The frosty mornings and evenings give the boys and girls a fine opportunity to slide down hill on their sleds. Some of the hillside residents are talking of organizing a sled brigade, as it appears to be the only safe way in this slippery weather of coming down to the business part of the city. Whenever it shall be decided who shall pull the sleds up the hill the brigade will be organized.

The Emma Hume.

At a meeting of the Astoria and Coast Transportation company yesterday afternoon the new steamer Emma Hume was turned over to Jas. Lotan representing the Willamette Iron works, with the understanding that she was to be sold for cash to the highest bidder, providing that $25,000 could be realized from the sale. The vessel has cost $31,000 and is considered to be well worth her cost price. She will make a trial trip to the cape and back at ten o'clock this morning, and then goes to Portland where she will probably be sold.

THE GALL OF A PITCHER.

It is characteristic of humanity to admire in others what we lack in ourselves. For this reason THE ASTORIAN local admires cheek, that useful quality, which is to the human what the buffer is to the railway car; and which is always to us a cause of sincere admiration. Whether it be the man that stops one on the street to tell him that he'll pay that two years' subscription as soon as his wife has had an expected baby, and incidentally asks a loan of five dollars, pending that interesting event; or the eastern idiot who writes asking for a description of our soil, climate, resources and people with our opinion on the advisability of his immigrating, (and forgets to inclose a stamp), the exhibition of cheek always elicits our unbounded admiration.

But sometimes the thing seems to be a little overdone. There is a superlative degree of cheek which may run into gall, and when a man manifests gall it always changes our admiration to distrust. When the cruel fact is borne in upon our shrinking, sensitive soul that the alleged human is trying to gouge or is crowding the condescension afforded to the ordinary beat who is trying to get something for nothing, then is the golden bowl broken and the silver cord loosed, or words to that effect.

For this reason we enter a feeble protest against the crowding of the fire-gilt, Damascus blade eastern man. In his eagerness for business he is apt to disregard the common amenities of civilized life and try to gouge, steal, lie and generally swindle.

Every day brings painful proof of eastern gall. Before us lies a pretty circular from Jas. R. Pitcher, whose address is 339 and 341 Broadway, New York, and who is the alleged secretary of the United States mutual accident association. Just what a mutual accident is, is something we don't know; anyhow, that is what he says he is.

Confidentially this little Pitcher informs us that if THE ASTORIAN will advertise the business he will send the managing editor an accident insurance policy for $5,000. This is a dazzling offer. To realize that should we fall a martyr to duty our heirs, executors and administrators would be ahead of the game just $5,000, is indeed inspiriting. It invests the future with a rosy glow and tends to drive dull care away. Nor is this all. Should we become incapacitated for the pursuit of fleeting items, there awaits us (providing we are the possessors of that policy) the sum of $25 a week, a sum that far transcends our wildest dreams of boundless wealth.

But there is a blot on the landscape, a block in the way, a blighting canker concealed in the fair fruit. To fully possess all the privileges of the insurance policy we must pay one dollar per month. So that summing the whole thing up if we drop into that Pitcher we must advertise his business, pay assessments as long as we live and die if we want a dividend. An ordinary faro game offers superior inducements, because there we could watch the dealer and keep an eye on the man that kept cases.

An additional circular evidently inclosed by mistake, and intended solely for the outside public gives Pitcher dead away. It seems anyone, be he bootblack, bonanza king, salmon canner, reporter or city official can get the same layout exactly by the payment of the same sum mentioned in the confidential circular—$1 per month. So that all this little scheme is simply an effort to get advertising done for nothing. Well, his gall is successful. Pitcher gets this advertisement for nothing; we don't charge him a cent, and he needn't send any mutual accident either, but our advice to readers of THE ASTORIAN is to send no money to the United States mutual accident association of New York, for if you do, you will never hear from it again.

A MANIFEST ERROR.

The appropriation of $150,000 for the breakwater at Port Orford is to be utilized. Work is to be commenced on it next spring under the superintendence of Captain Charles H. Powell of the United States engineer corps. When this is finished, with the railroad connecting Port Orford with Roseburg, which is to be commenced at the same time, the Columbia river will be deprived of her shipping trade, as the deep water ships will all go to Port Orford.—S. F. Chronicle, 9th.

"About this time look out for rough weather," say the almanacs, and about this time look out for such flyers as the above. THE ASTORIAN is glad to know that the breakwater at Port Orford is to be completed. California's iron bound coast sadly needs appropriations, and in common with every dweller on the coast we are pleased to learn that the terrors of ocean navigation will be somewhat mitigated.

But when the Chronicle starts in talking about what will happen on the Columbia river, and about "deep water ships," it starts on a topic about which it knows nothing and shows its ignorance. Possibly the wish is father to the thought, in the Chronicle's false statement.

EVADING THE TARIFF.

An Important Discovery by the American Tin-Plate Association.

The American Tin-plate Association, of which John Jarrett is the general agent, has discovered a direct evasion of the sections of the tariff law regulating the duty on tin plate. Last summer the appraiser's department of the Philadelphia custom house discovered that large tin sheets were being entered as tin plates. The chief examiner ruled that they were tinned sheets and should be entered at the rate of section 151 of the tariff index "new," which provides the rates for plates and sheet-iron. This rate on sheets not thinner than No. 20 wire gauge is 1.1 cents per pound; thinner than No. 20 and not thinner than No 25, 1.2 cents per pound; thinner than No. 25 and not thinner than No. 29, 1.5 cents per pound. It is provided that on all such iron and steel sheets or plates, when galvanized or coated with zinc or spelter or other metals or any alloy of these metals, the duty shall be ⅔ of a cent per pound additional. This ruling was affirmed by the treasury department on July 14th last, and also at a subsequent date. Since that time these tinned sheets have not been imported through the custom house of Philadelphia, but have been coming in steadily through the custom houses of New York and Boston as tin plates. Mr. Jarrett claims that tinned sheets are an essentially different article from tin plates. Tinned sheets, he says, are rolled out on what is known as sheet mill; while tin plates, terne plate and taggers iron are rolled out on what is known as a tin mill, hence they are different even in the process of manufacture. Tinned sheets are generally handled in the trade in precisely the same manner as galvanized sheets, calamined sheets and sheet-iron. That is, it is bought and sold by the pound, and according to gauge. Tin-plates and terne-plates are bought and sold by the box, ranging in sizes from 14x10 to 28x20 and 24x24 inches. Plates, when boxed, are known by their brand-marks, such as "IC," "IX," "IXX," etc. These brand-marks are intended to designate the weight of the plates in the box. Thus, a box marked "IC," 14x20, and containing 112 sheets, would weigh 108 pounds. A box marked "1X, 14x20," and containing 112 sheets would weigh 136 pounds, or 28 pounds more than IC. Each additional cross represents an additional weight of 21 pounds to the box. The price of tin plates is at so much per box. If IC cost $5 IX would then cost $6.50, and each additional "X" $1.50. Tin plates were run in longer sizes than 14x24, while these tinned sheets are from 30x60 to 40x112 inches, or precisely the same size as galvanized and all other sheet-iron. The weights given are contained in a full statement of the case which Mr. Jarrett is preparing for transmission to the treasury department. He says that on every pound of tinned sheets admitted as tin plates the government lost from four-fifths of a cent to 1¼ cents, according to the quality of the article imported. The aggregate loss on this account Mr. Jarrett declines to estimate, but says it is already equal to thousands of dollars per annum, and was growing at an alarming rate. The tinned sheets are used in the manufacture of milk cans, and have almost entirely taken the place of sheet-iron in the manufacture of gas-meters and similar articles. Importers have been very quick to grasp the idea, and the shipments each week are larger than those of the week previous. Mr. Jarrett has called the attention of the appraisers at New York and Boston to the decision in the Philadelphia case, but no copy of the ruling of the department has been received by them, and they consequently know nothing about it. Mr. Jarrett's statement, now in course of preparation, is intended to bring the matter before the secretary of the treasury so clearly that the officers of all ports of entry will be instructed to stop the fraud.

Fresh Salmon for England.

This city has hardly begun to feel the good effects of extended railroad communication, but every day the benefits conferred by them are being more and more appreciated. Yesterday the Pacific Express Company shipped two boxes of fresh salmon, 150 pounds to the box, to New Orleans, the same will arrive there in five days. The people of the Crescent city will doubtless appreciate, like the rest of the world, the flavor of Columbia river salmon. Another shipment of two large boxes of salmon was made to London, England, by the Pacific Express, via the Short Line. The fish are consigned to Groves & Co., wholesale fish mongers, and willl go to their destination across the Atlantic in fifteen days from the time they left here. The freight charges on this shipment will be but eighteen cents per pound, which is very cheap considering the distance carried.—News, 12.

VIEWS ON GENERAL BUSINESS.

BY AN OLD FOGY.

The Major called my attention to a hand bill he received yesterday; which was being lavishly distributed and posted all over town. The document read as follows:

THE ALMIGHTY DOLLAR
BOOSTS THE PLANET.
JABEZ BRADSHAW'S
Great One Price Cash Store no longer an experiment, but an Immense Success!

Our goods are all bought for Spot Cash direct, and our iron rule to sell only for cash on the nail has made our triumph an absolute certainty and enables us to place before our patrons a stock that will bury competition, and burn in lasting characters upon our banner that tremendous word—

SUCCESS!

With the musical jingle of the Almighty and Everlasting Dollar in our pocket, we go into the Frisco market, and with the Solid Build get bargains that men who buy on credit could never look at. There is a sure road to success: It is the Broad Gauge built upon the solid basis of Cash, and run by close application and unflinching resolution under the Iron Rule of Money Down, and the very best goods at the lowest possible price.

WE HAVE COME TO STAY,

And cordially invite one and all to come and examine our Sledge Hammer Prices. Long credit is a delusion. Pay day comes to every honest man. No matter how liberal the indulgence, the day comes when grim necessity can no longer be staved off. The man who pays spot cash is a Monarch compared with he who writhes in the debt defiance of King Credit. Prompt pay saves sleepless nights, spares struggles and humiliation we have nailed our flag to the mast with our motto—

ONE PRICE CASH DOWN

Engraved upon it. With Brains, Backbone and Bullion, we will give prices that puzzle who buy and sell on tick never dreamed of. With Ambition, Resolution, Integrity, Application, and the

ETERNAL, EVERLASTING, ALMIGHTY DOLLAR,

There is no such word as fail.

After I had read it carefully the Major asked me what I thought of it.

"It means war," I replied, "between the time-honored system of long time and high prices, and cash, quick sales and small profits. Which will win in the end remains to be seen. You, Major, as an old resident of these parts, accustomed for years to buy mighty liberal, and taking your own time to pay, would find it hard to plank down the cash every time, even if you did get your truck 10 per cent cheaper.

"Well, Ass Stackpole," replies Blizzard, "I haint so blamed sartin about that. Mariar and I were figgerin' on that t'other day—Mariar, you know, in spite of anything I can do, will kite round to Bradshaw's—and she asked me to get her a ham. I forgot it and she went out mad, and to make things squar' I kim over here and got the hog meat; but when I toted it home I found her there afore me with another ham, and a blamed sight better one, too, than yourn. She paid 18 cents a pound cash for hern, four cents a pound less'n what you charged. This sot us to considerin of the situashun. We found by comparin' your figgers with Bradshaw's that we were payin' you ten per cent. more for everything we got, besides a liber'l shave for the 'commodashun."

"Well, Major," I replied, "that's all right. I don't charge you any more in proportion to what I pay for goods than Bradshaw does. I don't tax you no more interest on the time bills than the jobber does me."

"I knows that, Ass," he said, "I knows that; but if I takes the notion into my head that by buyin' for cash I kin save two or three hund'ed dollars a year, you bet I'm a goin' to buckle on to the bullion. Sposin' I've got a parcel of wheat, now I aint goin' to hold on to it for a rise of mebbe five per cent., while I'm payin' out fully 13 per cent. extry on every dollar's worth of truck I buy and on every dollar I owe. Now take a squar' look at the situashun. You buy on long time and often let yer accounts run over; you pay p'raps 8 or 9 per cent. interest on bills overdue, and a heap more for everything you buy than wor you to plank down the tin every time. Whereas, wor you a cash or short time buyer you wouldn't care a dern for any body, and could trade wherever you liked, besides gettin' a likely discount on all yer bills. I've been figurin' a heap on this 'ere credit questshun lately. Mariar has opened my eyes to the advantages of a new deal all around, not only to save coin, but to keep up with the times. My old noshuns of frien'ship whar bizness is concerned, has gone with my hair and paird. Since I've changed my pussonal style my ideas have underwent a reform. I'm a payin' all my debts. I'll stick to you, Ass, as long as you do as well by Mariar as Bradshaw does. Now's yer chance to prod up yer slow pay customers. Set me up afore 'em as a shinin' example of reform. Strike into the new channel that is bound to drift every bizness man on the coast as takes it to prosperity. Close up all yer old accounts, and when you go down to the bay with plenty of money in yer pocket you'll find a dern sight more favor among yer libr'l old fren's than you ever had before."—Grocer and Country Merchant.
