A young man named Folsom Bowser applied to a wealthy Austin stockman for a position on his staff—to go west and herd sheep at $10 a month—but the stockman said he was not hiring anybody to herd his sheep. "Have you all the shepherds you require?" asked Folsom Bowser. "No, I am needing several, but I'm going to wait until the president has made his appointments." "What has that got to do with herding sheep?" "It has a great deal to do with it. As soon as Cleveland has made his appointments I can have my pick of disappointed applicants, who will be willing to hire for nothing, but their grub, just to get out into the country. The sheep industry of western Texas is suffering from the tardiness of the President.—Texas Siftings

Speaking of the recent earthquake the Harrington Times says the only damage done there was the cracking of the mammoth statue of Washington, which stands in the vestibule of the opera house on Main street. However, the vibrations were distinctly felt at the summit of many eight-story buildings. The Seattle Chronicle says "the stupendous gall of this can be appreciated when we relate that Harrington is made up of four sod houses and a livery stable."

New York saloon keepers say that the demand for hot beef tea is increasing. It is now a favorite drink with many workmen, who find its exhilarating qualities superior to those of whiskey in more than one respect.
