The total number of banks still in op-eration organized under the act of June s. 1864, and the provisions of the revised statutes, which will terminate unless hereafter removed during the years previous to 1930, is 1488, with a capital of $321.481,195, and a circulation of $194, 145.395. The banks had, November 1, 1884, $155.694,499 in 3 per cent, bonds, payable at the pleasure of the government, of which $9,285,290 had been called for cavenett of interest ceasing November 1. or payment of interest censing Novem-er I, 1881. If these bonds are not re-loced by others bearing interest there ber f. D881. If these bonds are not replaced by others bearing interest there will be an immediate reduction in the circulation 39 per cent. of their amount. On November I there were $194,193,509 in 5 per cent. bonds, payable at the pleasure of the government. These bonds will probably be paid within the next two years, even if considerable changes are made in the tariff, and from 1887 to 1891, when $750,009,300 of 4½ per cents mature, there will be no bonds which the government can call in for redemption. No doubt the accumulation of surplus revenue, if it continues to accume at the present rate during the four years between 1887 and 1891, together with the revenues of 1892, will be more than sufficient to pay off the 4½ per cents; and from 1892 and 1896 it will be impossible for the government to use any of its surfor the government to use any of its sar-plus revenues for the payment of its bonds, except at the option of their hold-ers. It is apparent that the government cannot accumulate and hold its surplus revenues, even during the short period from 1887 to 1893, without great disturb. from 1887 to 1892, without great disturb-ance to the business interests of the coun-try; and much loss can it do so during the longer period from 1832 to 1937.

the comptroller is of the opinion it is perfectly safe, and will r flord great beneit to the public to permit an issue by national banks of circulation to the extent of 100 per cent. of the par vulue of bonds deposited, instead of 30 per cent. Even admitting that bonds representing the public debt when funded at lower rates might, at a time in the future, be below par in the market, the government would be forced to redeem the notes of insolvent national banks, and always have the right to cancel bonds on the deposit securing the same, and thus extinguish an amount of its debt canal dollar for dollar to the it to the public to permit an issue by na- C. same, and thus extinguish an amount of its debt equal dollar for dollar to the notes redeemed.

It is further submitted that the profit on circulation may be increased to a point which will induce banks to keep up their circulation to the maximum, and stop contracting their circulation, which is now occurring, by repealing the law taxing such circulation at the rate of one-half of 1 per cent. semi-annually. The expenses keeping up the national banking system by the government are at present troller wishes to have it distinctly understood that he is not in favor of any measure which will cause inflation. He is of the opinion that the present aggregate of paper circulation, made up of legal tender and national bank notes, and gold and silver certificates, is ample for all needs of business. He believes, however, that a sudden contraction of for all needs of business. He believes, however, that a sudden contraction of the national circulation, which, without appropriate legislation, is imminent, will seriously endbarrass the business of the country, and that if this contraction is permitted to go on it may result in the entire discontinuance of the issue of notes by national banks. He believes that this form of currency, which can be increased or diminished in accordance with the natural laws which control business, should be continued, in preference to any other now permitted by law.

A SUGHESTION.

It appears, therefore, that the foregoing consideration should be given due weight in any plan for funding 4 per cent, bonds maturing in 1907, and the comptroller therefore suggests that the principal difficulties of the situation may perhaps be obviated as well as a reduction of interest effected, by funding these bonds into others, which shall mature in a proportionate amount, at certain fixed intervals. Thus $735,900,000 in 4 per cents might be funded into an equal amount of
