The Ladies Guild of Grace church will hold their regular meeting to-day at 2:30 p. m.

The East Portland city council has levied a city tax of six mills for the current year.

About twenty feet of the Clatsop mill was blown off by the wind at an early hour yesterday morning.

The brilliant execution of the Misses Schlessel on the piano at the Astorian hall last evening elicited a merited encore.

A resolution providing for a prohibition amendment to the constitution passed the house last Monday by a vote of 39 to 19.

It is said that there are nine men in the legislature who did not travel to Salem on a railroad pass. Nine is a good many.

Lotan & Henderson, of the Willamette Iron Works, have sold their interest in the Coast d'Alene steamboat line for $20,000.

The funeral of the late Mr. Conrad Boelling took place from Grace church at two o'clock yesterday afternoon and despite the storm was largely attended.

H. A. B. Williams, the agent of the Katie Putnam comedy company, now playing in Portland, writes that that talented little lady will be in Astoria next week.

John T. Gibson, an Astorian employee, received a novelty from his parent state of Maine yesterday in the shape of blotters made of spruce and poplar. The poplar fiber makes an excellent pad.

Prof. A. L. Francis, the well known tuner, arrived here last evening and will be found at the Occident hotel for the next two weeks. All orders for tuning or repairing will receive prompt attention.

The Portsmouth has finished loading. She has 227 bbls flour, 7,730 cases wheat and 11,890 cases of other goods. The Wm. D. Seed will finish to-day. The Janet McNeil is discharging her cargo in fine condition.

The ladies of the Congregational church will hold a social Friday evening, at the residence of Mrs. Capt. L. Stevens. A musical programme will be rendered and a pleasant time is assured all who attend.

The Welcome thinks that if the Republicans at Salem don't look out the Democrats will buy eight Republican legislators, with promises of office, and elect one of their party to the senate. That was the programme three weeks ago; but it isn't now.

Deputy Sheriff Moffitt returned yesterday from a trip to Clatsop. While there he attended two dances and also a debate on the question, "Which has the most influence over man—woman or money?" It was decided by a large majority that woman had, such decision being eminently correct.

The fine play of "Michael Strogoff" was presented to an appreciative audience last evening. The play is essentially a spectacular one, and while the troupe did it as full justice as the circumstances would permit, it was evident that the lack of scenic effects and stage accessories marred the realistic rendition. Were the company to remain another night and play "Under the Gaslight," they would have a crowd. The troupe leaves for the Sound this morning.

What promises to be a lively suit comes up in the justice court to-morrow. It seems that certain parties at Clifton being refused credit for beer, undertook to clean out the saloon; that in the cleaning out they were roughly handled; that upon being arrested they had the party of the first part arrested for selling liquor without a license. Just what this has to do with Astoria is not quite clear. Anyhow, the case comes up to-day, when no doubt outraged justice will be vindicated.

An employee of the Bible society who has been distributing the scriptures in Portland, says that while calling on various families in that city he found 78 Roman Catholic families, 332 Methodist Episcopal, 265 Protestant Episcopal, 150 Lutheran, 135 Hebrew and Jewish, 123 Congregational, 121 Baptist, 82 Unitarian, 69 families of the Christian church, 3 families of the Evangelical Association, 15 German Reformed and 9 United Brethren, 9 Adventists, Friends or Quakers 5, Church of Sea and Land, 3 also 1 Mormon and 1 Buddhist.

Seth Green, the veteran fish culturist of the United States, to whom the people are largely indebted as a pioneer in one of the economic industries of the country, has concluded to place his practical experience in fish hatching and fish raising, covering over a quarter of a century, at the disposal of all who feel an interest therein. With this object in view, he has become the editor of the Fish Culture Department of the American Angler of New York, and in that capacity will be pleased to respond editorially to all queries germane to the subject of fish culture.

The chamber of commerce held a special meeting last evening to discuss the amendments to the city charter which passed the senate. The amended charter presented by the city council shortly thereafter, has passed the house. As each measure has passed one branch of the legislature honors appear to be easy so far. In the senate yesterday Dennis moved that the council bill be read the third time; the motion was lost. Read then moved that the matter be referred to the committee on corporations, which was agreed to, and there the matter stands at present.

A cry of fire and a general alarm last night about 9:30 was caused by a defective fire in the house of Wm. Uhlenhart, which was promptly extinguished with, fortunately, very little damage. This was the first fire alarm in Astoria this year. 1 A. M.: The fire again broke out at midnight, and despite the utmost efforts of those in the vicinity, the house was partially destroyed. The department got to the fire as soon as the nature of the ground would permit. The furniture and personal effects were saved. The building was insured in the Lion of London for $1,000, and the furniture in the Hamburg and Bremen for $1,100.

COUNTY COURT PROCEEDINGS.

The February session of the county court began last Monday, present Hon. C. A. McGuire, county judge, Jno. Hobson and D. K. Warren, commissioners, Wm. G. Ross, sheriff, and C. J. Trenchard, county clerk. Application of D. E. Pense for a reduction of $300 was allowed. A petition for a road from the 80 mile post to the S. W. cor. Sec. 36, was read first time. An order was drawn for costs in suit of Dundee Mortgage and Trust Co. vs. the sheriff of Clatsop county. It was ordered that the costs in the case of surveying and reviewing the O'verson trial be not paid. The jury and witness fees for the January term of circuit court were ordered paid. The clerk's bill of $450 for making assessment roll was ordered paid. Adjudged.

County met at nine yesterday morning. E. M. Swanson was admitted to citizenship; D. Bizerth, ditto. It was ordered that the contract for the Necanicum bridge be let to Surprenant & Ferguson for $200,000, the $100 deposited by C. E. Logan be paid into the treasury and J. W. Gearhart pay the sum of $25.

The Clatsop road and bridge being under consideration, and there not appearing a majority of the legal voters of the county, the time for receiving additional names is extended until the April term of the court. The report of the supervisor of road district No. 20 was received and approved. J. S. Church was appointed road supervisor for road district No. 30. Report of supervisor for road district No. 18 was received and approved. It was ordered that a warrant be drawn in favor of the city of Astoria for $187.20 upon the city making a deed for lots in cemetery. Judge McGuire and D. K. Warren were authorized to have a portion of the cemetery cleared. Ordered that the sheriff pay delinquent taxes over to the clerk of school district No. 1. Adjudged till this morning.

TELEPHONE.
The witty paragrapher and the funny man of the newspapers have recently struck a new lead in recounting the amusing mistakes which may occur by operators giving the wrong party to a subscriber, or switching off some one who has begun a conversation and connecting him with others who are talking.

A sample story is about a customer who rang up his butcher to inquire what he had put on the last sausage sold him. Before the butcher could respond the operator disconnected him, and the customer, who was a gentleman, was between two men about a well which had just been cleaned, and the one who was talking was relating what he had found in it. The customer only heard "two deers," "three deers," and "three deers," and threw down the telephone in horror, and the agonies of a cholera patient were endured by him for the next hour. Another tells of how a young lady was shocked by having a man, who was a butcher, tell her, in a friendly way, that he had just killed a young lady friend who was concerned. In the midst of the account the lady listened a hoarse voice say, "I then cut her throat, grabbed her by the leg and—"

—and a dead swoon prevented her hearing the conclusion.

A mistake not exactly of this kind, but still a pretty good sample of amusing errors which may occur, is reported from the office of a gentleman in Portland, and as its truth is vouched for it is additionally interesting. A young business man rang up, calling for a gentleman friend. The operator mistook the number, and a lady's voice answered, "Hello, what do you want?"

"Well, who are you?"

"I'm 64."

"You're too old. I want 17."

COLUMBIA RIVER HERRING NORTH.
Curious Uses of the Molluscs Facifies or "Candle Fish."

"Turn out the gas," said a collector of curiosities, who had just returned from an extended trip, "and I'll show you something new in the way of illumination."

The speaker had unrolled from a thick bundle of Chinese paper several objects that had an ancient and fish-like smell, and thrusting one of them into a brass candlestick after the writer had turned off the gas he lighted a match and touched it to the end of the object. A moment later a clear, yellow light illumined the room.

"Yes, it's a fish," said the collector, in reply to a question. Just take this paper and read a line or so, and be one of the few who have read by the light of a dead herring."

The writer did so, and found that he could read with the greatest ease, the light being equal to that of an ordinary candle.

THE CANDLE FISH.
"Yes, it is curious," continued the naturalist, "but nothing when you get used to it. I've got so that if I should see a man use himself as a candle I shouldn't be much surprised. But this idea of using fish is a queer one. I first observed it when I was on the north shore of British Columbia. I made a trip all through the country for the purpose of obtaining a skeleton of the rare rhinoceros that was killed off about a hundred years ago, and I didn't find that, I ran into some other curious things well worth knowing. I had lived in an Indian village nearly a week before I heard anything about the candle fish, and one beautiful moonlight night was standing on the beach when I saw something that appeared exactly like the reflection of the moon, only it was in the wrong direction. I called the attention of a native, who was not far off, to it, and immediately it seemed to throw him into the greatest excitement. He sang out 'Eulachon!' as loud as he could, and in a few moments at least fifty men were on the beach launching their canoes or coming ashore in a great confusion. I could not learn what was the matter, but I tumbled into one of the canoes and off we went."

There were two men in all the boats but ours, I making three. One sat in the stern and paddled while the other stood in the bow with a curious instrument in his hand that until now I had not observed. It looked like an enormous rake or comb made of a piece of wood at least eight feet long, with a hole for a hand grip at the top, the lower part being cut to an edge, into which was driving on sharp iron or bone teeth from three to four inches apart. The teeth were arranged in a great comb held by the back. Its use was soon evident, and I saw that it was an arrangement for fishing. The ripple I had seen on the water was an enormous school of fishes, called by the natives eulachon, and to surround them now seemed to be the chief object."

A GRAND FISH HUNT.
"The canoes were swiftly paddled out until they were all upon the outside and then they rushed at their full speed, each man wielding his comb-like scoop and leading it into the water. The eulachon gleamed like silver, and at every stroke, so thick were the fishes, that the teeth of the comb came up covered with their impaled forms. These were quickly jerked into the boat and another dash made, and so on until the school was finally driven in shore, where the excited natives leaped into the water knee deep in the throng, and fairly scooped them into their canoes, where their vivid phosphorescence made them look like molten gold. The school seemed so terrified and demoralized that they hugged the shore, and if the men had had nets instead of the comb-like scoops, they could have captured millions where they only took thousands. The boats were rapidly filled, however, and in an hour the excitement was over, and the canoes were hauled by the excited fishermen upon the beach. The natives then took the eulachon from the shore and the catch handed over to the squaws, who took the entire matter of curing in hand. They seated themselves about their respective pile and, taking sticks pointed at the end, rapidly struck the fish up on them by piercing them through the eyes. Cross-pieces were then placed upon them to prevent their falling off, after which they were taken by children and placed in the smoke at the top of their sheds."

"No, there was no cleaning or scaling at all; they were exactly as they came out of the water. When thoroughly dried they have a flavor of wood smoke, and then are taken and packed in large barrels, made of cedar bark and rushes of various kinds. Now they are stowed away on a scaffolding made of high poles, and are not touched until cold weather, as they form a winter supply, or canoe. The natives call them, in our tongue, the candle fish, and they not only eat them, but use them to burn, as I have shown you. Previous to entering the water, and no light, but after, I luxuriated in a candle every night; and wrote my reports and took my notes all by the light of the eulachon. The little fish seems fairly bubbling over with oil, much so that I tried to fry one, and turning away for a few moments, I returned to find the back and other bones jumping around in a lot of fat; the flesh had melted and actually turned into oil. You can squeeze it out of them, and you have no idea of its value to those people. The oil is a medicine; as fuel it keeps them warm, gives them light and is a healthy food in its dried state. When eaten, they are swallowed bones and all, or are partly melted. A candle fish is given to a child to suck on, just as we would give it a stick of candy here. When they burn then they take a pointed stick, insert it in the ground and make a slit in the other end, into which a candle fish is thrust and lighted. There is no trimming or smoking, and when the light is no longer needed it is blown out and the remainder of the oil is used for purposes of no loss, you see, in these dips. Some times the fish are extremely abundant, and the surplus are all made into oil, which is used for a variety of purposes by the natives."

OIL BOTTLED IN A STALK.
"What do they stow it in? Well, nature again comes to the rescue, and nature to the ocean for their bottles as well as their oil. One of the great sea-weeds that grow off the coast has a hollow stalk, and is used as large as a champagne bottle. These are cut into lengths and filled three parts or more and filled with oil when fresh and make perfect bottles."

The candle fish is allied to the smelt and is known scientifically as the malleolus pacificus. In former days it was found in the vicinity of British Columbia in vast quantities. The Columbia river, from the bay past Astoria to the mouth, is said to have been a famous place for them, but the factories and the steamers have gradually driven them off, so that now there are only a few places comparatively speaking, where great numbers can be found.

"There is only one thing," continued the speaker, "in the way of fish that I have ever seen to beat this, and that was in Africa, where they use a live fish as a doctor. Yes, instead of sending for a doctor they would send after this fish, and I don't know but that there was about as much sense in it as there is in a good many of our nostrums. I first noticed this peculiar cure on the old Malabar river, where I went several years ago on a collecting tour. I was awakened one night by dreadful groans and cries, and getting up to see what the trouble was, I found a child in the adjoining hut that had been taken sick. Upon going in to see if I could do anything, I found the women filling a great basin with water. Into this was placed a catfish, the one we know the malleolus pacificus, that they took from a gourd that served as an aquarium, and into the water they then forced the child, making it pick up the fish. That it received a shock at first was evident, as it dropped it and yelled all the louder; but the women made it again take hold of the fish, and whether it did any good or not I am unable to say, but the child soon stopped crying and seemed better. Possibly the fish benumbed it."

"Then it was electric?" said the writer.

"Certainly," was the reply. "The fish was the common electric catfish, common in African river. When first taken they were quite a powerful shock, something like that received from these street machines, and when examined they show quite a complicated battery."

MEDICINE IN A FISH.
"The next morning," continued the speaker, "I made some inquiries and I found that the fish were brought out quite regularly, or any one else who happened to need a dose. As soon as a native child began to complain, a tub or vessel of water was brought out and several of the fish caught if they were not on hand and the child made to get in and play with the fish. Not only do they do this to cure the sick, but in some tribes the mother, when washing their infants in the usual way, and even the water that surrounded it was supposed to contain the means of miraculous cure. This was the primitive electric cure that has developed into the artificial battery of to-day."

Is It Not True?
There can be no argument as to the qualities essential to a perfect remedy for the ills arising from a disordered or inactive condition of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels. Everyone will admit that it should be perfectly safe for old and young of both sexes, at any and all times; that it should be acceptable both to the taste and the stomach; that it should never fail to act promptly and thoroughly, yet painlessly, and it should give strength to those organs. It is now well known that Syrup of Figs possesses these qualities in a pre-eminent degree. W. E. Dement & Co. are agents for Astoria, Oregon.
