HOW ANDREW JOHNSON BECAME DRUNK.

Perhaps the most disgraceful scene in our history as a republic was the day of Lincoln's second inauguration, when Andrew Johnson, the vice-president elect, made a maudlin drunken speech before the leading men of this nation and the representatives of nearly every foreign nation of prominence. An old senator told me to-night how this came to be. Said he: "Andrew Johnson was accustomed to drinking, but he seldom took more than he could conveniently and sensibly carry. While governor of Tennessee he used to keep a bottle of whisky in a covered washstand in his office, and I have taken several drinks with him there. He would raise the cover, take a drink and offer one to me. Still this was a common custom in the south, and Johnson was not looked upon as a drinking man in Tennessee. I do not think he often took more than enough for himself in Washington. As to his drunkenness at his inauguration to which Sumner so sarcastically alluded on the senate floor, John W. Forney told me how it occurred. Forney was clerk of the senate at the time. He said Johnson had been drinking the night before the inauguration with a lot of friends at the Metropolitan hotel, and as usual in such cases he arose the next morning with a bad taste in his mouth and no appetite. The result was that he started up to the capitol without breakfast, and when he got there he was very weak and he looked wan and haggard. He came into the senate and asked Mr. Forney if he could get him a drink of whisky. Forney replied yes, and went and brought in a bottle of old Kentucky bourbon. Johnson took this and poured a goblet half full, while Forney's eyes grew large in surprise as he gulped it down. This alone would have been enough to have made an ordinary man drunk, but it was not enough for Vice President Johnson. He filled the glass half full again and threw it in upon his empty stomach. He then walked off across the room, and he only staggered a little as he took his place beside President Lincoln in front of the assembly of cabinet secretaries, foreign ministers, and others. When it came time to take his oath and the book was handed him to kiss, he waved it aside with his hand and began to make a speech. What he said was never reported in the papers, but it must have been very funny. He took each of the secretaries to task and gave them instructions. He addressed the foreign ministers, and though Forney tried to pull him down by holding his coat-tails behind, he would not stop, but went on. President Lincoln was, as were all the Americans present, grieved by the occurrence, and Abe Lincoln said: 'I hope this will prove a lesson to Andy.' - Ex.

BETTER MAIL FACILITIES NEEDED.

The recent stormy weather and flood demonstrate the fact that a daily mail from Montesano to Olympia is a perfect farce during the winter. It has been over a month since the mail has come regularly over that route, and the majority of the paper mail that has come that way has been in bad condition. While passenger travel has been almost entirely suspended. You ask, How can this be remedied? Easy enough. Get the route established through to Astoria. The plan to work on is for this county to build a good road from Laidlaw's wharf to the ocean beach, then the transportation company will build a wharf at North Cove. From there go direct across Shortwater bay to Oysterville, leaving the Willapa and Bay Center districts to be served by another route. Then by having a through sack for Gray's Harbor and a postal clerk on the mail boat on this harbor the trip could be made from Montesano to Astoria in one day nine months in the year, while from the middle of November to the middle of February the boat on this end of the route would probably have to start from Hognium. With this revision in the present route we would not only have a comfortable line to travel over, but there need not be more than a day or two's delay in our mails, and this would not occur more than once a year. Let the citizens of this county, of Pacific county and the citizens of Astoria take hold of this matter, let the Vidette, the Pacific Journal and THE ASTORIAN agitate this question and by another winter we will have uninterrupted mail connections with the outside world, there will be no necessity for our steamers to lay up for lack of business. We do not wish to interfere with the route from Montesano to Olympia; but there is a large scope of country from Montesano to Astoria that sorely needs better mail facilities, and now is the time to strike for them. - Gray's Harbor News.

WHAT DOES IT PROVE?

EDITOR ASTORIAN:

Believing that you are willing to give a hearing to both sides of any question, if to either, I respectfully ask you to publish the following extracts from the Lewiston, Me, Weekly Journal of Jan. 2d, 1885:

"MAINE'S CRIMINALS AND CRIMINAL LAW.

The publication of the annual report of Attorney General Cleaves of Maine, will renew call public attention to the question of capital punishment, to issues of taxation and to other vital public interests. It seems that although there have been thirteen cases of homicide in the Maine courts in 1884, that of all sorts of criminal practices we have had but one to each 450 of population. In the 1445 criminal prosecutions in all the state since the last New Year's day, there are fourteen sorts of crime - and of these more than one-half or 818, have been for the violation of the liquor law - offenses which in most of the states do not count at all. Of the other offenses there has been but one prosecution to every thousand population."

"The attorney general regards the detective suits set in operation early in the year 1884 against druggists and manufacturers for neglect to conform to the laws touching each of these professions, as showing the necessity of so amending these laws that fines imposed shall enure to the state or county and that prosecutions be left to the county attorney."

"Also the following from the same journal of Dec. 26, 1884. The reader will bear in mind that in Maine only druggists and manufacturers can get a license to sell intoxicating liquors:

"LIQUOR DEALERS IN THE UNION.

The report of the commissioner of internal revenue for the fiscal year shows that 190,068 liquor dealers were taxed in the United States, or one to 280 inhabitants by the census of 1880. The following showing the liquor dealers in specimen states in the various parts of the Union, with the dram shop legislation in each state, will be of interest:

State	No. Dealers	Legislation
Maine	974	700 General Prohibition
Vermont	2,099	257 Prohibition
Massachusetts	7,284	214 Two-Thirds License
Rhode Island	1,363	201 License
Connecticut	7,224	Two-Thirds License
New York	20,705	105 Mainly License
New Jersey	12,524	250 Mainly License
Ohio	12,524	250 Mainly License
Illinois	1,515	200 High License
Missouri	6,123	500 One-Third Prohibition
Wisconsin	2,389	200 Prohibition
Kansas	1,348	511 Prohibition
W. Virginia	2,154	716 Yearly All Co's Prohibit
Louisiana	4,285	190 All License
Delaware	1,014	214 All License
California	9,437	50 All License

Maine has a greater number of seaports and seafaring people than any other state in the Union, yet at the last election, in November 1884, she voted, two to one, for a prohibition amendment to her constitution.

IVER E. PARKER.

R. S. Green of Wisconsin, and father of Renben Green, who was drowned in the Willapa river some three weeks ago, arrived at this place last Tuesday on a visit to the country and his son. He did not hear of the sad news of his son's death until he arrived in Oysterville, and was greatly surprised and sorrowed when it was told to him. He was on board the snow-bound train this side of the Dalles, and there got his toes frozen so severely that when he arrived here they were in a horrible condition, and it will be necessary to amputate the large toe and also the second toe on one foot in order to save his foot. Before he left home in Wisconsin he says the thermometer had got as low as 60 degrees below zero. Mr. Green was accompanied by his son-in-law, S. J. Stringer. - Pacific Journal.

When vessels or timber sink to great depths in the ocean the pressure is so great that the water is forced into the pores, and the wood becomes too heavy to rise again. Even when a ship is broken up the detached portions sink like lead. It is this pressure that makes it impossible for divers to descend to any great depths.

A Clean Sweep.

There was a great commotion the other night at a communist meeting, when an excited orator said, "all existing social institutions must be destroyed, wiped out, and swept away." Had he remarked that rheumatism, dyspepsia, and debility must be cleared out and swept away, and that Brown's Iron Bitters would do the cleaning and sweeping, he would have been loudly applauded. Brown's Iron Bitters made a clean sweep of the dyspepsia, nervousness, and sleeplessness of Mr. Geo. P. Miller, of Hamilton, Texas.
