BIG MONEY.

The enormous earnings of the Columbia River Fishermen.

"We're all making our fortunes," said an upper Astoria fisherman to THE ASTORIAN man yesterday morning, as he leaned against the net rack of the cannery, and looked down at the boat that he had made so many stormy trips in. "I suppose," he went on, "that every one just at present thinks that he has a tough time of it, but if you'll just listen a minute, I'll give you a bit of an item about the 'big wages,' the '$125 a month clear,' that we fishermen make."

"Go ahead," was the answer, and as his partner sent up the net for him to reef off to dry, he said: "There is no secret of talking about the 'big wages' of the life. I never saw hard work yet that was easy, and I guess we who go out in all weathers to take our chances have just about the same amount of hard work as others who make money certainly no less. But I'd like to have some of those fellows who talk about big wages try it for awhile. They're welcome to all the 'big wages' they can make fishing in the Columbia river. Now here it is the last of the month. I went out for this cannery on the 25th of April. I've been fishing just a month, and I think, if anything, I've had a little more than average luck. During the month I've caught 253 fish. Fifteen cents on every one of them fish goes to the cannery; that's $37.95; that leaves 30 cents for the boat; now the 253 fish bring $75.00 to the boat. Out of that $75.00 I have to give my partner fourteen cents a fish, or $35.38; so you see that I have just $40 left for my month's work. Forty dollars for going down near that bar and drifting for a month. How do you like it? Where's the big wages?"

The reporter looked at the long stretch of water, now rippling in the sunshine, and thought of the dark nights, the sudden gale from the southwest, the danger from wind and wave and the ever present possibility of wreck and death, and agreed with his informant that $40 a month for such work as he had to do was, as he said, the reverse of encouraging. His only hope is in the increased June and July run which may give him a chance to make something.

MEMORIAL DAY.

HEADQUARTERS GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE, TOLEDO, OHIO, April 30, 1883. GENERAL ORDERS, No. 15.

In accordance with rules and regulations, May 30th will be observed as Memorial Day. As defined by resolution of the eighteenth annual encampment, it will be kept sacred to the memory of our heroic valor, a holier care for the men who saved the Union.

Twenty years have passed since our last grand review. The death-roll of years has added tens of thousands to the half-million graves we left behind. The daily tolling bell, the freshly knotted wreath, the muffled drum, the slow and solemn procession, tell how fast our comrades join the silent ranks above. One by one a gallant leader languishes upon his couch of pain, and over myriads of homes the death angel hovers darkly. Hallowed be the day that brings such thoughts as these.

Our comrades sleep well. No tear can disturb their profound slumber; no perfume of flowers make their rest more sweet. But wherever Memorial Day is observed there rises a higher ideal of American valor, a holier care for the men who saved the Union.

Let Posts of the Grand Army everywhere assemble. Enlist all loyal hearts in an observance of the day. Let the women and children be invited to all who reverence the flag unite in the ministrations of loyalty and affection. Let the custom of inviting the clergy to hold memorial services on the Sunday preceding Memorial day be again commended, and comrades should feel it a privilege and duty to attend.

Where there are no graves to gather around, as on the far frontier, memorial services may still be held. Where there are no flowers to wreath, there still remains that perfect flower of Freedom—the Red, White and Blue. Above each soldier's grave may his benediction fall.

The flowers of love are immortal. Be it ours to cherish them in our hearts and let their fragrance fill our lives.

By command of J. S. KOSTER, Commander-in-Chief.

W. W. ALBORN, Adjutant General.

A TUSSE IN THE PARK.

Resulting in The Capture of Lone Star Barker.

Last Tuesday Mr. Barker, living on the corner of Ninth and Cedar streets, paid off one Clark, that worthy having been his boat puller. Clark, who is well-known under the sobriquet of the "Lone Star Fisherman" had some grudge against Barker and proceeded to carry it into execution. Sometime Wednesday night Mrs. Barker was awakened by a noise, and saw a man standing at the foot of the bed with a gun or rifle in his hands. She asked who he was and what he wanted and was told "I don't want to hurt you; I am after that—there."

The woman screamed and bounded out of the bed, grappling with the man and throwing the gun around. He seeing that the husband was awake and about to take a hand in the struggle, wrested himself away, and backed in the next room, where he brought the gun to his shoulder; Mrs. Barker pulled the door to and Clark then jumped out of the window and made his escape in safety.

The affair made considerable stir in the neighborhood, and about 6 o'clock Thursday evening as Robert Carruthers was unhitching his horses he saw a man in his stocking feet slipping stealthily under Barker's house; calling assistance he was arrested. He had gone in with yellow clothes on and came out with a pair suit. Investigation proved it to be the "Lone Star Fisherman" who it appears was not content with getting away, but returned after his clothes which he had left under the house, and also a knife. Barker, when he saw Clark, was for taking satisfaction out of him then and there but he was restrained and Clark was brought for preliminary examination before Justice Welch who held him in the sum of $500 to await the action of the September grand jury.

DEATH OF IRVING STEVENS.

Universal Regret Over the Death of a Good Man.

"Irving Stevens is dead," was the sad news that spread through the city yesterday, and seldom has there been a more universal regret over the death of any of Astoria's citizens. He had been ailing for some time, but it was hoped that his usually good constitution would enable him to pull through, but the rheumatic fever sapped his life away, and about half past three yesterday morning he breathed his last.

Capt. Irving Stevens was born in La Salle county, Illinois, and at the time of his death was in his 47th year. When but a lad he came to Oregon with his parents, Ching Stevens and wife, who have the sympathy of the community in their bereavement.

For many years Capt. Stevens has been pilot on the ocean steamers between here and Portland, and had a large circle of friends and acquaintances who heard with deep regret of his death. He was a genial, whole-souled man with a ready joke and laugh for every one, a merry twinkle in his eye, and a never-failing fund of good humor; he was a good husband and father, and leaves a wife and two children. In the lodge room, at the meetings of the fire company, and in all the daily walks of life he was a welcome comrade and one of the most popular men in the place. He was a generous man, not given to proclaiming his deeds of charity, but always ready with open hand to help a friend.

The funeral will take place from the Congregational church at two o'clock to-morrow afternoon, and will be conducted by Ocean Encampment No. 13, and Beaver Lodge No. 25, I. O. O. F., of which he was an honored member.

RAILROAD ETIQUETTE.

Many people have traveled all their lives and yet do not know how to behave when on the road. For the benefit and guidance of such, these few crisp, plain, horse-sense rules of etiquette have been framed:

In traveling by rail, on foot, turn to the right on discovering an approaching train. If you wish the train to turn out, give two loud toots and get in between the rails so that you will not muss up the right of way. Many a nice, new right of way has been ruined by getting a pedestrian tourist splattered all over its first mortgage.

If you are prone to drop to sleep and breathe with a low, death rattle, like the exhaust of a bath tub, it would be a good plan to tie up your head in a feather bed and then insert the whole thing in the linen closet, or if you cannot secure that, you might stick it out of the window and get it knocked off against a tunnel. The stock holders of the road might get mad about it but you can do it in such a way that they wouldn't know whose head it was.

Ladies and gentlemen should guard against traveling by rail while in a beastly state of intoxication.

In the dining car, while eating, do not comb your moustache with your fork. By all means do not comb your moustache with the fork of another. It is better to refrain altogether from combing the moustache with fork while traveling for the motion of the train might jab the fork into your eye and irritate it.

If your dessert is very hot and you do not discover it until you have burned the rafters off the roof of your mouth, do not utter a wild yell of agony and spill your coffee all over a total stranger, but control yourself, hoping to know more next time.

In the morning is a good time to find out how many people have succeeded in getting on the passenger train who ought to be in the stock car.

Generally, you will find one male and one female. The male goes into the wash room, bathes his worthless carcass from daylight until breakfast time, walking on the feet of any man who tries to wash his face during that time. He then returns to the car, and sits down, because when he gets home he knows he will have to wipe his face on an old door mat. People who have been reared on hay all their lives, generally want to fill themselves full of pie and coffee before they travel.

The female of this same mammal goes into the ladies' department and remains there till starvation drives her out. Then she goes to the wash room, and washes her face in which to dress.

If you never rode in a varnished car before and never expect to again, you will probably run up and down the car, nagging over the feet of the porter, while he is making up the berth. This is a good way to let people see just how little sense you had left after your brain began to soften.—Bill Nye.

AN INNOCENT MAN.

But Recommended For Rebuke by a Jury.

The trial of Pasquella Commetta, on a charge of kidnapping, came up in the court yesterday afternoon, and from its singularity, as well as other reasons, attracted a large crowd.

The defendant was charged with having enticed and abducted two girls, daughters of Mrs. Taylor of upper Astoria, into his fishing boat and taken them toward Tongue point, being afterwards pursued and compelled to give up the girls. This was elicited in the evidence. He was defended by C. W. Fulton and Noland & Dorris; F. D. Winton assisting District Attorney McBride in the prosecution. The case was argued in due form and given to a jury of twelve good men and true, who soon brought in a verdict of "not guilty." Tacked on to this verdict was a recommendation to Judge Taylor that he administer "a severe rebuke" to the prisoner, but as he had been declared not guilty by the jury, his honor was not exactly clear as to the propriety of rebuking an innocent man, and therefore failed to comply with the recommendation. There is a Scotch verdict called "not proven," which is sometimes symbolized in our American courts. There is also an Arkansas verdict—"not guilty; but don't you do it again."
