But little business was transacted yesterday, the one absorbing question being "what is the latest from New York?" In the presidential election of 1880, New York cast 1,103,945 votes. Of this number Garfield got 555,544, or 50.372 less than a majority.

THE WEEKLY ASTORIAN, in stamped wrappers, ready for mailing, published this morning; full of news and home happenings; price ten cents. A dispatch to THE ASTORIAN from San Francisco received at one o'clock this morning says that California elects six Republican congressmen.

U. B. Scott's new book, the Telephone to have been launched in East Portland at 11 yesterday morning, and the programme was doubtless carried out. Armstrong, the Republican candidate for delegate to congress from Washington territory, squeezes through by a very tight majority—probably less than 200.

The British bark Belle of Arcos arrived in yesterday. The American ship Chesborough, 1267, Discharge master, 124 days from Philadelphia, is reported outside. At 11 p. m., an associated press dispatch said that the vote of 26 counties in New York gave Cleveland 69,207, Blaine 24,881, and taking the four counties not yet counted officially, the probabilities were that Cleveland's plurality in the state was 831.

Amid the utmost good humor and considerable chaffing on both sides, the crowd at the telegraph office read and commented on the dispatches as they were received. Everyone fraternized though bets were made up to the very last. Republican stock went down to zero when the dispatch came saying Cleveland had carried New York, but rallied again when a delayed dispatch to THE ASTORIAN from San Francisco was received at five minutes past one this morning, which said "Blaine will carry New York by about three hundred and fifty. Dan Manning claims fraud and says that the state board of canvassers will give the state to Cleveland."

Then came dispatches to this office saying that New York state gave Cleveland 392 majority with several precincts to hear from that would undoubtedly be Democratic. Still later came word over the wires that the New York Herald and Tribune claimed that Cleveland had the state by 4,000 majority and that the Western Union and associated Press telegraphed that Blaine had the state by 500 majority.

At fifteen minutes past one this morning the operator at Portland telegraphed that "things are badly mixed up; a conclusion to which every one who waited for the dispatches, or who read these lines will agree. Blaine Reported Dangerously Ill. Boston, Nov. 5.—Midnight.—A special to the Globe from Augusta, says Blaine is dangerously ill. He took to his bed this morning after; scanning the returns of the night. It soon developed into serious symptoms and the family physician sent for in haste. He ordered, perfect quiet. Only John L. Stevens, his most intimate friend, and members of the family are allowed at his bedside. To-night he is in such a condition that it is impossible for him to speak aloud. He is completely prostrated by a severe cold on his lungs, adding to the critical nature of his condition.

Excitement in New York. A News special says: New York, Nov. 5.—11:30 p. m.—A quarter of a million of people on the streets in tremendous excitement, howling, yelling and threatening to mob the Tribune office. The situation is critical. The Times has just put up a bulletin saying: "There is no doubt that Cleveland has carried New York. Verified returns give him a plurality of 5,000, and the Republicans cannot count him out." This intensifies the excitement.

Rooms to Let. Furnished or unfurnished, suitable for housekeeping, at Mrs. TWILIGHT'S. At Frank Fabre's. Board for $22.50 a month. The best in the city. Dinner from 5 to 7. Stop That Cough. By going to J. E. Thomas's and getting a bottle of LEROY'S Cough Balm. IT WILL CURE YOU. Misses' and nursing corsets of the famous Ball's make, at the Empire Store.

Home for Children. Mrs. Wagner, whose residence is next to C. W. Fulton's, is now prepared to take entire charge of a limited number of children. Every attention paid to the little ones, and any one leaving the child with Mrs. Wagner may be sure that it will receive a mother's care. Another installment of Ball's coiled spring, elastic section corsets just arrived at the Empire Store. For a nice, juicy steak cooked on the broiler, go to Frank Fabre.

For a good bath, pleasant shave, or shampoo, go to the City Baths, corner Squemoqua and Olney streets. JOE G. CHARLES, Prop.

THE PRESIDENTIAL CONTENT.

Notwithstanding Known up to Three O'clock This Morning.

There were about 17,643 different figurings in this city yesterday morning when the dispatches began to arrive. Every one who had a spare minute, (and business did not seem to be pressing on the majority), was on the street figuring on the "last dispatch." About ten o'clock came a telegram that New York state up to that hour, showed a majority for Cleveland, but there were one hundred and seventy-two precincts still to hear from. On the heels of that came another saying that Blaine had 615 majority with sundry districts not yet reported, and about two o'clock came one that started everyone to "doing sums" with a pencil and piece of paper. It was to the effect that Blaine had 236 majority with fifty-three precincts to hear from which had given Garfield a net plurality of 1800 in 1880. Then came another saying that Blaine was 473 ahead with 41 precincts still to hear from. This gave something to think about till the next one arrived at seven in the evening, when Republican and Democratic hearts were alike made glad by the receipt of dispatches saying that the Republican national committee and the Democratic national committee had agreed to address the one electing that Blaine and Logan were elected, the other that Cleveland and Hendricks were elected. These dispatches were read to excited crowds at the political headquarters and elicited tremendous cheering.

The next dispatch gave Blaine 471 majority with twenty-three precincts in New York state to hear from. At eight o'clock the following was received at this office: SPECIAL TO THE ASTORIAN. New York, Nov. 6.—The New York Evening Post (Independent Republican), calls for a meeting of Independents and Democrats to-morrow afternoon, in front of the statue of Washington, in favor of an honest count.

The excitement in the city is running high and the vicious element is crowding the streets. Forty-one districts are yet to be heard from in New York. Blaine is 615 ahead. There is no longer any doubt of his election. Blaine's serious illness is contradicted this afternoon. He says he was never in better health, but is suffering from a severe cold. All the northern states except Connecticut are solid for Blaine. Further returns from Oregon show that Blaine's majority in the state will be 2,300.

At 10:30 a. m. came a dispatch from San Francisco to this office that Judge Kelly of New York had telegraphed to Cleveland had carried New York, Connecticut, New Jersey and Indiana, and was undoubtedly elected. Kearney and Market streets are swarming with men carrying Cleveland banners and cheering.

At 11 p. m., an associated press dispatch said that the vote of 26 counties in New York gave Cleveland 69,207, Blaine 24,881, and taking the four counties not yet counted officially, the probabilities were that Cleveland's plurality in the state was 831.

Amid the utmost good humor and considerable chaffing on both sides, the crowd at the telegraph office read and commented on the dispatches as they were received. IRVING IMPOSED.

Hundreds of thousands have read Irving's "Astoria." In Bancroft's history of the Northwest coast, in that portion of it relating to Astoria, talking of Irving's book, he says: I cannot agree with Irving in his estimate of Astor's character. There is nothing in Astor's history that would imply him to be more than a respectable and wealthy merchant of common honesty and uncommon ability, desirous of increasing his wealth and respectability by every legitimate means at his command. Had this scheme been based on self-sacrifice, or pecuniary loss for the public good, or the promulgation of some great principle, the current of unqualified sympathy, trickery, sentimentality and material gain which runs through "Astoria" might be more bearable. That Mr. Astor was an able man there is no doubt; that he was a remarkably patriotic or noble-minded man, actuated by higher motives than the usual selfish and mercenary motives, there is not the slightest evidence. There are whole pages in "Astoria" abstracted almost literally from Franchere. Pretending to draw all his information from private sources, the author makes no allusion to the source to which he is most indebted, not even mentioning Franchere's name once in his whole work. It is with exceeding regret that in "Astoria" I find myself obliged to make such an exception both to the author's integrity of purpose and faithfulness of execution. For half a century Irving has been the literary idol of American readers; and for his writings no one has greater admiration than myself. In my study of his "Columbus" I found the treatment of the Spaniards and their doings at Darien for the most part truthful and clear; and up to this time the imputation that he had received money from Mr. Astor for writing "Astoria" I believed to be utterly false and unworthy of consideration. But in closely comparing with original evidence his statements concerning the New York fur merchant and his associates of the Northwest Company, I find them so at variance with truth and fairness that I am otherwise wary of judgment.

When Dr. Whitman started upon his journey from Oregon to Washington, to urge President Tyler not to sign any treaty that would give Oregon to the English, he took with him and his companion as their baggage-carrier, a mule. While crossing the Rocky mountains, in dead of winter, Dr. Whitman, his companion and guide lost their way in a snowstorm, and after searching in vain for hours for the right path were about to give up in despair when the guide accidentally noticed the mule's "significant" movements in the head and ears, the animal turning his ears right and left and then setting them in a projection forward as if he would direct attention. Remembering the power of animal instinct, the freezing and hopeless riders decided to give the mule a free rein and follow wherever he went. To their great joy it carried them back to a previous camp, from which they were able to resume their journey without difficulty. Had Dr. Whitman perished at that time the probabilities are, the most valuable portion of what is now Oregon and Washington territory, would have become a British possession. —Etc.
