OREGON AND WASHINGTON SPRUCE.

At Montesano, May 19th, a correspondent of the Northwestern Lumberman wrote as follows:

How many "substitutes for white pine" have been brought forward since the wise men of the Census Bureau discovered in 1880 that the supply of that valuable timber would be exhausted in a few years? From the present state of the market I judge that there is still some white pine left, and that dealers are not apprehensive of its immediate extinction. But though it is doubtless true that the timber of the lake region will last for many years yet, I think it will be admitted that the finer grades of white pine are becoming so scarce and high priced that a wood to partially take its place is a desideratum. Of all the timbers yet offered for that purpose only one, southern yellow pine, has made any headway, and that is only one line, flooring and ceiling. For finishing lumber in common buildings, for siding, for the cheaper grades of dressed and matched lumber, for the common boards so largely used throughout the west, I think I am safe in saying that no lumber has yet been found on the Pacific slope to take the place of white pine. Probably no perfect substitute for that magnificent timber will ever be found; but I think we have in a comparatively neglected tree of the north Pacific coast a material that will yet be shipped east of the Rocky mountains for some of the uses we have mentioned. The tree I refer to is the Sitka spruce, which is found in abundance over the entire region west of the Cascade mountains from 100 miles south of the Columbia river to the British Columbia line.

The tree is of great size, a height of 250 feet, and a diameter of six feet being not uncommon. The wood is rather heavier than white pine, which it somewhat resembles in appearance, and weighs rough, when dry, about 2800 pounds to the thousand feet. The logs yield a large percentage of clear lumber, which takes under the plane a beautiful, smooth, silky surface. It makes excellent finishing lumber and siding, as it is entirely free from pitch, and takes paint even better than white pine. A valuable feature is the nature of the knots, which are nearly all hard and sound,

"live knots," which will not knot out, and which make even the coarsest of the lumber available for the "barn boards" in such demand among western farmers. It also makes splendid shingles, and I think an absolutely clear shingle can be produced here cheaper than anywhere else in the United States. For packing boxes it is quite extensively used on this coast, and unequalled for that purpose by any timber I know of.

In the last two years quite a demand for spruce boards for lining grain vessels has arisen in San Francisco, but there is as yet no steady market for it, and spruce stumpage is not in much demand. California uses redwood almost entirely for finishing, and in this region the native cedar is used because it furnishes a material that is easily worked, and shrinks so little that it may be made into doors, etc., without seasoning. Had it not been for these two competitors the merits of the spruce would have been recognized long ago.

We also have, in our fir, a material equal in most respects to the southern yellow pine, and far superior in size and accessibility. Should the southern pine ever be exterminated, as we are told the white pine is being, Washington territory and Oregon would be able to furnish in unlimited quantities a clear, rift-sawn fir flooring as good as any yellow pine I have ever seen; and in all the attributes of a good framing material it is superior to either white or yellow pine.

Mail advices from Fort Spokane bring news of the drowning on the 9th inst. of two soldiers of Troop H, second cavalry. While out fishing on the Spokane river their boat upset and they sank before assistance could reach them. On Monday, the 8th inst., a son of Chief Moses was drowned in the Columbia at Fort Spokane. This makes six persons drowned near the fort within one month, and none of their bodies have been recovered.

Reports from the Willamette valley say the hop yield will be large this year. The same report comes from Puyallup valley. All that is wanted is reasonably fair prices and the growers will be satisfied. Last year's prices were 12 to 15 cents per pound, but at present 5 to 9 cents is quoted.

At the last figures there is hardly any margin of profit for the growers. The yield of 1882 brought on an average $1 per pound.

Why Do Doctors Prescribe Liquors?
Because they know not what else to do; or because sometimes a little liquor serves to kindle the exhausted fires of digestion. But this liquor prescription is bad business for the patients, for it makes drunkards out of a large majority of them. Brown's Iron Bitters does not kindle a temporary fire. It nourishes, enriches, strengthens, purifies. It drives out debility and dyspepsia, and sets the invigorated system at work on a basis of health.

The proper weight of a man is 154 pounds, according to Professor Huxley's estimate.

CATTLE THIEVES IN URGAY.

"Cattle thieves in the land where I raise stock," said a Montevideo cattle breeder visiting New York, "have discovered a new and ingenious mode of distinguishing their booty. Last autumn I lost several head, and half a dozen times I and my men, with the mounted policemen, came up with the thieves, and I saw with them cattle that I knew at once were mine. My brand was on them (J. M.) and sometimes there were scars on the bodies that I know quite well. The animals were exactly like mine in every respect but one. The horns branched differently. If those on my cows had pointed up they were dropped toward the ground, and often one pointed forward and the other backward, or one toward the sky and the other toward the earth.

"J. M." the drover said, "were his own or his employer's initials. The cattle were certainly mine, but I could not swear to them, and I was obliged to see them taken away."

"The thieves had kept the horns wrapped in poultices of boiling hot meal until they were soft enough to be twisted, and thus destroyed the cows' identity. The horns soon hardened when the poultices were removed."

"I have been told that the trick was invented by Russian cattle thieves. I wish they had kept it at home."

Steamer Seized.

Deputy Collector, Frank Winslow arrived last evening from Semiahmoo, his new station. He made his first appearance there on Friday last, and found the British steamer Hope in port. Captain Bentley claimed, he went there in distress, but Mr. Winslow learned that he had been there thirty-six hours, and had had connection with the shore several times, contrary to the laws of our country. The deputy took charge of the vessel on behalf of the United States, and securing the services of Captain Davis, late of the Esperanza, left Semiahmoo at 5 P. M. Friday for Port Townsend, handing her over to the collector on arrival. For offenses of this character the penalty is a fine of $1000, which the collector will impose. The steamer Hope was built in 1874, and was owned by Mr. Sayward, of Victoria. Seattle Post-Intelligencer, 11.

Last Sunday, the second son of Mr. Hamilton, aged 12 years, was drowned in the middle fork of the Willamette river, near A. D. Hyland's ferry, while he and an older brother and his uncle, R. Miller, were attempting to ford the river. Getting into deep water the wagon box floated off, and with the boy was carried under a drift near by. The other two came near losing their lives. They got out by getting hold of the horses.
