Notice To Advertisers.

The Astorian guarantees to its advertisers the largest circulation of any newspaper published on the Columbia river.

This paper is on file at the St. Charles Hotel, Portland, Or.

The shadows of a great city.

There are thirty-seven silk hats worn in Astoria.

The green apple, grapes and small boy joke is in full bloom.

See McKanlass to-night at Ross' Opera house, from 8 to 10:30.

The Astorian will replace the Idaho on the Alaska route next month.

The telephone issues excursion tickets to Portland and back for $2.50.

Reserved seats for Saturday's great performance at New York Novelty store.

The Tam O'Shanter crossed over yesterday. The Mount Washington goes today.

Three car loads of dynamite passed through Portland last Sunday en route to Victoria.

Rev. W. S. Hamlin returned from Forest Grove last evening, where he had been attending the annual session of the Congregational association.

Letters or papers placed in the express office this evening will go to San Francisco on to-morrow's steamer.

In a baseball game at North Yamhill last Saturday nine young ladies played against nine men over 50 years of age, and beat the masculines in a score of 32 to 25.

Clas, Whitehead, formerly city editor of the Portland News, drops in for inspection of pensions for California. The joke of it is that he is, or was a Republican.

The Columbia, which sails for San Francisco, will have a large cargo. Among other freight shipments are 7,500 cases of salmon, 300 tons wheat and 300 tons oats.

The Mount Washington which has been in the river for nearly two years, goes to San Francisco to-morrow with a load of wheat. She then goes to the Sound for a load of lumber.

A large gathering at Ross' Opera house last evening testified to the skill of Prof. McKanlass, who is truly wonderful in his specialties. To-night is the last opportunity to see the champion skater and soloist.

Geo. Noland returned from Eugene City last evening. While in that city the agents of the state university conferred upon him a handsome young city attorney the degree of master of arts, which is almost as good as winning a foot race.

A gentleman from Clatsop yesterday stated that Frank Hark, a well known resident met with a serious accident last Saturday. While leading a bull from the pasture the brute became enraged and gored Mr. Ward in the back, then tossing him in the air and inflicting severe injuries.

C. W. Burrage, lately returned from the white settlements, warns an Oregonian reporter and the rest of mankind against English sparrows and black bass. These sparrows, who live in swarms of fruit blossoms in a manner terrible to behold. They are worse than caterpillars in Astoria. As for black bass they are a holy terror; they everlastingly chew up every other fish that swims in the water with them. Once and all (Mr. Burrage) gives us timely warning, never take the horseshoe—the sparrow we mean from the dore.

It wasn't salmon this time it was ice cream; twenty-one people in New Haven were poisoned last Monday, from eating ice cream. The ice cream must go. The telegram is defective as it doesn't advertise the doctor who was called in, nor does it say where the ice cream was made. That little item in yesterday's Astorian about the sequel to the "poisoning" by eating canned salmon in New York, when it was shown that the rotten corn had been "poisoned" in the poisonous atmosphere of a New York tenement, reminds a prominent Astorian cannery man of a similar incident which was telegraphed all over the country a few weeks ago as an example of "poisoning" by eating canned goods. It appears that Lusk & Co., the celebrated San Francisco fruit and vegetable packers, had a lot of damaged canned corn, "well heads," which they could do nothing with. Finally it got to swelling badly and the whole lot was flung out in a lot behind the factory. Some little fellow came along with a basket and picked out half a dozen of the best looking cans and carried them home. The family ate the contents of one of the cans and one of the youngsters died; then there was a howl about Lusk's corn for some sardine found the can that contained the corn with a Lusk's label on it. A few weeks passed by and the family tackled the corn again and this time another angel climbed the golden stair; then the press rose on its posterior digitals and shrieked, for there again was that can with the label on it. Once more, ere the green grass had made verdant the two little mounds in the cemetery, that same family had another fatal feed on the corn and for the third time the undertaker had a job. Then they "took a tumble" and for the first time it dawned on them that rotten corn thrown out as unfit to touch was not correct fodder for the infants of their brood, and while corn was good, and while Lusk packed good corn he could not be blamed if a damaged lot thrown in the garbage was flashed out and an attempt made to turn it into flesh and blood.

THE LATEST, BEST AND CHEAPEST.

For convenience as a work of reference for general and family use, I regard Johnson's Cyclopedia far superior to any that has been published.

The arrangement and subdivision of the articles make it of unspeakable value to every household; while the array of distinguished authors give it undoubted authority.

JUDGMENT AFFIRMED.

A Substantial Victory for M. J. Kinney.

The case of M. J. Kinney vs. E. D. Heatley, et al., bids fair to become an celebrated as the case of Jamdyce vs. Jamdyce which Dickens in his "Bleak House" has so graphically reported. Depositions have been taken and testimony procured in and from all the lands of the earth and the isles of the sea, Pond-eros tomes of testimony, innumerable folios of evidence, incalculable reams of argument and sundry and divers costs and accruing costs and fees have resulted from all this legal action and it may be the end is not yet. Thus far the victory lies with the plaintiff, M. J. Kinney, whose attorneys, Fulton Bros. and Stott have left no stone unturned to secure a verdict for their client which many would consider a righteous one.

The facts in the case are familiar to Astorians as the case has been reported in full from time to time in these columns. In the circuit court here last February a verdict was rendered for the plaintiff, M. J. Kinney, and was immediately appealed to the supreme court. Last evening C. W. Fulton received a transcript of a decision just rendered from the supreme court affirming the decision of the lower court.

The gist of the decision is the affirmation of the allegation that the foul weather experienced by the Titan in 1876 was the cause of the salmon being in such a condition, when it reached England as to justify heavy claims for reclamation, or at least the attendant circumstances were such as to justify the belief that such heavy weather and the consequent injury to the vessel's cargo would be justified against the defendant, but as the case stands now it is impossible to ascertain that fact. When it shall be known, the overcharge in each of the accounts of said creditors can be deducted and a decree entered accordingly.

THE SALMON PACK.

"A light run" is the answer to the question "How's the salmon?" The prophesy made in the earlier part of the season seems in a fair way to be verified, though the next thirty days may make the same difference in the aggregate pack that a similar period has in that of previous years. From figures furnished by one of the oldest and most experienced canners on the Columbia river, The Astorian gets a comparative statement of the packs of '34 and '35 up to and including the 15th of June. Comparing the period from April 1st, 1934, to June 15th, 1934, with the like period from April 1st, 1935, to June 15th, 1935, the figures are as follows: 1934, 2,130 cases less salmon this year than last; the Eagle Canning company, 4,000 less; Knappston, 3,200 less; North Star, 1,200 less; Scandinavian, 1,200 less; Fisher-mella Packing Co., 700 less; Pacific Union Packing Co., 1,433 less; Badollet & Co., 947 less; Pillar Rock, 1,500 more; West Coast, 1,500 less; Oceanic Packing Co., 3,053 less; Safford Packing Co., 1,500 less; John A. Devlin, 2,700 less; A. Booth & Sons, 1,800 less; Wm. Hume, Astoria, 6,040 less; Union Packing Co., 6,148 less; Washington Packing Co., 2,500 less; Cutting Packing Co., 2,700 less; Astoria Packing Co., 6,614 less; Geo. W. Hume, 1,079 more; F. M. Warren, Cathlamet, 1,500 more; Eureka, 1,000 more; J. W. & V. Cook, 1,000 more; F. M. Warren, Cascade, 7,500 less; Ocean Canning Co., 3,000 less; Geo. T. Myers, 4,000 less; James Williams, 1,000 less; Aberde, 1,500 more; Wm. Hume, Eagle Cliff, 1,500 more; Safford Packing Co., 1,500 less; McGowan, 6,000, which as it is a new cannery, may be reckoned as "more." From these figures, which are stated to be authentic, it would appear that the shortage in the pack to the 15th inst., as compared with '34, is 67,227 cases.

Reference to the market is necessarily indefinite. From 55 cents to $1.12 1/2 on the river is the range, and the meagerness of sales at the latter figure hardly justifies its mention.

"Free Self-Cure."

A correspondent wishes to know how the many who advertise a "self-cure free; send self-addressed envelope," etc., make money; or if they are the philanthropists the wording of the advertisements would seem to indicate? No; they are not philanthropists. All their philanthropy is concentrated on self, and their sole object is to make money. This end is attained by selling at so much a thousand the self-addressed envelopes they receive from their dupes, and they never have any difficulty in finding a market for their wares. As a rule, the same party advertises under several aliases. If any one desires to give by practical experience what sort of a market there is for self-addressed envelopes and names, let him answer one of these advertisements, and in a short time he will be deluged with circulars of all kinds.

THE RIVAL-CITIES.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Michael Doran and Patrick Kelly, on behalf of the Democratic State committee of Minnesota, gave early notice that all who intended to apply for executive favors under the Cleveland administration, should send to them their petitions and papers, and thus save time and money, and at the same time make a sure thing of it. It was a novel and perfectly well-meant proclamation. As the officers of the only authorized agent of the party, they held that they would not only be powerful with the president, but were entitled to be the agents of the distribution of his favors.

In due time they came to Washington. The time was about identical with Mr. Cleveland's advent. They awaited the manifestations of the wishes of the faithful Democrats who sought rewards for their services to the party. Meanwhile other Democrats of standing made it known that they objected to the setting up of a machine in Washington to control appointments, and to emphasize the objection, a number came themselves. The committee's engineers were disappointed in not being recognized or employed as they expected. The Mugwumps were doing most of the business. Nor did the president seem well disposed toward them, but gave his attention rather to the others. Finally it seemed to be of no use waiting for the tide to turn in their favor, and Mr. Doran and Kelly prepared to break camp and go home. Not to be utterly worsted, they cast about for a single appointment that could be given them. Secretary Manning, with whom their success had not been good, said that those men were parading of superintendent of public buildings at Minneapolis; they might name him if they chose, and jumping at the chance, they named him.

Now, it should be borne in mind that St. Paul, where the unfortunate gentlemen reside, and Minneapolis are two cities which, though very close together geographically, are intensely hostile. They are so hostile, indeed, that a distinguished Minnesotan avers that, were Gabriel to take his stand in either town and blow his trumpet, the inhabitants of the other would not pay the slightest attention to the summons. When the people of Minneapolis heard that Doran and Kelly, to save themselves from utter discomfiture, had secured the appointment of a citizen of St. Paul for superintendent of the public building in their city, they rose up in rebellion to a man. On Thursday night last tens of thousands of people formed themselves into a torchlight procession, and paraded Kelly's effigy preparatory to burning it. What was meant to save them from disgrace became the cause of their destruction.

Michael Doran is overwhelmed. No one in Washington can sufficiently comfort him. Doran at once worked his plans to leave the country for a time at least, and will proceed to New York for passage to Ireland, and Kelly will for a season retire to the bank of the White Bear lake, bound by an oath never again to resume the business of a broker in Washington. In the language of the chairmen of their "know more than they did when they set out." But both are good Democrats, and a brighter day doubtless awaits them in the future.
