der's a man wot's goin' a fishen'. The speaker was a small boy, whose parents live in a cabin and cultivate small patch of ground in the mountains west of this place, near the route of Vanderbilt's proposed South Pennsylvania railroad.

Ma, was busy washing clothes and made no reply. The youngster, impatient of such neglect, determined on a more personal appeal to her attention. "Ma, may I go and see him dig bait?

"Go' long," said the materfamilias, curtly. The boy started off with a run, but as he approached the object of his journey he slowed up, as if awed by a nearer view of the uncouth individual who was saiding the rich individual who was spading the rich bottom soil. The man's appearance was by no means reassuring. In fact he looked almost savage. His angu-lar and ungainly form was encased in coarse garments, apparently the work of an amateur tailor of the eighteenth century. Long stragscowl on the narrow forehead that overhung his small, piggish eyes, made him still less prepossessing.

Near the man stood a large tin can, half-filled with the ordinary earthworms used for fish-bait. Occasionally his spade would uncover a fresh colony of worms, and with an inarticcan.

"Mister, may I go a-fishen' with you?" asked the small boy, after he had recovered enough courage to address the Hungarian. "I know a bully hole down here in the crik," and he looked longingly into the can of worms, as if enjoying the day's sport in anticipation.

"Me no go a-fishen'," replied the Hungarian.

"What you goin' to do with the worms, then, mister?" "Me make a worm pot-pie. You walnuts, and depositing the snails in an iron pot for soup. When the man with the spade and can arrived. half a dozen clustered around him and peeped in to see how many worms he had, when they gave vent to their satisfaction in grunts of joy. One of them tried to drive the boy away, but a word from the digger made him shut up.

worms were washed and put into an oven, and flour and lard placed over them. This was put on the fire to bake and in half an hour the worms were ready for a Polonius banquet—not were they eat, but where they are eaten. The boy was invited, but didn't stay. Seeing was good enough for him.—Philadelphia Times.

The Trouble Safely Over. Stomach trouble is serious business while it lasts; but what a bless ed relief to have it depart! Mrs. F. G.
