Recent changes in the Union Pacific recall some interesting events connected with the early history of the The projectors and prompters of this railway across the continent, it will be remembered, never expected to make it a paying enterprise. John B. Alley once said that whoever regarded it as a good investment "was a — fool." Among the numerous "construction" companies, the head men in which were officers of the road, was one known as "Davis and Associates," which had an immensely fat contract for furnishing all the ties, bridge timbers and lumber needed from Cheyenne west to Promontory. "Davis and Associates" sub-let their contract in such a manner as to reserve a princely margin for them-When the worst was completed the Union Pacific was owing "Davis and Associates" $770,000, and they in turn were largely indebted to the sub-conractors, one Christopher Christopher looking after their interests. The latter loudly demanded their money and made it hot for Christopher, who upon investigation, became convinced that the $750,000 was kept back in accordance with an agreement be-tween the then vice-president of the road and his partners in the firm of "Davis and Associates."

The scheme was to tire out all par-ties by delay and work the 10 centson-the-dollar racket. Christopher saw that his own life would be in jeopardy if this job was careied

About this time Durant, Duff and other directors were making a tour of inspection over the road and Christopher conceived the idea of stopping their train and holding stopping their train and holding them as prisoners until they paid the claim of "Davis and Associates." It was a bold thing to do, but with the help of a young telegraph operator it was done and the train switched off on a side track. Christopher went into the car and explained the position of things. The director position of things. The directors send for "How to Cure Sain Diseases

After forty-eight hours' parleying Durant sent Duff out with $50,000, which they had in a safe in the car, and telegraphed to Omaha for as much more. When the $100,000 was handed over Durant made more pledges, but the car was not allowed to proceed. The $50,000 was bor-rowed from a New Yorker named Wilson, who was in the party. The cash was taken, but the captors still refused to let their prisoners go. Finally Henry Rogers, a banker at Cheyenne, was sent for, and on his arrival Durant made drafts on New York for $600,000, which were paid. Then Davis put in a claim for the money as trustee for "Davis and Associates," but Christopher ignored him until he had paid the sub-contractors in full, when he handed their receipts and the balance of the money to Davis. When the directors' car pulled out on its way east Durant and Duff both promised Christopher that they would not rest until they had sent him to the penitentiary - but they changed their minds and did not.

It took only fourteen months for a Wall street man to build a $250,000 house, put in $90,000 worth of furniture, lose his fortune, move to the country and take a situation at $20 per week .- Detroit Free Press.
