

The Daily Astorian.

ASTORIA, OREGON:
THURSDAY, JUNE 18, 1885
WATERLOO.

SEVENTY years ago to-day the greatest European battle since Fontenoy was fought at Waterloo, and though greater battles have been chronicled in history there are few that have been more productive of far reaching results. The third generation of Englishmen are still paying taxes engendered by the expenses of the campaign that battle closed and a like period of enforced economy in hundreds of thousands of French households has not yet paid the debt that was the price of Napoleon's glory.

Viewed as a vanishing perspective Napoleon and Wellington and Blucher are as remote as Tilly or Marlborough, Turenne or Wallenstein. They belong to a half-forgotten era and their prestige perished with the epoch in which they played so prominent a part. Since Waterloo the victories of peace have been more pronounced and permanent than those of any of the numerous wars that have devastated the earth through all the hundred years of world advancement and when in the future is written the history of this nineteenth century the brilliant record of advancement in all that makes a people great will outline the blood smeared page that tells of carnage and the death of millions to gratify lust of power and ambition.

On the 30th of May, 1878, when Voltaire had been dead a hundred years, Victor Hugo addressed words of impassioned eloquence to a vast concourse of all that was most enlightened and most masculine in France. The discourse on that occasion was the crowning utterance of this century. Here is a part of it which kindled the audience to the noblest enthusiasm, spoken as it was almost within sight of the world's exposition of that year:

"If to kill is a crime, to kill much can not be an extenuating circumstance. If to steal is a disgrace, to invade can not be a glory. Te Deum are of small significance here; homicide is homicide; bloodshed is bloodshed; it alters nothing to call one's self Caesar or Napoleon; in the eyes of the Eternal God a murderer is not changed in character because, instead of a hangman's cap, there is placed upon his head an emperor's crown. Ah! let us proclaim virtues! Let us dishonor war! No; bloody glory does not exist. No; it is not good, and it is not useful to make corpses. No; it can not be that life should travel for death. No; O mothers who surround me, it cannot be that war, the thief, is to continue to take your offspring. No, it cannot be that women are to bear children in anguish, that men are to be born, that communities are to plow and sow, that the peasant is to fertilize the fields and the workmen enrich the cities, that thinkers are to meditate, that industry is to perform its marvels, that genius is to execute its prodigies, that the vast human activity is to multiply in the presence of the starry heavens its efforts and its creations in order to produce that frightful international exposition which is called a field of battle! The true field of battle—(pointing to the exhibition)—behold it! It is this rendezvous of the masterpieces of human labor which Paris at this moment offers to the world!"

Human life is made up of two elements—power and form. In the days of Waterloo form was in the ascendant; to-day, power, the power of the people, the power of ideas, the power of progress, the power of wide diffusion of knowledge, rules the earth, and it is but the twilight glimmering that precedes the perfect day when Waterloos will be impossible, and the words of Jeanne in the good old song will have come to pass, "I'd have those that made the quarrels be the only ones to fight."

The Canadian Pacific has been completed within ten miles of the summit of the Selkirk, and only seventy miles of the contract work of the Onderdonks remain to be finished. At present there are 5,000 men at work on the road, 1,000 having been sent out within the last ten days, and within a month 2,000 more will be forwarded. The line is now being operated to the first crossing of the Columbia river, a distance of 1,025 miles from Winnipeg.

At least 4,000 persons are under the management and direction of the commissioner of pensions. The salary list amounts to $1,000,000 annually, exclusive of pension agents and examining surgeons. The mail received averages 7,500 pieces daily. The mail sent out is much larger.

FIFTEEN YEARS OF GROWTH.

WILLIAM BRID of Portland has issued a treatise on the progress of that city and the state from 1870 to the present time, dealing with each important item in the business life of the country. The fifteen years under review, says the Oregonian, cover the period of our important development and of the author's connection with Oregon affairs.

Our growth in population is traced with interesting detail. On the 1st of January, 1868, the population of the entire state was 80,171, while the population of Portland was 6,717; that of Salem 1,200; Albany 856, and Astoria 556. Of this number scarcely 10,000 persons were located east of the Cascade mountains. Two years later the state's population was 90,983, and the number of inhabitants in Portland, owing to the building of the east and west side railroads, increased from 6,717 to 11,103 by the 1st of January, 1872. From that time till the 1st of January, 1874, the growth was small or nothing. Jay Cooke & Co.'s failure, and the stoppage of work on the O. C. and O. & C. roads, effectually put a stop to immigration. Portland and suburbs had, on the 1st of January, 1874, 12,459 inhabitants, while the state's population aggregated 95,673 persons. From 1875 to 1878, the population of the state, including Portland and Astoria, had increased considerably; but the most rapid stride in population has been in eastern Oregon and Washington during the last eight years. In 1874 the entire number of white persons therein amounted to only 15,000, and to-day official statistics and the last presidential vote show there are now in eastern Oregon and eastern Washington territory over 150,000 persons; in Portland and suburbs, 35,000; Astoria, 6,000; Salem, the capital of the state, 5,500; and the entire population of the state about 300,000.

To those who remember the old grist mill, with its single or double run of stone, its lazy wheel, and the miller who was boss, and all hands, the feat of one of the great Minneapolis mills in turning out 6,200 barrels of flour in one day, seems to mark as great an advance in mechanical appliances and business enterprise as can be shown in any manufactures.

The growth of some of the southern states is illustrated by the statement concerning Chattanooga that it has increased since the war "from a clump of whitewashed warehouses and shanties to a city of 25,000 inhabitants; from a tax-roll of $1,300,000 to one of $7,000,000; and has increased its business capital from $200,000 to $5,000,000."

The woman suffrage question has ceased to be, "Why should women be allowed to vote?" and has assumed instead this form: "When will women in general be convinced that it is their duty to vote?" Whosoever can answer this question can predict very accurately the time when woman suffrage will be universally accepted.

It is said that only 20 per cent, of the young lawyers who start out in their profession in New York city succeed. There are said to be 11,000 lawyers in the state of New York and 70,000 in the United States.

The ruling of the presiding officers in the Tennessee legislature that members present, but refusing to vote, could be counted to make up a quorum, has been condemned by ex-speaker Blaine and Randall.

THOMAS GRAHAM, a miner of Granite creek, eastern Oregon, while at work in his mine last week, picked up a nugget weighing four and a half pounds, and valued at $900.

By July 15th the grand Niagara cataract and surroundings on the American side will be a grand park, free to the public.
