CLEVELAND'S INAUGURAL ADDRESS.
Delivered Upon Taking the Oath of Office at the National Capitol, March 4th, 1885.

FELLOW CITIZENS:—In the presence of this vast assemblage of my countrymen I am about to supplement and seal by the oath which I shall take, the manifestation of the will of a great and free people. In the exercise of their power and right to self-government they have committed to one of their fellow citizens a supreme and sacred trust and he here consecrates himself to their service. This impressive ceremony adds little to the solemn sense of responsibility with which I contemplate the duty I owe to all the people of the land. Nothing can relieve me from anxiety, lest by any act of mine their interests may suffer, and nothing is needed to strengthen my resolution to engage every faculty and effort in the promotion of their welfare.
And, I am sure, that the people's choice was made, but its attendant circumstances have demonstrated anew the strength and safety of a government by the people. In each succeeding year it more clearly appears that our democratic principles need no apology, and that, in its fearless and faithful application is to be found the surest guaranty of good government. But the best results to be found in the operation of a government wherein every citizen has a share, largely depend upon a proper limitation of purely party zeal and effort, and a correct appreciation of the time when the heat of partisanship should be merged into the patriotism of the citizen. To-day the executive branch of government is transferred to a new keeping, but this is still a government of all the people, and it should be none the less an object of their affectionate solicitude. At this hour the animosities of political strife, the bitterness of partisan defeat, and exultation of partisan triumph should be supplanted by ungrudging acquiescence in the popular will, and sober, conscientious concern for the general weal. Moreover, if from this hour we cheerfully and honestly abandon all sectional prejudice and distrust, and determine with confidence in one another, to work out harmoniously the achievement of our national destiny, we shall deserve to receive all the benefits which our happy form of government can bestow.
On this auspicious occasion we may renew the pledge of our devotion to that constitution which, launched by the founders of the republic and consecrated by their prayers and patriotic devotion, has for a century borne the hopes and aspirations of a great people, through prosperity and peace, through the shock of foreign conflicts, and the perils of domestic strife. By the father of his country our constitution was commended for adoption as the result of a spirit of amity and mutual concession. In that same spirit it should be administered, in order to promote the lasting welfare of the country and to secure the full measure of its priceless benefits to us and to those who will succeed to the blessings of our national life. The large variety of diverse and competing interests subject to federal control, persistently seeking recognition of their claims need give us no fear that "the greatest good to the greatest number" will fail to be accomplished, if in the halls of national legislation that spirit of amity and mutual concession shall prevail in which the constitution had its birth. If this involves the surrender or postponement of private interests, and abandonment of local advantages, compensation will be found in the assurance that the common interest is subserved and the general welfare advanced.
In the discharge of my official duty I shall endeavor to be guided by a just and unconstrained construction of the constitution, a careful observation of the distinction between the powers guaranteed to the federal government and those reserved to the states or to the people, and by a cautious appreciation of those functions which have been especially assigned to the executive branch of the government. But he who takes oath to-day to preserve, protect and defend the constitution of the United States, only assumes that solemn obligation which every patriotic citizen on the farm, in the workshop, in the busy marts of trade, and everywhere, should share with him. The constitution which prescribes his oath, my countrymen, is yours. The government which you have chosen him to administer for a time is yours; the suffrage which executes the will of freemen is yours; the laws and the entire scheme of our civil life, from the town meeting to the state capitol and the national capital, is yours. Yours every vote, as assuredly as your chief magistrate, under the same high sanction, though in a different sphere, exercises a public trust. Nor is this all; every citizen owes to the country a vigilant watch and close scrutiny of its public servants, and a fair and reasonable estimate of their fidelity and usefulness. Thus is the people's will impressed upon the whole framework of our civil policy, municipal, state and federal. And this is the price of our liberty and the inspiration of your faith in the republic.
It is the duty of those serving the people in a public place closely to limit the public expenditures to the actual needs of a government economic administered, because this bounds the right of a government to exact tribute from the earnings of labor or the property of citizens, and because of public extravagance among the people. We should never be ashamed of the singularity and prudential economies which are best suited to the operations of a republican form of government, and most compatible with the mission of the American people. Those who are selected for a limited time to manage public affairs are still of the people and may do much by their example to encourage, consistently with the dignity of their official functions, that plain way of life which, among their fellow citizens, adds integrity and promotes thrift and prosperity.

The genius of our institutions, the needs of our people in their home life, and the attention which is demanded for settlement or development of the resources of our vast territory, dictate the scrupulous avoidance of any departure from that foreign policy commended by history, tradition, and the prosperity of our republic. It is a policy of independence, favored by our position and defied by our known love of justice and by our power; it is a policy of peace, suitable to our interests; it is a policy of neutrality, rejecting all share in foreign broils and ambitions upon other continents and repelling their intrusion here; it is the policy of Monroe and Washington and Jefferson, of peace, commerce and honest friendship with all nations; entangling alliances with none.
A true regard for the interests and prosperity of all the people demands that our finances shall be established upon such a sound and sensible basis as shall secure the safety and confidence of business interests, and make the wage of labor sure and steady, and that our system of revenue be so adjusted as to relieve the people from unnecessary taxation, having due regard to the interests of capital invested and workmen employed in American industries; and preventing the accumulation of a surplus in the treasury to an extent that induces extravagance and waste.
Care for the prosperity of the nation and for the needs of the future settlers require that the public domain shall be protected from partition schemes and unlawful occupation.
The conscience of the people demands that the Indians within our boundaries shall be fairly and honestly treated in all wars of the government, and their education and civilization promoted with a view to their ultimate citizenship.
Polygamy in the territories is destructive of the family and of religion, and offensive to the moral sense of the civilized world, and shall be repressed.
The laws should be rigidly enforced which prohibit immigration of a servile class to compete with American labor, with no intention of acquiring citizenship, and bringing with them and retaining habits and customs repugnant to our civilization.
The people demand reform in the administration of government and application of business principles to public affairs, and as a means to this end civil service reform should be in good faith enforced. Our citizens have a right to protection from the incompetency of public employes, and those who hold places solely as a reward of partisan service, and from the corruptive influence of those who promise and the vicious methods of those who expect such rewards. Those who worthily seek public employment have the right to insist that merit and competency shall be recognized instead of party subservience or surrender of honest political belief.
In the administration of a government pledged to do equal and exact justice to all men, there should be no pretext for anxiety touching the protection of freedmen in their rights or their security in the enjoyment of their privileges under the constitution and its amendments. All discussion as to their fitness for the place accorded to them as American citizens is idle and unprofitable, except as it suggests the necessity for their improvement. The fact that they are citizens entitles them to all the rights due this relation, and charges them with all its duties, obligations and responsibilities.
These topics and the constant and ever varying wants of an active and enterprising population may well receive the attention and patriotic endeavor of all who make and execute the federal law. Our duties are practical and call for industrious application, an intelligent perception of the claims of public office, and above all a firm determination of united action to secure to all the people of the land the full benefits of the best form of government ever vouchsafed to man. And let us not trust to human effort alone, but humbly acknowledge the power and goodness of Almighty God, who presides over the destiny of nations and who has at all times been revealed in our country's history. Let us invoke his aid and his blessing upon our labors.
