ASTORIA, OREGON:

SATURDAY DECFMBER 13 184 BLAINE AND CONKLING.

A Washington special relates an interview with Blaine by a gentleman who holds a high position at the capital, a stanch Republican and a warm friend of the defeated candidate. Blaine confesses frankly that his defeat was Conkling's victory, and gave the following narrative: "The coldness," Blaine said, "between Mr. Conkling and myself is of long standing, dating back to the time we both were in the house of representatives. He has opposed my political advancement ever since that time. Of course, I retaliated, but more in a defensive way than other wise, until Mr. Conkling assumed an antagonistic position toward the late President Garfield, when I took the offensive and opposed Mr. Conkling's return to the senate after he had resigned his seat. It is a mistake to say that Garfield opposed Mr. Conkling's return. He was entirely careless concerning the matter. He said that he cared nothing for the annoyance that that gentleman might attempt against his administration. Garfield intended that his administration should be such as to merit the approval of the country and he did not believe that Conkling or any other one man could successfully oppose it. But I could not bring myself to look upon the matter in that light, and brought to bear what opposition I could to Conkling's return to the senate. As he had opposed my political advancement, I had a perfect right to retaliate in kind. He was defeated and thus matters stood until the approach of the national convention, when I was put in the field for the nomination by my friends. I had doubts as to the propriety of my taking the position with so powerful an opponent at large. But I was assured that Mr. Conkling had turned his back on politics; that he would take no part in the canvass for either the nomination or the election. In addition to this I was visited by committees and written to from all sections of the country, urging me to consent to the use of my name before the convention. I finally yielded. I had taken pains to learn Mr. Conkling's feelings. At first he was reticent, saying he was out of politics. Later he said he hoped the convention would nominate a man. This was interpreted to me that he preferred me to A-thur. I felt some relief and was nominated. The October result in Ohio elated us. I desired to visit New York, when the announcement was made that Mr. Conkling would take the stump against me. If I would stay out of New York he would make no speeches. He said he would submit the question to the people without argument, but if I wanted to argue he would meet me. I abided the decision of my friends not to bring any issue in of this kind in the pature of a personal quarrel. This contented Mr. Conkling, and he remained out of politics. The question went to the Republicans of New York, as M: Conkling wanted it to and he won. He has had his revenge. I don't say I kept him out of the senate, but I did all I could to do so. and he has prevented my election to the presidency. It was Mr. Conkling alone who could have given New York state to me and he would not. Perhap: I could have returned him to the senate, but I would not. But he has beaten me three times to my once beating him. He prevented my noinination in 1876 and 1890, and defeated
