TWENTY-FOUR YEARS AGO.

The Inaugural Belivered by Abraham Lincoln

In another part of this issue will be given in full below. Present circumworthy of attention than now. Amid the tions, clamoring for irreconcilable conessions, he said: This country, with its institutions, be-longs to the people who inhabit it. Whenever they shall grow weary of the existing government they can exercise their constitutional right of amending it, of their revolutionary right to dismember or overthrow it. I cannot be ignorant of the fact that many worthy and patriotic citizens are desirous of hiving the constitution amended. While I make no recommendation or amendment. I fully recognize the full authority of the people over the whole subject to the recognizer. people over the whole subject, to be exercised in either of the modes prescribed in the instrument itself; and I should, under existing circumstances, favor, rather than oppose, a fair opportunity being afforded to the people to act upon it. I will centure to add that to me the convention mode seems preferable, in that it allows amendments to originate with the people themselves, material of only permiting them to take or reject propositions originated by others not especially chosen for the parpose, and which might not be precisely such as they would wish either to necept or refuse. I understand that a proposed amendment to the constitution has passed congress, to the effect that the federal government shall never faterfere with the domestic institutions of states, including that of der existing circumstances, favor, ratheinstitutions of states, including that of persons held to service. To avoid misconstruction of what I have said. I depart from my purpose not to speak of particular amendments so far as to say that, bolding such a provision to be now implied constitutional law. I have no objection to its being made express and irrevocable. The chief magistrate derives all his authority from the people and they have conferred none upon him to fix the terms for the separation of the states. The people themselves, also, can do this if they choose; but the executive. as such, has nothing to do with it. The sale of Syrup of Figs is simply immense. Everyone is taking it, and all admit that it is the best medicine ever used. Children cry for it on account of its pleasant taste, and grown people who have used it once never take any: who have used it once hever take anything else. Unlike other remedies for biliousness and constipation it never loses its power to act, and it atways leaves the organs on which it acts stronger than before. A morning scrennile tendered to popul lar political favorities, served to amuse and interest the participants and crowds.

Whatever it was possible to do with scantling and boards and banting and gift to deck a town for such an occasion, Washington had undertaken and performed. The harvest of decorntors and secondary boards have to decorntors and secondary boards from the control of carpenters began ten days ago, the noise of their pounding and click of their hammers being heard day and night ever since to the moment of starting the pro-cession. At first ugly crections of rough timber broke out all along the proposed line of march from the White house to the capitol, covering windows and doors, stores and dwellings, and filling up little parks and openings. Upon these were tacked advertisements of seats to rent. Later, flags, banners, streamers and taste ful devices in colors concealed the rough woodwork, and then building fronts be-gan to blossom out. The completed work is very beautiful and the stateliness of the avenues have been transferred into a moving mass of gay colors as a wel-come to the new administration.

The building at the corner of Twelfth and Pennsylvania avenue occupied by the pension bureau was, perhaps, the most elaborately desorated structure in the city, and the decorations were at once pleasing and unique. Long lines of streamers were suspended between flagnames of the states of the Union, all names of the states of the Union, all linked together with git chains.

The first division, composed of the regular troops and district militia, formed west of seventeenth street and escorted the president-elect from his hottel to the capitol, where he took the eath of office and delivered his inaugural address, while the troops passed on the north side of the capitol, and, making a halt, in readiness to resume the line of march down that side of the capitol when the ceremonies would have been Entron Astorias: After the last farce of our legislature, which failed to elect a United States senator, I think it is time the people should mise their voices and claim the right of electing our United States senators at our general election, which is the only true way of electing our United States senators. The legislature should devote its whole time in making our laws instead of devoting half of its time in talking up and balloting for a United States senator, and then not elect one on account of a few that are willing to sacrifice the interests of the willing to sacrifice the interests of the people that they represent for some personal feeling. It is showing itself up more and more every session that we need a change in the mode of electing a United States senator. I would like to hear the opinion of others on this subject, and would like to see Tun Assonax lead out and start the ball to rolling.

Yours truly A Supported.
