Purely Vegetable Compound, that acts directly upon the hiver; curing the many diseases incident to that important organ, and prevaling the number of making butter and the cost of the article. There are farmers' wives who, under adverse circumstances, make excellent butter, but the general verdict of grocerymen is, that creamery butter, even seven months old, is better and sells better than the best country roll, however fresh. Herein is one of the secrets of the want of success among farmers. Too little attention is paid to minor matters. This is not attributing to them a lack of intelligence, but an oversight of a very important matter. A suitable place to keep the milk and ripen up the cream need not be expensive, nor will a good churn with thermometer cost much. A butter worker is of course indispensable.
