The Alden Besse arrived at Honolulu on the Beechline.

The Beechline takes 44,568 bus. wheat to Queenstown, worth $31,500.

There will be a meeting of the Blaine and Logan club this evening at seven o'clock.

Capt. Grounds of the Lillian will leave for Knappa with visitors to that place on Thursday at 4.

Livingston Lodge, No. 474, I. O. G. T., will give a coffee social at home in upper town, this evening.

Cushing Relief Corps No. 3, will have a meeting for nomination of officers, at their hall this afternoon at half-past two.

The ceremony of connecting the Oregon Short Line and the O. R. & N. Co.'s lines takes place at Huntington this afternoon.

There is a dreadful rumor in the air that Hawkins the bear is about to make another descent upon this unfortunate municipality.

On Thursday evening the Astoria Ladies' Coffee Club will have a ball at Liberty Hall. Tickets may be had at the book and drug stores.

There will be a Dime Sociable this evening under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of Grace church at the house of the Rev. M. D. Wilson.

An amateur dramatic club of more than ordinary talent will present a fine rendition of "All is Not Gold that Glitters," to an Astoria audience on December 10th.

A Seattle policeman has been fired from the force for trying a prisoner to a lamp post. They have an ordinance in Seattle against trying anything to lamp posts.

Judge Greene, of the territorial court at Seattle, has decided the Salvage law of the territory void, as the "law makes out indiscriminate reward regardless of services rendered."

The Oregon Pacific folks are thinking of having a grand bazaar at Yajimaun about Christmas. About twenty-five miles of track are still to be laid before the work is completed.

On to-morrow evening Jos. Cook will lecture at the Presbyterian church. This is an opportunity to hear one of the world's leading thinkers. Tickets to both lectures but $1.50. For sale at the drug and book stores and E. C. Holden's station rooms.

Dr. Kinney is talked of for collector of customs. Should any change be made the gentleman mentioned would most creditably fill the position, but concerning this matter of federal appointments, it may be said that all speculation regarding the matter can be premature, as several months must elapse before any possible change will occur.

The salvage case wherein an award of $64,000 was made to Capt. Flavel, Capt. Gray and others, has been appealed from Judge Deady's court to that of Lorenzo Sawyer. There is no telling now when a final decision will be arrived at. Should a similar mishap occur again of course every one within a hundred miles of the place would vie with each other in their haste to aid.

The Japanese newspapers are not quite educated up to their business. A few weeks ago a typhoon came along and just naturally love things in that section. One city was swept out of existence. The local paper in the next city disposed of the whole matter in one line, thusly: "Nagasaki was destroyed by a cyclone yesterday." It would be interesting to know what that editor's idea of sensational news is. Why, in this land of the free, if a frolicsome zephyr upsets a barn in Kansas, we get six columns of bare grams about it the next day.

An Olympia grocery advertiser in the Transcript as follows: "Knowing it to be for my best interests and believing it to be for the best interests of my customers, I shall hereafter sell for cash only. The following are a few of my reasons: First—Taking no risks I can afford to sell at a lower rate of profit. Second—I will not be at the expense of keeping books. Third I will not have to spend one week of every month trying to make collections. Fourth—I will have time to give more attention to my business and consequently give better satisfaction to my customers."

The Welcomes man was amused last Wednesday evening, at the Holton house by the aptness of a reporter in a colloquy between a Blaine man and a Democrat, wherein the former remarked: "It is pretty thin for you fellows to celebrate the election of Cleveland as a Democratic victory when you know you are indebted to St. John for it." "Well," answered the Democrat, "that puts me in mind of the old darkey who always prayed the Lord to give him bread. To have some fun with the old chap, a seagrace got a loaf and threw it at him through the window while on his knees. It excited the old fellow's fervor and he thanked the Lord in the loudest style. The seagrace laughed at him and told him that the Lord had nothing to do with giving him that loaf; that he ought to thank him for it. The darkey replied, "Yes, massa, de Lawd did send it to me, but he made de debil bring it!"

To Whom It May Concern. All persons having bills against the Cushing Post G. A. R. Cornet Band will confer a favor by presenting the same on or before Dec. 1st, 1884.

PROBABLE MURDER IN ALBINA.

Arrest of a Man Supposed to be Charles Binder in This City Last Evening.

Last Sunday morning a young fellow named Binder, known as "Cowboy Charley," got into a row in Albina with another young man named Hans Koch, which resulted in Binder's shooting Koch with, it is believed, fatal result.

At half-past six last evening Sheriff Ross received the following telegram: PORTLAND, Or., Nov. 23, 1884.

To the Sheriff of Clatsop County: A man named Charles Binder, alias Charley, the Cowboy, killed a man near here yesterday. He is a German, 22 years of age, five feet three inches high, stout built, dark hair, very small dark mustache; had on a mixed gray coat.

A man got on the Fleetwood at St. Johns yesterday, and went to Astoria. He was anxious to get to the territory. Use every endeavor to catch him and hold him at all hazards.

Thos. A. Jordan, Sheriff Multnomah County.

Ten minutes after the receipt of the above Sheriff Ross had arrested a man answering in every particular to the description telegraphed.

He told the sheriff that he had got on the Fleetwood at St. Johns on Sunday morning; that he had had some little trouble at Albina "about a board bill," but he didn't know anything about any murder.

He was locked up last night and the Multnomah sheriff notified. He will be taken to Portland as soon as an officer and warrant arrives.

A MISTAKE POINTED OUT.

ED. ASTORIAN:

Pardon one of your subscribers for calling your attention to an error in your editorial of the 23d inst, where it reads as follows:

"This states occupies an anomalous position, of all the thirty-eight states in the American Union Oregon is the only state that will not have a representative in congress in political accord with the Democratic executive. It is the first time in the history of the government that this has ever occurred and the circumstance is worthy of notice."

I wish to call your attention to the state of Minnesota which has, as is well known, two representatives in the United States senate, and at the recent election has chosen her five representatives in the lower house of congress:

Majority.

First district—White re-elected, Republican, 2,684

Second district—Wakelind, Rep., 10,577

Third district—Strait, re-elected, Republican, 1,771

Fourth district—Gibbilar, Rep., 4,161

Fifth district—Knut Nelson, re-elected, Republican, 8,972

This will show that Minnesota, a much larger state than ours, casting 158,218 votes at the late election, has at least an equal claim with us for the honor of sending a solid delegation to congress whose political views are not in accord with the Democratic executive.

It may be added that Minnesota for a number of years past has been in the habit of sending a solid Republican delegation to congress and was true to her traditions this time by giving the above majorities for members of congress—one of whom is a Scandinavian (Knut Nelson) by birth and a Republican by lineage.

PROBABILITIES AND POSSIBILITIES.

There were several of us talking over business affairs in Astoria the other night, and one man said that one of Villard's greatest mistakes was building the O. R. & N. branch to Baker City and neglecting to build the O. & C. branch from Forest Grove to Astoria.

A gentleman in the party promptly replied: "Oh, yes, but you are looking at the case through a pair of Astoria spectacles. You think if the road was built that the ocean steamers would stop here and the passengers go up to Portland by rail."

"No," replied the Astoria man, "I never once contemplated any such condition of affairs. That is asking a trifle too much just at present."

"But do you suppose there is going to be any traffic for a railroad when people can ship their products so much cheaper by steamboats down the Columbia river. You certainly could not bring wheat down here as cheap by rail as the big barges are carrying it in lightering out the ships which finish their loads here."

"Yes," replied the Astoria man, "but there are other considerations than wheat. The presence of a coal bed along the line of that road is almost a certainty; and, then, look at the timber that could be shipped from points over the road. It has got to be so that railroads are the cheapest of all logging appliances. Ten years ago a man that talked about building a railroad to haul logs to tide-water was set down as a fool, but now everybody needs them in the business."

"And do you mean to tell me," said the other, "that there would be any money in hauling logs by railway to tide-water?"

"I do, and what's more you will see that the very necessity for those logs is what will be eventually the means of building that road. Just look at the way George Weidner and Orday have been cutting logs into the river at Oak Point in the last two years. How could they have done it without a locomotive and train of cars? In my belief they laid down the logs to the mill company at Portland and then a former grain dealer, cheaper than they could have been procured any other way. Then, again, there is that little narrow gauge road running from Tenino into Olympia. It broke the men that built it, but General Sprague and Wingate got it and began hauling out logs to tide-water; and now that little narrow gauge road is a splendid piece of paying property. It has passenger and freight traffic enough to pay all expenses, and the logging work is just so much clear profit."

"So you think that this Astoria road would make its money by hauling logs to the river, eh?"

"Yes, and it would be one of its chief sources of revenue. The lumber trade of the Columbia river is just in its infancy. Heretofore all the foreign cargoes have been shipped from Puget sound or Burard inlet, but the Columbia river timber trade is beginning to get on its feet, and you are beginning to find it out abroad. I should never be surprised, if salmon stays at present figures, to see one-half the canneries along these wharves taken out and replaced by sawmills."

"Do you think it would be a good thing for the country?" asked the reporter.

"It would be better," replied the gentleman, "for several reasons. In the first place it would open up a great deal of the grazing land which the timber is cut off. Secondly, it would employ white labor almost exclusively, while canneries employ large numbers of Chinese. And lastly, it would bring money to Astoria that now goes to Seattle."

The increase of this trade in the past two years is almost incredible. Two years ago the Simpson barkentines, from Knappaon, carried out all the lumber that was exported from the river, and none of their cargoes went foreign. Now you see Weidner has loaded three or four cargoes for Panama, at Portland, and Berry has loaded one or two cargoes here for Montevideo—the first lumber ever shipped from a Puget port to the Atlantic ocean, at least the first that I know of. And if I am not badly mistaken, this trade will grow greater before it will grow less. Now, as I said before, they will have to build railroads to get out of the logs. It is not only the most rapid way of removing large fallen timber, but it is a good deal the cheapest in the long run. I am not quite fifty years old yet, but I do not despair of seeing a railroad running into Astoria before I die. If there is not coal enough in the Nehalem valley to make it pay, there is timber enough to be gotten out, and the mills must have logs. They are cut away so along the river banks and so much has been destroyed by fire that unless some means is devised of getting open the back country, the mills will be apt to run short. But that will all regulate itself, and I am firm in the belief that Astoria will yet become a big lumbering town." —Tom Merry in Sunday Oregonian.

My father, says Mr. W. M. Harrison, proprietor of the Waterloo, Iowa, Dye Works, tried a great many remedies for rheumatism, without effect and finally tried St. Jacobs Oil, the great pain-cure, and was cured.

"Barly Enough for the Officers"

The case now before the courts between Ben and Joe Holladay for property in Portland and vicinity—wherein Ben sues for the reconveyance of property alleged to have been only mortgaged although absolute in terms—has assumed a triangular form of contest, a third party coming in against both brothers on the ground that the property was conveyed to Joe in fraud of Ben's judgment as creditor in the Elliott case. In the language of Sir Lucius O'Rigger, "It's a very pretty quarrel as it stands, any explanation would spoil it." About the time this triple cause pays its way through the courts, receiver, etc., the residue will be somewhat like Joe Meek's, a first and only admiralty case while he was United States marshal of Oregon territory. In 1848 Joe went overland to Washington as an important courier on behalf of the government, and Mr. Polk appointed him the first U. S. marshal. A ship was libeled in admiralty down at Astoria, where Joe served the process. The case hung fire for some time in the courts but the libellant obtained judgment, and the vessel was disposed of at auction, sale for ten thousand dollars. The representative of the libellant called upon Joe for settlement, when he coolly made known there was nothing coming above costs—to use his own words, "That's barly enough for the officers." After a few terms of court, playing with demurrers, answers, reports of receivers, etc., Joe's reply will be applicable to the Holladay outcome—Welcome.
