John Whipple, was the speaker and was girding at Van Buren, who, as it seems, was the author—not Jackson—of the ugly axiom in American politics, that the spoils belonged to the victors. This was a damnable doctrine to honest John, who fought it with a rare elegeneracy in his speech with a rare eloquence in his speech, Dewey says, and closed with these

There sleep now within the sound of my voice, the bones of a man who once stood fast in the revolutionary once stood fast in the revolutionary battles for his country. In one of these battles he told me when the little American force was ill-armed, ill-clad and with bleeding feet was drawn up in front of the disciplined troops of England, Gen. Washington passed along the lines. And when he came before us he stopped and said: 'I place great confidence in this Rhode Island regiment;' and when I heard that I clasped my musket to my breast and said, 'dawn'em, let 'em come on!' Gentlemen, the immortal chieftain is looking down on us now, and he says, 'Gentlemen, on us now, and he says, 'Gentlemen,
I place great confidence in this Rhode Island regiment!"
I think John Whipple held the secret in his heart of dramatic force and fire.—Robt, Collyer.

Log Salvage.

In a recent case tried before Judge Greene of Seattle, says the Grays Harbor News, wherein the plaintiff was the owner of a boom of logs held by the defendant, the latter claiming one fourth of their value as salvage one-fourth of their value as salvage under the provisions of the code, it was held that the act in question was void, as it proposed, by its mere flat to take the property of one person and assign it to another. The legislature can set a premium on gallant services for rescuing estray logs or doing other acts of salvage within this territory. It can reward merit in its discretion; but it cennot, regardless of the value of services rendered, mete out an indiscriminate reward to every doer of such service and comevery doer of such service and com-pel the owner to pay that reward. This statute attempts to do an act of that sort, and is, therefore, void. The judge declared incidentally that the law may be construed to apply to the salvage of loose logs, though not to those protected by a boom.

His Success

Financially and socially are largely due to his excellent health. If his system were clogged and feverish, no doubt he would fail as so many others do. But why not enjoy good health when one can please the palate at the same time? Syrup of Figs is not only pleasant to the taste, it also cleanses the system thoroughly, yet painlessly; it is harmless in its nature, and strengthens the organs on which it acts so that regular haoits may be formed, and the sufferer permanently restored to health and happiness.
