The Oil-Spot.

About ten miles to the south of the Sabine river, which forms the bound-ary between Texas and Louisiana, and about a mile from the shore, there exists a natural phenomenon known to sailors as "The Oil-Spot." In fine weather there is nothing remarkable to atttact the attention of a stranger; but when an angry gale from the northeast sweeps the ocean and great crested waves rise in battle array, this charming natural harbor reveals itself. No visible boundary divides it from the tempestuous ocean around, but within a space of two miles in length the waters remain perfectly calm, their only change being that they become turbid and red, as though the oil-bearing mud were stirred up from below. A broad belt of white foam and towering breakers marks where the mighty waves, rolling shoreward in their might, with all the force gathered in an unbroken sweep of 700 miles across the Gulf, are suddenly arrested and sink down, conquered and powerless, as soon as they come within the mysterious influence of this gentlest of rulers.

Unfortunately this peaceful haven is very shallow; its depth is variously stated at twelve and eighteen feet, so that only vessels of light burden can that only vessels of light burden can here take shelter, but to these, blessed, indeed, is the change of passing sud-denly from the wild tossing of the outer ocean to the wonderful calm of this strange harbor, where the weary crew may rest as securely as though within an encompassing coral reef. Indeed, the stranger approaching this wall of breakers would naturally assume it to be caused by a dangerous reef, and would, as a matter of course, seek safety by steering away from

We believe that no scientific examination of this so-called Oil Spot has yet been made. Sailors who have here found refuge state that the bottom is of a soft, soapy mud, into which they can easily push a pole to a considerable depth—a mud which when applied to deck scrubbing, is found to be exceedingly cleansing.—

But you BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER has broken through the barriers and won its way to my good opinion. My attention was first called to it some eight months ago by a patient of mine Although I was well acquainted with the superior excellence of your other plaster and antisoptic dressing, made especially for the profession, the Benson's was comparatively new to me. I had heard, however, of its merits as a remedy, in case of Lame Back, Local Rheumatism, Neural gia. Congestion of the Bronchial Tubes and Lungs, Dyspepsia, Torpid Liver and the like affections, and have since begun to experi ment with it personally. I find BENSON'S CAPCINE PLASTER an exceptionally clear y plaster to use, and rapid in its action.
