A fire at Minn's landing, on the Skagit river, recently burned a dwelling in which was $50 belonging to the editor of the Skagit News. The report says "the origin of the fire is a mystery." Like enough. It is more of a mystery how a newspaper man came to have $50 at one time. The burning of the money should be a sufficient warning not to let it happen again.

Wells, Fargo & Co.'s express office was moved to C. P. Upham's headquarters yesterday afternoon. That office will be in somewhat extensive business after a while. At present it is the office of the Astoria Iron Works, the Main street wharf, the city treasurer, the clerk of school district No. 1, the U. S. shipping commissioner and sundry other minor pursuits.

Lulu and Nellie Taylor, two girls aged 11 and 13 years, respectively, daughters of Mrs. L. Also lot 1, and ten feet of lot 2 in block 119, in Shively's Astoria, together with the fine residence thereon, being a part of the estate of Isaac Foster, deceased.

Mrs. B. B. Franklin met with a dreadful accident last evening. While watering her plants she leaned out of the second story window and losing her balance fell to the ground, a distance of twenty-four feet, striking a pile of rubbish and severely injuring herself. The flesh was torn from her hands, her ankle sprained and it is feared her spine is injured. Mrs. Franklin has but lately recovered from a severe illness and the shock was a dreadful one. She was resting comfortably last evening.

The New York state senate has just passed a bill regulating the sale and packing of canned goods. The clause which compelled each packer to stamp the date of packing upon the cans was struck out, also that which permitted the jobber to label cans packed by others with his own label, the bill compelling the packer to label them with his own name and the place of packing. A large trade has hitherto been transacted by jobbers who have their own label and brand or trade-mark in goods packed by others. It is impossible to conduct this branch of their business under the present act. The bill also regulates goods packed in other states and sold in New York state; indeed, so extensive are the changes wrought by the bill that goods packed in other countries must conform to this law or their sale will be prohibited. The bill also regulates the branding of all canned goods under the head of standards, seconds, etc. It goes into operation January 1, 1886.

Report of the British ship Fulstaf, Captain Carnell, from Astoria at Liverpool: Sailed from Astoria on the 20th of November, and crossed the equator in the Pacific 33 days out, rounded Cape Horn with light southerly winds, and thence to the equator in the Atlantic had light N E winds, and strong N E trades to lat 27 N, on April 4th, in lat 47 13 N, long 18 62 W, a gale commenced W N W, and gradually increased to a heavy gale at noon; during the afternoon a heavy sea struck the ship on the port side amidships, filling decks, smashing the port forward beam, a boat on the after main hatch, and a ventilator, and doing other damage; at 6 p. m. the barometer was gradually falling, and the squalls blowing terribly, accompanied by hail and a tremendously high sea running; at 9 p. m. the barometer stood at 29.90, and the St. Elmo lights completely illuminated the ship, one appearing at each masthead and every yard arm, and from 10 p. m. to 2 a. m. the squalls blew with hurricane force, the ship running before the wind under foremast and two lower topsails; towards dark the gale moderated, and was followed by light N E winds to the channel.

AHEAD OF THE GAME.

The new school law appropriating $50 to each school district out of the common fund before apportioning it pro rata, is causing considerable of a kick all over the state. School district No. 1 in this county is ahead of it a little.

In taking the census of the school children of this district, the census taker found 128 children of school age of Chinese parents, which he enrolled with the Caucasians, the census making a very considerable addition to the total.

After the apportionment had been made there was a temporary hitch in payment of the money to district No. 1, on the grounds that the counting of the Mongolian youths and youngsters was not according to Hoyle. A telegram to Gov. Moody brought an answer from his excellency to the effect that Chinese counted as Caucasians, and that school district No. 1 in the county of Clatsop must be paid pro rata according to the number of children of school age on the census roll without regard to race parentage. The result is that the district gets about $400 more than it would, had the decision been otherwise, and can better stand its share of the new $50 apportionments.

An additional result will be that next time other districts will also enroll Chinese children. A probable result will be that at the next term of school there will be a raft of young Chinese coming and demanding admission to sit and study beside Frank and Jennie and Amy and Lucy and Harry and all the rest of the youngsters.

LOW PRICES.

Provisions Considerably Cheaper Than One Year Ago.

"Astoria is such a dear place to live in," is a remark that has been heard on more than one occasion. A comparison of present prices with those of other places does not substantiate the assertion. Astorians can buy the necessities of life at prices that seem very reasonable and though time was when provisions, etc., were high, commodities of all kinds have shared in the general depression and a few dollars will now go a long way in replenishing the family larder.

Flour is one of the few things that shows a rise, the present retail price being $5 a barrel. Fresh meat averages 12 1/2 cents a pound; lard is offered from 12 to 15 cents; bacon from 9 to 15 cents. Potatoes are from 60 to 70 cents per 100 lb sack. Butter is sold at 50 cents a short two-pound roll; eggs are 17 and 20 cents a dozen; eleven pounds granulated white sugar can be bought for one dollar; coffee ranges about six pounds for a dollar.

Vegetables and fruits are cheaper than a year ago. Table fruit sells at 25 cents a can, tomatoes at $1.25 a dozen cans; green peas are 5 cents a pound; strawberries 2 1/2 cents a box; asparagus 5 cents a bunch, onions 2 1/2 cents a bunch; radishes the same; cherries 20 cents a pound, being among the luxuries of life; new potatoes bring two cents, cabbage brings three, gooseberries four; rhubarb 20 cents a bunch; lemons 40 cents a dozen; oranges 20 and 25 cents. As of old the most of our early fruits and vegetables come from California. To give exact quotations is not the intent of this article, for prices fluctuate from day to day, it being simply intended to show the cost of living in Astoria as far as provisions are concerned is not excessive, and compared to one year ago is remarkably cheap.

Home rent is at a good figure, not exorbitant, and yet high enough; however our system of finances which makes it necessary to pay four per cent. on assessed values makes that necessary.

Clothing and other supplies can be bought as cheap and as good as in Portland. Of course there are little things that can be picked up elsewhere at lower figures than our Astoria business men can afford to handle them for, but there are two or three calls for that article and the slightest indication of a demand will cause that called for to be on his shelves in a very short time.

THE BLUE AND THE GRAY.

They sat together, side by side.

In the shade of an orange tree;

One had followed the flag of Grant,

The other had fought with Lee.

The boy in blue had an empty sleeve,

A crutch had the boy in gray;

They talked of the long and dreary march.

They talked of the bloody fray.

"My chief is dead," the Johnny said.

"A leader brave and true,"

And sheathed his sword at Lexington.

Doth hand the sword of Lee."

"My leader lives!" the boy in blue

Spoke low and with a sigh.

"But all the country waits in fear.

"That he to-day may die."

"God bless our Grant," the veteran said.

And dropped a tear, and then

In heartfelt tones the answer came,

For the rebel said, "Amen."

SOMETHING NEW.

PREEMPTING THE DOMAIN OF NEPTUNE.

All the Oceans of the Planet Annexed to the United States.

On March 13, 1885, the officers and passengers on the O. R. & N. company's good ship Quera of the Pacific, were called on to witness a strange procedure, one of the most singular, in fact, that has ever transpired in the annals of man—and one that would seem to extend in far-reachingness any picture drawn from the mind of Jules Verne.

It was no less than the claiming of all the oceans of our planet, comprising three-quarters of the globe, and undertaking to establish a republic over all this area, which for judicial purposes is annexed to the United States of America.

The formal and official location state of the immense claim, was driven precisely at sun down, March 13th, and the act was performed in the following manner:

A person a little above the average weight, rather stoutly built, wearing a long, full beard and a white well-brimmed slouch hat of the pattern in common use among the live stock men of the western grazing lands, had notified the officers, crew and passengers of what was about to transpire, and proceeding with his associates to the "bridge," he inquired of the captain on duty:

"Captain, where are we now?"

And received for answer: "Seven miles off Cape Fortunes, on the coast of California, U. S. A., and by the ship's log 35 miles from the Astoria bar, and 100 miles from the San Francisco bar."

The piratical looking individual, who claimed to be a direct lineal descendant of the Vikings who once roamed the seas at will, and conquered all Europe, then proclaimed:

"Here on this spot, I declare that the portion of the earth's surface not held legitimately by any nation, and comprising thereof so much as is covered by navigable waters of the salt sea, and embracing three-fourths of the globe, is from this hour the property of a provisional government, styling itself the republic of the seas of which I am the president. We shall exact tolls of all ships, and a royalty on all fish, sea otter, seal, whale, and other living creatures inhabiting the oceans, and on all valuable substances taken from the mighty deep, by any person whomsoever. And we hereby tender to the government of the United States 80 per cent. of the revenues so derived, on condition that it to us and to myself personally, the remaining 10 per cent. shall be paid free of cost of collection. And I do hereby call to witness the consumption of this act, the following persons here assembled, to-wit:

J. M. Fields, first mate.

Thos. Doig, second mate.

Alfred Olsen, third mate.

H. Laupman, first engineer.

W. H. Allison, first assistant engineer.

S. E. Goodall, second assistant engineer.

J. S. Spasbard, third assistant engineer.

G. W. Edwards, steward.

J. M. Jensen, pilot.

J. E. Byrnes, purser.

And in order to draw the attention of the world to this act, the vessel was to be named the republic of the seas, and that as they had in the past few centuries been fictitiously declared to be territory of some nation, and to be free roads of all nations, hence, on the prospect of a general war, deemed the time opportune for the assertion of his rights.

Well, then, we do not exceed such jurisdiction or powers in performing the act that has just been done.

The only reason why it has not been done before, is because no one has ever had the temerity to attempt it since the days the vikings ruled the seas.

It is equally as legitimate to claim the water as the land; the same shore lines are the boundaries of both instances.

At this time there is a general depression in commercial channels all around the earth. Thousands of vessels are side tracked in hundreds of harbors because of the general stagnation of business.

With the Cleveland administration in power we trust it stands ready to realize the situation and grasp the opportunity.

It is more than likely that during the coming Anglo-Russian war, the rich marine commerce will seek protection under some other flag, and if the American government will repeal the law restraining Americans from purchasing and flying the flag of their nation from the masts of vessels built by foreigners, the most of the ships of Britain would pass under the control of Americans in order that they might receive protection from Russian privateers.

England's emergency is America's opportunity. With the British marine under our flag we can accomplish our supremacy over all seas.

Being questioned as to the seat of his provisional government, he stated that it is on a small island in the archipelago of San Juan de Fuca, and that the shores of the island are washed by the warm ocean current of India and fanned by the trade winds that blow directly from the seat of the Anglo-Russian war.

This railway will, by this arrangement, be enabled to successfully compete with the Canadian Pacific, which would otherwise not be the case, if the British fleets have the carrying trade under their own flag instead of ours.

W. E. Dement & Co. will furnish anyone wishing Syrup of Figs a trial bottle free of charge, or will sell 50 cent and one dollar bottles.
