"One day of last week," said an Albany shoe dealer, "when I was alone in my store, a well-dressed stranger entered. He were a white dicer' (as the boys call it), which be laid carefully on a counter near the door. Then he asked me for a pair of my very best custom made face shoes. A pair was soon placed at the store and looked up in time to see a small boy making away with the stranger's hat. 'Look your hat.' I shouted; 'after him, quick.' The stranger seemed paralyzed for a moment, but then galloped out of the store in pursuit. That's all," said the shoe dealer finally. "The new shoes went out with the man, and I have seen neither since. When he tried on the shoes he stamped his feet very naturally, and I suppose that was a signal for his confederate."
