WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

A vigorous effort in behalf of woman suffrage is being made at this session of the legislature. The advocates of the measure argue that the legislature can grant the suffrage right to women, if it sees fit so to do, by direct legislation. The opponents of the movement say that the fact that the proposed constitutional amendment was overwhelmingly beaten last June is sufficient argument against immediate consideration of the measure.

The judiciary committee of the state senate has been listening to addresses from different advocates, finally reporting back the bill without recommendation.

The argument that the advocates of the measure make at this time is substantially this: All power in this state is vested in the legislative assembly, except such as is prohibited to it in the constitution of the United States or this state. The state constitution contains this provision: "In all elections not otherwise provided for by this constitution, every white male citizen of the United States of the age of twenty-one years and upwards who shall have resided in the state during the six months immediately preceding such election, and every white male of foreign birth of the age of twenty-one years and upwards who shall have resided in the state six months immediately preceding such election, and shall have declared his intention of becoming a citizen of the United States one year preceding such election, conformably to the laws of the United States on the subject of naturalization, shall be entitled to vote at all elections authorized by law."

This is the only clause in the constitution conferring upon any class the right to vote. Section 3, article II, says that "no idiot or insane person shall be entitled to the privilege of an elector," and Sec. 6, same article, says that "no negro, Chinaman or mulatto shall have the right of suffrage." Now if women are ignored both in the recital of those who are endowed with and those who are disbarred from the right of franchise, it is argued with great show of reason that the reserve power of legislation where it does not conflict with constitutional provision gives the legislature authority to confer upon the women of Oregon the right of suffrage. Justice suggests the conferring of such right.

Is the generally accepted idea of heaven it does not seem to us as though there was any enjoyment for a very large class of deserving people. A heaven which constitutes a watch-tower from which its occupants could still survey the miseries of the earth would really be a place of acute mental suffering for its most sympathetic and meritorious inhabitants. Even if we can imagine them so destitute of sympathy as not to care about the suffering they saw while enjoying themselves, yet, even in that case, it seems as though they would have an unhappy time waiting for others whom they loved, particularly if those others were in alleged torment. This is one reason why a good many people don't take much stock in that story about Lazarus enjoying himself in heaven over Dives' begging in hell for a sup of water. It doesn't look consistent.

A MAN can't hurt himself by standing squarely by what he believes in his soul is right. Nor can he injure his character or his reputation thereby. There is a broad distinction between character and reputation, for one may be destroyed by slander, while the other can never be harmed except by its possessor. Our reputation is in no man's keeping but our own. Our character may be. We cannot determine what other men shall say, and think about us. We can only determine what our actions give them right to say and think about us, and this can only be done by having some positive opinions—and staying with those opinions.

It is said that often under favorable circumstances, men on board a vessel a hundred miles from shore hear the ringing of bells on placing their ears in the focus of the main-sail; and so as we sail on the ocean of life, often, under favorable circumstances, is the music of the happy past, of childhood hopes and youthful memories wafted to our ears, cheering us with hopes of a happy home beyond the misty deep.

It requires the labor of five men an entire year to build a locomotive, and this is the average at each of the sixteen locomotive works in the United States.

Kentucky is forming anti-bell ringing societies, and will try and put a stop to the pounding of church-bells on Sunday. There is about as much sense in ringing a bell for church as for going to bed.

BARON ROTHSCHILD once advertised for a chef who could concoct 365 different soups, one for each day in the year. He found him, and paid him a salary of $10,000 a year.

On several transatlantic ships telephones are now used between the bridge and the wheel-house, instead of speaking-tubes, as heretofore.

STATISTICS show that there is less crime in the United States in proportion to the population than in any other country in the world.

FIFTY years ago the average weight of beef cattle was 800 pounds, now it is 1,400.
