WHERE NOT TO START A PAPER. In his letter to the amateur journalists, Robert J. Burdette offers some sage advice regarding the starting of newspapers. Says he: If you start a paper in a town where nobody wants a paper; Or where there are already five papers in a two-paper town; Or, if a long-primer man tries to start a non-regular paper; Or, if he try to run an eight-column paper on a two-column basis; Or, if he start a paper because he has failed at everything else; Then, indeed, hath he bitten off more than he can masticate, and his paper beloved by the gods, will die young and fresh.

THE Fish Auctioneer in Holland. One of the sights of Holland to be seen by the stranger is the method of handling fish. As soon as a boatman reaches port with a load of fish the fact is announced by the sounding of a long paper because he makes purchases repair to the beach, where the fish are piled up in little heaps. The owner then proceeds to auction them off. Instead of letting the purchaser do the bidding, as is done in this country, he does it himself. He sings out a price at which he will sell the lot. If no one takes it he lowers his asking price till within what the purchasers are willing to pay. In answer to the same custom, the fish are brought alongside the docks in the boats, are then hoisted upon the wharf in large wicker baskets, having open work sides, so that the fish can be seen by the purchasers. -The Fish Journal.
