HELPING THE EDITOR.

is old—but we like him. The good people who lie awake nights devising plans to improve their daily paper, doubtless think they are doing the world a great service, and they are not. If a journal is not properly con-ducted, the public will find it out. The subscription list and advertising The subscription list and advertising patronage will tell the business manager that something is wrong, and the remedy will be applied without outside assistance. There are few people who would have the impudence and enfrontery to stop a physician and in the writer and the stop as ician on his way to visit a patient, and tell that physician that he was pursuing exactly the wrong course of treatment, and would surely kill his patient. Nobody but a lunatic would interrupt a judge in the midst of his charge to the jury and say: here; you are not giving those twelve men the proper instructions; you onght to know better than that!" People don't rush into a dry goods establishment in breathless haste and tell the proprietor that he made a mistake buying calico last week, and onght to wait until next week. Our great millers and manufacturers are not besieged by a horde of wise idlers who are loaded to the muzzle with information about the proper time to buy wheat, or the necessity of limit-ing product until the demand increases. They are allowed to attend to their own business, and if they do not conduct it properly, decreased patronage warns them of their dan-

In the newspaper office it is different. One volunteer thought-moulder advises the decapitation of a correspondent because he writes that ear muss are not fashionable in Cuba. He fears that it may injure the ear must trade in Minneapolis. Another complains that the death of John McNiff, which occurred in Arkansas. last May, was not chronicled with the postscript, : Pine Bluff and Mocca-sinville papers please copy." A ten-der miss of 19 summers and an equal number of hard winters flutters in with a poem on "Love's young dream," and complains that hitherto too little attention has been paid to the muses. She adds that she would like to have her effusion printed on the first page, top of column, and will present her bill at the cashier's window. One man wants more foreign news and another thinks it is an outrage to print rubbish from across the water at all. And so it goes. If the editor printed everything he is ordered to, he would have to issue a 64-paged paper every day; and if he omitted everything his anxious advisers tell him to, his journal would be as white as the driven snow. - Minneapolis

The Indian as an office-seeker is novelty in our politics. Red Cloud, the Sioux chieftain, is now in Washington pulling the wires for the dismissal of agent McGillicuddy, whom he does not love. Red Cloud has secured a postoffice, and no doubt, if he has sufficient leverage will root out the agent. He is a secured as out the agent. He is a very clever old Indian and his wits have been wonderfully sharpened by the lecture tour which he has recently taken through the western states. The next thing we hear of him he will be running for congress.

One of the nearest and most claborately finished Writing Desks ever seen on this coast can be seen on exhibition in the window of the cigar store, next to Foster's Exchange, on Water street in this city. The desk was made by Mr. C. Constantine of this city and certainly reflects great credit on the skill, taste and workmanship of the manufacturer. The desk is about fifty-two inches high by two feet in width and is made out of various woods such as oak, ash, butternut, wainut and white holly; they were first sawed out in pieces and so cut in beaulful designs as to resemble fine bracket work. The top or cover of the cesk is inlaid with cardinal and blue velvet. At the back on either side of a square recess are two handsomely carved apartments with folding doors. In the desk part are a number of pigeon holes for papers, envelopes, etc., this is surmounted with beautiful bracket work, and on the top of each side is a white door handsomely carved; underneath is a semi circle, also carved in rich designs, inhaid with gilt work. The sides are inlaid with crimson velvet, the bracket work being laid over it in different kinds of rich woods, the whole being surmounted with gold mouldings. A brief description of this wonderful invention conveys no idea of its elegance and finish, one must see it to appreciate it. The desk will be raffied off and persons desirous of procuring a handsome and useful ornament for the home office should not lose the opportunity to take a chance. Mr. Constantine can be found at the store any time to show those desirous of seeing the desk.
