WINTER IN THE FORESTS. Hard Work by Day and Jolly Times at Night.

> Despite the unprofitable year just past in the lumber business, the woodsmen have gone in swarms from THE ONLY REMEDIES FOR THE Bangor, as usual, this winter, to cut spruce and pine on the upper Penob scot. One inducement to imbermen to operate is the low cost of provis ions, it being possible to board a philade crew of men twenty to twenty-five per cent. cheaper than a year ago. Labor also is low, as the Prince Edward Island boys have poured into Bangor by the hundred this senson looking for employment, and have put wages down and kept them there. Think of a stout young man winging an ax all winter for ten to fifteen dollars a month and his board. These are the wages accepted by many of the Prince Edward Island loggers. There was a time in the days of big pines, near by, when a their work, and are seldom more than a day about it. The camp is simply a log house, with low sides and steep pitched roof. The chiaks of the walls are filled with mud, moss and caves, and a high banking of earth or snow reaches almost to the caves outside. The entrance is in one end, and the only window is in the oppo-site end. The cook and his assistant have a sort of pantry partitioned off at the window end, and there are wood and provision store-rooms on either side of the entrance. The remainder of the building forms one room. One side is a long couch made of boughs, hay or straw covered with heavy quilts and blankets, on which the men sleep in a row. On the opposite side is a long table, made of small logs, hewn smooth on top, on the great skin Care, Sec. Curicus SAAP, an exquisite Skin Beautifier, Sec.
