Notice to Advertisers. THE ASTORIAN guarantees to its advertisers the largest circulation of any newspaper published on the Columbia river.

Fine weather for work or play. Circuit court meets to-morrow. The State took out 300 cases salmon yesterday.

The Wells, Fargo & Co's letter box is now in front of the Occident hotel.

The State left at noon yesterday. The Oregon came in half an hour after.

The vestry of Grace church will hold their regular meeting to-morrow evening.

The subject to-night at the Congregational church will be "The Great War Question."

Gospel meeting at the Y. M. C. A. hall this afternoon at 3 o'clock. All are cordially invited.

The Clara Parker comes down from the Cowitz to-day with a load of hay and farm produce.

Wm. Allen's restaurant at the Parker house is establishing a fine reputation for excellence and cleanliness.

The Haddingtonshire went up stream yesterday. She has been chartered by Sibson, Church & Co. See advt.

That handsome baby carriage on exhibition at Carl Adler's was won by Sheriff Ross at the raffle last evening.

The iron bark Remondant begins discharging ballast to-morrow. She will load salmon for Liverpool. See advt.

The schooner Alcedo arrived in San Francisco yesterday afternoon, and will load lumber at the Clatsop mill for San Pedro.

The S. F. Chronicle says the salmon are so scarce in the Sacramento river that the fishermen are not making running expenses.

Oolachans are reported scarce in the Fraser river this spring. They are probably visiting somewhere with the Columbia basin.

"Micky Fat" who sailed away in the Inchgreen many moons ago and gazed on foreign scenes, is back as a fat and gizzled like as of yore.

The Yamhill Reporter says there is a man in McMinnville who will run any man in Oregon 100 yards for $500. 8-a-y; can you man beat 95 seconds?

The Salem Talk rises in its place and asserts that a man named W. H. Adair brought a strawberry into Salem that weighs ten ounces and a half. Big berry; big story.

The raise has struck the corner of Main and Chenamus streets, Wm. Edgar's store. The Old Corner and adjacent buildings were being boosted up to the level yesterday forenoon.

A man named Fraust was arrested yesterday on the ghastly charge of burglary at the residence of the late P. M. Linguist of Knappa. A man who would steal from a corpse would stop at nothing.

Southern Oregonians report that the construction forces of the Central Pacific have been ordered to proceed to the front of the California and Oregon railroad to push it to a connection with the Oregon and California railroad.

Next in order is the circus agent with "the greatest show on earth. I tell you, sir, it just lays over anything you ever saw. Seventy-nine camels and a royal Bengal tiger. What'll you charge for three colossus, e. o. d. for six weeks."

B. B. Franklin is progressive. Not content with having the finest horse north of San Francisco he has gone and bought a Clarence coach with a glass front, with double lamps and everything stunning. Messrs Ross and Norris had the first ride in it and they say it is immense.

A large with a locomotive aboard, is anchored in Scow bay. Larger locomotives have arrived in Astoria, but as this is the first one that ever came here to be unloaded and used in this county, it possesses more interest to us. It will be used at the government works in the vicinity of Ft. Stevens.

A couple of accidents at the Scandinavian hall last evening interfered somewhat with the joy of the occasion. M. Meera fell down the stairs sustaining severe injuries. He was brought to St. Mary's hospital. Another man fell overboard and was rescued none the worse for his perilous adventure.

Others made razor hones and different articles, for all of which it is excellent material. The "Canned Goods" bill will, in all probability, be passed by the New York legislature. As originally reported it required packers of canned goods to put the date of packing on the cans. The present bill does not require that. The bill, in substance, requires that every packer shall be compelled to place on the cans the city, town or village, name of county and state where the goods were packed, preceded by the words "packed at," and bearing his own name or the name of the corporation which puts up the goods. This will do away with what are known in the trade as "seconds." Standard and extra brands both have to have the name of the packing company on the can, together with the brand.

THE SCANDINAVIAN CELEBRATION. The flags throughout the city fluttered in the breeze yesterday in honor of the 71st anniversary of Scandinavian nationality. At two o'clock a procession was formed which marched through the principal streets of the city. It was headed by the stars and stripes flanked by the Norwegian and Swedish national colors. Cashing Post band furnished the music. The procession was composed of several hundred of our Scandinavian citizens wearing rosettes and marshaled by J. M. Olsen, M. Olsen, G. O. Smith and others. After parading the principal streets of the city the column marched to the Columbia cannery where they assembled in the large hall up stairs. Mr. C. A. Hanson called the audience to order and after music by the Cashing Post band, introduced with a few fitting remarks, the speaker of the day, Mr. Bjelnes who, in the Norwegian language, spoke of the important event that led to the observance of the 71st anniversary, touching on the historic points which clustered round that day of glorious memory and the political changes that have followed.

A double quartette of male voices, rendered some excellent vocal music in the Scandinavian tongue, which was well received and enthusiastically encored. There is a hidden talent of music in our Norse citizens which ought to be cultivated and utilized with profit, both to themselves and others. Mr. C. A. Hanson next gave a short address in English, to the effect that the day is being observed in honor of the cause of national freedom. After which he introduced F. D. Winton, Hon. C. Leinenweber, Messrs. H. Oberg, Thos. Dealy and Dr. T. T. Cabanus, all of which addressed the assembly in brief but fitting remarks, extolling the Scandinavians on their memories from home and the excellent qualities which have fitted them for American citizenship.

A SCRAP OF EARLY OREGON HISTORY.

In 1828 Messrs. Marshall & Wild, of Boston, Mass., fitted out two brigas (Conroy and Ouchyhe) for a voyage to the northwest coast of America, in the fur trade. The Conroy, to which I was attached, sailed on the 28th of June, 1828 two months previous to the Ouchyhe. We passed through the strait of Magellan, touching at the Society and Sandwich islands, and after an eventful voyage completed our passage from Boston to Astoria in about seven months. At the time of our sighting the land in the vicinity of Columbia river a brig was also seen steering in for land. We entered Baker's Bay, near Cape Disappointment, late in the day and anchored, while our consort which proved to be the brig Eagle of and from London, in attempting to enter more to the southward grounded upon a sand spit off Chenuke Point, and during the night went to pieces, vessel and cargo proving a total loss. The crew after landing with their boats upon the point, were there and then murdered by the Chenuke Indians, and not a soul left to tell the tale. On the following morning at noon the coast became known, our Captain (Thompson), dispatched a boat up to Fort Vancouver with the sad intelligence, and a party of Canadian trappers in employ of the Hudson Bay company, proceeded down the river and retaliated severely upon the Chenuke Indians from both front and rear. After a delay of a few days we proceeded up the river and moored our vessel inside the Willamette upon the starboard shore about two miles from the mouth, where we unbenumbed and prepared for a long stay, built temporary workshops for the carpenter (Arnarner) and sailmaker and cultivated a vegetable garden, which proved a great success. Our vessel now properly loaded was used as a base to operate from with boats and a large canoe laden with goods and trading with Indians for furs at various distances and directions from the ship, and were thus employed for about two years with an occasional trip to the coast of the Columbia to the Russian settlement, and after trading along the coast returned to our location on the Willamette, where our former operations were continued with marked success, we left for Canton, touching at San Francisco and the Sandwich Islands, and from thence to New York, where we arrived after an absence of three years and two months.

THE GLASS OF FASHION.

The Latest Styles Worn this Season.

The summer bison cloth is extremely stylish and rivals etamine in popularity. The etamine, with the rough surface, having a sort of camel-hair effect, is perhaps the prettier of the two, and certainly newer than anything. Some of the new goods deserve no better name than that of canvas, which they certainly are; and though, when dressed up with a quantity of long hairs or run through bonnetre style, in regular stripes and plaids, nothing can be more charming, canvas, in its unadorned condition, is not desirable as a gown. The only objection to these soft, open materials is that they require a foundation, and as the foundation of a handsome dress should be unquestionably of silk, the expense of a spring costume is immediately doubled.

Canvas gresadine in solid colors with a border half a yard wide of alternative squares of a contrasting color is exceedingly pretty. Navy blue with bonnetre blocked with red is, as this combination always proves, handsomer than any other, but the garnet with eero, brown and gold, green and gray, and brown and red are also pretty in greater or less degree. All these materials vary in desirability with their cost, which ranges from 75 cents to $3.70 a yard.

Fashion dresses are very much worn and rich in variety. One charming costume is of white bison cloth, combined with the same material in a stylish Persian design of blue fade and garnet on a white ground. The skirt is absolutely full and graceful, bordered with the figured material, which also serves for a wide collar, cuffs and small vest in the basque. This vest is apparently confined by three knotted silk cords of the three colors—blue, red and white. One is loosely passed across the bust, the other at the waist, the third about four inches below the bust, and all three are fastened at the front of the basque, giving a princess effect. A very French and complicated affair is a part of the same trousseau, and intended for a ball dress. It is rather elaborate for the seaside, but a deep feathery fringe and tied behind in an enormous bow with long ends. Beneath the basque are two deep puffs of the white cloth, carried entirely around either side of the bust, and the skirt opens to the waist, finished by a jabot of lace, over a vest of a deeper shade of blue velvet. There are small puffs of white illusion in place of the bust.

Among the cotton fabrics is something new in the shape of Turkish and cottons. They are solid colors, navy blue, red, brown, wink and gray, with tufted stripes or dots, or else they are any one of the colors tufted in any one of the others. It is impossible to describe the texture of the material, but the most assured of the salesman one tests the texture between finger and thumb, and then feels but half convinced. They possess all the charm of the new material, but they lack the freshness of the pretty percales, satins and French prints; they cost from 60 to 75 cents a yard, which puts them at a disadvantage. After the thin material of the Orientals, the most charming which tinges the newest manufacturers and among the countless charming patterns in this style there are a few of those readily designs of the Orientals, in colors and shades and all other jangle effects such as one finds on calico "comforters" of country hotels. Passing them with a shudder, the eye is attracted by exquisite lace and embroideries to correspond. These are pattern dresses, of course, and cost from $5 to $20 and $30; they are laid out in little flat boxes and are enticing to a degree. The fabrics of the Orientals, among its embroideries, and there is also displayed the picture of a young woman arrayed in one of these costumes, and she is such a brilliant success that one buys the box with the reckless determination to look precisely like her. White dresses are most elaborate, and multiplicity of their styles defy the power of the pen.

"By way of warning," remarked the clerk of this department, "with colored ribbons and stockings," throwing as he spoke a cardinal sash and a pair of cardinal silk hose against the pretty costumes, and he again to see the ugliness of the stockings which have replaced the becoming black ones. Little checks that divide the leg into countless spaces and forbid even the suggestion of roundness, or under longitudinal stripes, or worse than all others, irregular blocks and disks! Well! It is consoling to reflect that there are doubtless a few women who have the fashion will not be the first consideration.

The new Parisian bustle is an affair which requires consideration. It is not a delicate trifle, the Parisian bustle; it is a contrivance—a jumble and stately combination of silk, whalebone, steel-spring and lacing. It has an independent swing that is the pride of its wearer and the terror of the passer-by. It has somewhat the effect of a propelling power though I doubt if it really materially aids locomotion. In the hand it compels admiration, since about it there is no vestige of mobair, half-cloth and skeleton-like ensemble peculiar to the American bustle. It has an anatomy that is almost human. It is covered in cashmere, silk or satin in pale-blue, with little ruffles edged with mason-velvet or corduroy with black trimmings, and so on through the scale of colors—and prices from $5 to $15.—Fashion Letter.
