THE ARMY IN ARIZONA.

Judging from the reports we are receiving from Arizona and Mexico it is the Indians who are hunting the United States troops and not the troops who are hunting the Indians. It seems odd that seventy Indian bucks can chase 1,000 United States soldiers up and down the defiles in the mountains, but they appear to be doing it. Last week the hostiles captured Captain Lawton's supply camp, just across the border, and an Indian scout testifies that but for the assistance of the scouts, Geronimo would have cut off the troops who were sent in chase of him to a man. From every point the reports concur in stating that the army is helpless. From Guadalupe canyon the story comes that the troops are "out of provisions and cannot move till they get fresh supplies." From another point we hear that "it is impossible to do much on account of the lack of transportation." From yet another we are told that "the experience of this campaign has demonstrated the inability of the troops to dislodge the Indians in any instance." The savages, we know, have neither supplies nor transportation, yet they manage to get along and to keep murdering a man or two a day without molestation.

Officers of the army must be surprised if this campaign yields fruits that will not be palatable to the profession. It is strengthening the belief, which has long been current in Arizona, that the army does not want to punish Indian outbreaks; that it deals with them gently, because, if they were wholly suppressed, the occupation of the whole of the territory and the large expenditure of money for army purposes in Arizona would cease. It may be assumed, as a matter of course, that the whole subject of this last Indian uprising will be taken up in congress, and that the lukewarm policy of the army officers in Arizona will strengthen the position of that large and increasing body of members who oppose army appropriations and insist on a reduction of our standing army to some 10,000 men. It can certainly be urged that the money which has thus far been spent in the pretense of hunting the Chiricahuas, has been practically thrown away, and the views of the enemies of the United States army will command the more weight if they are studied in the light of such ill-considered comments as those which lately emanated from the President.

The American army in time of peace has never been a popular institution. A feeling prevails that it is officered by men whose citizenship is smothered by their devotion to their caste. The opposition to the West Point appropriation appears to gain strength each year. Various motives are assigned for opposing it, but the real reason is that people have got to thinking that the military academy is a nursery for a military aristocracy, which resents with scorn civilian criticism. It would not require much of an effort to defeat the appropriation altogether and to close up an institution which appears to be maintained for the benefit of the sons of officers.

The greater number of cannerymen on the Columbia river no longer employ Chinamen, who form nearly the entire force in canneries, by the month. They contract with a gang of Chinamen to put up the fish, taking them from the dock where they are landed and putting them through all the different manipulations necessary up to mailing up the cases. The whole work is done by this plan for 42 cents a case. When the men were employed by the month it cost about 50 cents a case. It takes a much less number of men to do the work now, as the men are willing to work early and late, and every one pulls out and does his level best, as the more they do the more they make. Visitors to salmon canneries are amazed at the swiftness and dexterity the Chinamen acquire in the various departments of the work. Each Chinaman has some particular branch of the business, and will not work at any other if he can avoid it. The rate per case given above does not, of course, include the cans or cases or labels which are furnished by the canners.

St. Paul, June 15.—A dispatch from the Chipewyan mission portage, Beaver river, says: A courier just arrived from Middleton's camp, near Loon lake, reports that Big Bear is heading this way. Steele's men are pressing him very hard. The river has risen several feet in the past few days, thus preventing Big Bear from crossing with his stock east of this point. The Sixty-fifth are stationed three miles down the river, and the timber being heavy east of there, Big Bear will come in by an untraveled trail, and will thus be snared.

London, June 15.—The Russian fleet in the Japan sea has taken possession of a port in Corea.

The World-renowned Notre Dame. The Sister of the head is kept soft and flexible by a secretion from the oil glands. When these are clogged the hair dries and falls off. Parker's Hair Balsam renews their action, restores the original color to the hair and makes it soft and glossy. It also eradicates dandruff. Not greasy, not a dye, deliciously perfumed. De-lightful for a lady's toilet table. The best of dressings. Preferable to all similar articles because of its superior cleanliness and purity.

ENGLISH POLITICS.

New York, June 15.—A cable special from London says: "There is joy among the beaten and sorrow among the victors. Such is the paradoxical effect of the defeat of the liberals. On the first night of their victory the young Tories, with Chamberlain leading, threw up their hats in frenzied joy, uncontrollable joy. Ever since the Tory faces have been lengthening with doubts and fears, and becoming pale and sickly with lack of resolution. The transformation is so absurdly complete that some of the Tory journals go to the length of grumbling that the ministry played for a fall, and tricked the Tories into victory. It is certain that their defeat was in many respects a God-send. The ministers were as hopelessly divided as ever on the subject of Irish coercion, up to the very afternoon of the defeat. It is now whispered that Gladstone was among the opponents of coercion, and thus the ministers were face to face with a collapse or a dishonorable and perilous compromise, when their enemies came to their release.

The defeat of the ministers give them a breathing space between their term of office and the general election. It is an important advantage, and it may lead to the most beneficial results to have a Tory government to criticize. The liberals will be able quietly to shelve the past and concentrate their attention upon promises for the future. Thus a laborious if not an impossible defense of coercion in Ireland, of the massacres in the Sudan, and of the crimes and contradictions of the whole of Egyptian policy is rendered needless. The radicals will doubtless reply to all demands for apologies on these subjects that they are matter of ancient history and the people are more anxious about an English bill to break the feudal system, about the reform or abolition of the house of lords, about the housing of workmen and about other socialistic remedies which are so popular with the political disciples of Chamberlain. Already the radicals have made that step in advance which is always the result of accession of the Tories to power.

Sir Charles Dilke is urging local self-government for Ireland with a degree of boldness unknown when he was in office, and Chamberlain makes no concealment of his intention to make this a prominent plank in his new platform.

New York, June 15.—The Sun and other eastern journals that are contending that the depressed state of trade arises from efforts in Europe and America to maintain gold as a standard of value, notwithstanding the increased and increasing purchasing power of the metal, had themselves fortified in their conclusions by a careful and exhaustive review just made of the financial and English situation by the eminent English statistician, Robert Griffin, who declares it is impossible to avoid the conclusion that the recent course of prices, so different from what it was just after the Australian and the California discoveries, is the result, in part, of diminished production and increased extraordinary demands upon the supply of gold. Mr. Griffin has no hope of any immediate improvement in the present condition of things, because, in his opinion, the increase in production will go on, when the supply of silver, as well as that of gold, will diminish. The Sun urges the prompt adoption of silver as a standard instead of gold, declaring that it would arrest the decline in prices to a great extent, and palliate it if it did not cure the evil of dull trade.

Outcast London. Much excitement has been made by reports recently published on the vile condition of the slums of London. In one cellar was found a family consisting of a man sick with small-pox, his dying wife, three half-naked and dirty children, and one pig. In some parts there is one gin-mill to every hundred persons. What defilement! Yet corresponding impurities often defile the human blood. They can be cast out by Brown's Iron Bitters, the great strengthener and purifier. Mr. B. J. Strange, of Stark Lake, Florida, says, "Brown's Iron Bitters is the best blood purifier I ever tried. It gives all the satisfaction a man can want."

London, June 15.—The steamer Spekehall, from Liverpool for Bombay, has foundered in a cyclone in cyclone in the Gulf of Aden. There was only one survivor.

An exchange says that some boys in Milford found a large adder in the woods the day before election. A good many astonishing adders have been found all over the country since election day.

Parker's Hair Balsam renews their action, restores the original color to the hair and makes it soft and glossy. It also eradicates dandruff. Not greasy, not a dye, deliciously perfumed.
