a grand rally tomorrow evening. There will be a grand parade on this the last evening of the campaign, local speakers will address the meeting and everyone is invited. At wasterday evening's meeting a vote of yesterday evening's meeting a vote of thanks was tendered the Cieveland and Hendrick's club for the loan of their torches last Friday evening.

Very often after a game dinner there are pieces left that you are puzzled to know what to do with. You can't in conscience throw them away, for game is, as you well know, "a dear delight," and you haven't any nice way of fixing them up so that they won't bear in their appearance the label "warmed up." A nice way of serving these bits is as Salmi. Cut remnants, cover them with stock or cold water, and add a pinch of herbs, two cloves and two perpercorns. Boil down to same Grover Cleveland is good enough to same Grover Cleveland is good enough to beat Blaine. The intelligence of the country say that the same Grover Cleveland is good enough to beat Blaine. The intelligence of the country schoes the sentiments of folger's friends, and believe that the same for using hard the same for Children.

It was related of Tom Corwin, the great Ohio congressional wit, that on a certain occasion he called on a political friend, but finding him absent, accepted an invitation to remain for duner from the young lady of the house. peech of A. A. Cleveland on the Occasion.

The Cleveland and Hendricks club marched in torchlight procession to Un per Astoria last evening, and held a meeting at the Columbia cannery. The meeting was addressed by A. A. Cleveland. He said: "I am pleased and surprised to see so large a crowd before me: but They claim Blaine is a magnetic man. I have solved the puzzle. As soon as you present one pole of the magnet under steel, it is immediately attracted. He spoke of the record of the Republi-

He thought the only safety of the peo-ple would be insured by voting for the Democratic candidate, for it is the policy of the Democratic party to protect the rights of the people, while the Republic-an party throws its influence and power in favor of the manufacturer and m

The speaker prophesied that if Cleveland was elected the duty on twine would be taken off. He would not stoop to prying into the private life of the candidates; that was too small a business for the Democrats.

Senator Joe Brown, of Georgia, does not look like it, but he is one of the big eaters at the capital. His thin, wan face does not betray the formidable appetite for which you must inquire within. A Georgia member said during the last session, "I'll tell you what makes Joe Brown so thin—he eats so much it makes him poor to carry it." The Georgia sentor takes kindly to roast beef well done and rice; hot biscuit for breakfast, and corn bread and vegetables for dinner, with milk heavily laden with cream. He generally goes into the senate chamber with two or three apples in his coat-tail pockets, and at intervals he retires to a cloak room and munches on this fruit.

With a face of marked solemnity, and bowing gravely to the young lady, Mr. Corwin replied: "Mustard and pepper, please, but no salt." This story is brought to mind by Senator John Sher wards well-known reprohent for "condiman's well-known penchant for "condi-menta." He is as fond of pickles as a girl of 17, and the vinegar he consumes will doubtless account for the sour and angular quality of his visage. Spiced oysters are his delight, as well as pickled herrings and bread soaked in tomato catsup. "When Mr. Sherman eats mut-ton-chop," said a waiter at the Arlington, for Astoria. "he wants it black with pepper and plen-ty of sauce or mustard, and then, if he can't get buttermitk, he wants a sour

Hon. Luke Pryor, of Alabama, is one of your old fashioned men, greatly inclined to primitive speech and habit. He was a Carlisle man during the speakership contest. Being approached by some Randall people who wanted to convert him, he said: "Gentlemen, it is onnecessary to persuade me. My mind is made up. We need a judgematic man, and Kerlisle is the man; I am for Kerlisle for speaker first, last and all the time." This honest old member turns to fried bacon and corn-bread, with black coffee, unsweetened, for breakfast, and for dinner the substantial bacon and cabbage, roast beef, and a variety of vegetables, roast beef, and a variety of vegetables, with milk and butter. There are not a few members to whom a boarding house few members to whom a boarding house with a frying pan and corn-bread attachment and a jug of old bourbon under the bed would appear as the chief elements of comfort. ison steak or roast venison. During the deer season he will put up with nothing else. With a cut of venison, a glass of celery, a few slices of bread and a bottle of claret, the Maine parliamentarian is oblivious to surroundings. Ex-Speaker Keifer, of Ohio, is a ponderous, beefy-looking man, and he eats like a man plowing. He means business and no mistake. It is a muscular performance from beginning to end. He assaults a beefsteak as if he had a bitter antagonist in his grasp and was determined to annihilate him. He gulps down a cup of coffee as exultantly as if it were mined to annihilate him. He gulps down a cup of coffee as exultantly as if it were an enemy he was burying out of sight.

Senator Vance, of North Carolina, likes a good dinner almost as well as he does a good varn. He is very fond of roast beef, chicken and lamb, and the dinner is the event of the day to him. He never likes to dinne alone. He is fond of company, and is never so happy as

He never likes to dine alone. He is fond of company, and is never so happy as when he has three or four congenial souls at the dinner table with him.

William Walter Phelps is the "dude" of the house, but by no means an unintellectual one; he is one of your steeledged dudes, although actually and emphatically he bangs his hair by fombing it over his forehead and clipping it. He is intensely sesthetic in his table manners. He picks up a piece of bread as daintily as Oscar Wilde, and manipulates it as if he was afraid he would hurt it. Eating is to him apparently a beautiful and quiet ceremony. He drinks his soup as noiselessly as if he were in a pantomime, and when he munches his bacon it would require an audiphone to enable you to hear him. When he picks his teeth he modestly veils his entire face with a napkin.
