Notice to Advertisers. THE ASTORIAN guarantees to its advertisers the largest circulation of any newspaper published on the Columbia river.

Sweet rider. Frank L. Parker and bride returned from Portland last evening.

If some people have adopted "pay as you go" for their motto it would seem as if they "go" very slow.

The Holton House arrivals in yesterday's Oregonian is like reading the roll-call of the Astoria Democracy.

A serious drought is reported in New Hampshire. Astoria is not the only place where dry weather prevails.

Geo. P. Wheeler has received the Oregon, Washington and Idaho agency for the New York Mutual Life Insurance Co.

There are about a thousand federal positions to fill in this coast. The transcontinental railroad will probably give reduced rates.

THE WEEKLY ASTORIAN, in striped wrappers, ready for mailing, published this morning, full of news and home happenings, price ten cents.

Mr. E. A. Notes gives notice that the regular annual meeting of the stockholders of the Pythian L. & B. Association will be held on the evening of December 3.

Tickets for Rev. Jos. Cook's lectures next Wednesday and Thursday evenings may be had at any of the book stores, or drug stores at Garrison & Co's, and at E. C. Holden's auction rooms. No extra charge for reserved seats.

On the 23rd of April, 1881, young Kallioh killed Charles De Young, in his office, in the Chronicle building, San Francisco. Last Wednesday evening Adolph Spreckels made a dastardly attack on the surviving brother, M. H. De Young, under almost exactly the same circumstances.

When the time came for launching the A. T. Co's new steamer yesterday afternoon a large crowd had assembled, but everything was not quite ready, and mechanical difficulties again presenting themselves and necessitating a postponement. She is to be launched at three this afternoon, if circumstances are favorable. It is not decided yet whether she will go north or load lumber for San Francisco.

"On with the dance, let joy be unfettered. No sleep till morn, when youth and pleasure meet, to chase the glowing hours with flying feet." Such was the merry motto of the Olympic Gymnasium club on the occasion of their first annual ball at Liberty hall last evening. Every one present had a good time, and the Astoria Ladies' Coffee club furnished a fine supper. The club comprises some of the best young men of the city, and has won its way to popular favor, as was abundantly manifested last evening.

The Clatsop Rod and Gun club held a meeting at the office of T. S. Jewett last evening, at which it was decided to start on the annual hunt this evening. A steamer will be chartered, and all members desirous of participating are requested to be at Wilson & Fisher's dock at six this evening, ready to embark. Supplies are to be brought along, and the important matter of the commissary department is not to be neglected. The club has some AI sportsmen among its membership, and we expect to hear of good returns.

There is a pack of itinerant peddlers that infest this city, greatly to the damage of our merchants. They sell all sorts of truck, from a hairpin to a roll of carpet. Their favorite dodge is to go to private residence and get the folks to believe that what they offer for sale is "smuggled," they can work off almost any kind of rubbish. The fact that they continue to annoy people shows that they must meet with encouragement, or else they would quit and go away. They are a nuisance, and ought to be severely let alone, if nothing else.

SPARKS FROM THE TELEGRAPH.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Southern Democrats appear to agree upon the two positions in the cabinet that will be needed for that section. They say that attorney general and postmaster general can be of more value to their section of country than any other places the president could bestow. They say that the appointees generally of the Republican party under the department of justice have run the offices for what the senate make, and they are only too anxious to get the southern people have been very much oppressed.

STILL MEN ABOUT IT. BATAVIA, N. Y., Nov. 19.—The Republicans of Genesee county lay the blame of Blaine's reduced majority upon the prohibitionists, and they are greatly incensed. They only too vigorously upon the prohibitionists, and intimate they will break up the cold water organization in this county. "We'll show them next spring," said a Republican, "by voting for liquor, giving them free expression so far as it's in our power to do so. We'll fill the streets with the stuff," he continued, "and let every man fill his cup as he pleases." That man expresses the sentiments of many.

CONGRESSIONAL BARGAINING. WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—There will be an executive session of the senate after the adjournment of congress March 4th, to act on Cleveland's nominations. Under the circumstances much bargaining is expected among senators, Republican and Democratic trading and lending mutual support in order to get in their choice among the applicants.

ENGLISH PROTECTION. LONDON, Nov. 19.—The question of the imposition of some sort of tariffs for the protection of home products and industries has been brought to the front again both in England and France. In this country the question, which a veritable longshore to the present government, has been revived by a formal complaint from the artisans in various trades.

HE SAYS DOWN ON THEM. ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 19.—The governor was asked if he was prepared to affirm the correctness of the rumor about Cook. He said this is coming down to details. I think they ought to have consulted me before taking decisive action on such a matter. There is abundant material," he added, "out of which to make up a cable."

WELLS, FARGO & CO. BEAT THE NORTHERN PACIFIC. The case of Wells, Fargo & Co. vs the Northern Pacific Railroad Company was decided in the United States Circuit court, yesterday, in favor of the express company. Wells-Fargo sued the Northern Pacific, some time since, to compel the latter to allow it equal privileges on its main and branch lines with other express companies. Judge Deady, in deciding the case, ordered that the defendant be required to furnish ordinary facilities to Wells, Fargo & Co. on its line between Oregon and St. Paul, and also on its connecting lines and links, wherever they may be. The order also directs that Wells, Fargo & Co. be given the same facilities to transport its business as is furnished to any other express company. Wells, Fargo & Co. will have to give a bond for $25,000, which will have to be approved by one of the officers of the Northern Pacific as a guarantee for all costs, charges and damages which the express company may incur or earn. These facilities must be granted forthwith between Missoula and Helena, and from Wallula for a short distance east. From Helena to St. Paul the facilities needed need not be granted until December 1st.—News, 20.

Case Presentation. The Astoria Cleveland and Hendricks club, last evening, through Alex. Campbell, one of its members, presented to C. J. Trenchard, the president of the club, a handsome gold-headed cane, as a token of recognition to the gentleman's efficient services in behalf of the Democracy during the campaign.—Portland Standard, 20.

The matter of federal appointments is one of considerable interest all over the Union at present. Here in Astoria the crumbs are few and the idea in the minds of many is that whatever little official positions there are will be given to some importation. The name of John Hobson has among others, been mentioned in connection with the position of collector of the port. He is a man that always "stood in" in the days of defeat, but put up his coin and ran for office when he had no more show of success than a cat in huds with claws, and deserves recognition. C. H. Page is also mentioned as a man who would deserve to fill the bill. As a postmaster the list of names mentioned in connection with the office is so long that present mention would be invidious. There is more probability of the postmaster being an Astorian than any other federal appointment in the place.

Excited Thousands. All over the land are going into ecstasy over Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. POLITICS AND POLITICIANS.

A great political campaign like the one just closed is a distinct and important chapter added to history. There are influences in such a contest that touch the fundamental facts of government, and that reach forward to times and problems of which people now living can have no conception. When we elect a president we do something of world-wide and permanent interest, and contribute to the story of civilization and of the progress of nations certain material that is in the nature of things gravely and continuously valuable. It would seem to follow that the men engaged prominently in this sort of history-making should be secure against forgetfulness and retain a definite and denoting relation always to the record of events which they were largely instrumental in bringing about. But in reality such is not the case. Personal fame fades and disappears, while general facts and results are carefully preserved; and he is an uncommonly fortunate man in politics whose name survives after him for a single generation.

There have been not a few men of superior ability and effectiveness in American politics at every period of our national existence—men whose leadership was absolute and whose popularity was unquestioned and complete; and yet how many of them are to-day remembered in any true and sound sense? We doubt if the average citizen can give the names of the prominent politicians of any decade back of his personal experience and observation, to say nothing of what they did and in what manner they impressed themselves upon the affairs of the time. Very few of our citizens are able to recall the names of the men who have been candidates for president and vice-president in the various elections since the foundation of the government; and certainly it would puzzle the best posted to name the principal cabinet officers or ministers to foreign countries under the different administrations. Besides Webster, Clay, Calhoun and Benton, how many statesmen of the first half of the present century can be said to have gained enduring reputations? And how many of the latter half of the century are likely to be remembered with the great, fifty years from now?

One of the most unmistakable lessons of history is that political distinction is a position of singular uncertainty, and that political success costs more and counts for less than any other in the world. So much depends on circumstances, upon fluctuations of popular sentiment and accident of time, that the man who follows such a career can never be sure of his footing and never safe as to his calculations. One day he is carried on the shoulders of an admiring constituency, and the next day perhaps he is scolded with curses and burned in effigy. However able and prudent he may be, he is bound to make mistakes, and mistakes in politics are promptly and sharply visited with punishment. When he triumphs he is hurried on, and when he is beaten he is provoked. The power that comes to him when he gets into office is just as apt to prove a detriment as an advantage; and yet without power he can command no following, and he is helpless to keep his office or to lose his connections with the practical side of affairs and passes out of sight.

The man who has made a business of politics for any considerable length of time, and who has seen the ups and downs of his career, and who has found it satisfactory, and that it would have been better for him if he had chosen some other occupation. At best, the effort that it does not pay in any respect. The same amount of time and energy applied to ordinary professional pursuits or business enterprises could not fail to yield abundant and gratifying returns. No one knows this better than the man who seeks office and wears himself out in fighting votes and manipulating caucuses and conventions; and that rarely occurs to him to make personal use of the lesson. Once a politician always a politician is the rule. There seems to be a fatalism in his position which the victim is powerless to resist or break away from. The number of instances where men have voluntarily quit politics is very small; and in every community can be found those who insist upon following that kind of life long after there has ceased to be the vaguest chance for them to derive any benefit from it.

It is every man's right and privilege to accept an official trust; it may indeed become his duty to do so. The case is very different, however, when a man sets out to make a trade of office-seeking, or when he acquires a taste for that sort of thing that he is unfit for anything else. There are men in plenty all over the country who make themselves felt in politics, and render good service to their parties, without becoming so infatuated with the turmoil, excitement and maneuvering that it turns their heads and disqualifies them for legitimate pursuits. Such men are politicians of a proper and desirable kind, and their example is worthy of imitation. Every citizen is under obligation to assert himself in behalf of what he believes to be correct and wholesome political principles, and to give practical and earnest aid to the party which he thinks should be intrusted with the control of the government. No fault is to be found with the man who stands up for his convictions; and no harm can come to him by reason of so doing. It is only when he makes politics a regular trade, and not merely an incident of his life, that he is in danger of being demoralized and undone—and against that danger every citizen should carefully guard who does not wish to fill his days with endless rancor and contention, for which he can not possibly obtain a sufficient and satisfactory reward.

Pulpit Preach. The pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, Winston, North Carolina, Rev. A. B. Lawrence, writes, that having suffered several years with inflammatory rheumatism, he was induced to try St. Jacobs Oil, the marvelous pain-cure, which cured him.

RETURNS FROM EVERYWHERE.

The New York Journal says "Mark Twain talks politics through his nose." No wonder. The kind of politics we have been treated to recently are enough to make any man snort.—Georgia Cracker.

A piece of sponge cake made by a Vassar College girl was presented to Grover Cleveland on Saturday. This is believed to have been the last Republican attempt to "kill him" with indigestion.—Philadelphia Call.

Dear Friend—"Why, how do you do, Annie! How young you are looking! I declare, nobody would guess you were a day over thirty-five." Annie, who only owns up to twenty-eight, is of course delighted.—Boston Transcript.

"I don't declare," observed Mrs. Grap, "I see by the paper that Cleveland's elected, and it says in Marther's paper that Blaine's elected. I wonder how they're going to manage it with two of them settin in the same chair."—Boston Post.

Mrs. B.—"What an unnatural crime! Mr. B.—"What's that?" Mrs. B.—"I see a New Hampshire man is charged with robbing the grave of his great grandmother." Mr. B.—"Indeed! What office was he running for?"—Philadelphia Call.

When a Chinese boy is one month old his head is shaved and a bladder is drawn over it, and as his head grows the bladder bursts and the quack sprouts forth. It would prove fatal to try this plan on an embryo American dude. His head would burst before the bladder.—Northtown Herald.

A negro stood at the window of the Democratic hall where they were counting the votes, last Tuesday night, and heard the clerks call "tally" as every fifth vote was called. After listening some time he went away remarking that he thought "Dat man Tally would be 'lected."—Atlanta Constitution.

Policeman—Mr. Grosgrain, I have some bad news for you. Your store was burglarized last night, and the thieves have carried off everything. Grosgrain—Is that so? Good gracious! but ain't I lucky? Policeman—Lucky? I don't understand. Grosgrain—Why, it was only yesterday that I marked all my goods down twenty-five per cent.—Boston Transcript.

"Yes, I guess Cleveland is elected," observed a bootblack Saturday forenoon, "but I ain't going to give up my bet yet." "You've lost a bet!" Yes, sir, I've had a quarter up these six weeks, but I'm going to hang on." "What for?" "In hopes the other boy may take sick and die before the Republicans give in."—Detroit Free Press.

Probably a Mistake. Last evening as Dr. Jos. E. Thomas, of Astoria, was passing in front of the Gilman House, he was approached by a burly Democrat who ordered him to doff his hat—a symbol of his devotion to the Plumed Knight. The doctor replied by drawing a revolver and striking the man in the abdomen with it, knocking him into the gutter. Several Democrats signified their willingness in terms forcible to take their fellow being's part, but finding the opposite side two to one against them they cooled down.—Portland News, 20.
