

The Daily Astorian.

ASTORIA, OREGON:
THURSDAY, JUNE 25, 1893
TWENTY-SEVEN YEARS.

YESTERDAY'S Portland Standard contains the valedictory of Mr. A. Noltner, the late editor and proprietor, who has sold out to Mr. S. B. Pettengill, a gentleman of ripe experience and a writer of more than ordinary force; in a brief salutatory he states his intention of making some changes in the paper, that in his opinion will make it more valuable.

In his valedictory Mr. Noltner says that he has been publishing Democratic newspapers in Oregon for twenty-seven years, and implies that he has amassed nothing during that time more solid or tangible than a large accumulation of costly experience.

It must be tremendous hard work to run a Democratic newspaper; running a newspaper of any kind is generally and correctly considered to be toilsome business, but to conduct a Democratic newspaper must, indeed, be fearfully wearing. To do daily violence to the spirit of the age; to refuse to see the difference between six and a dozen; to excuse, palliate, uphold, and endorse all that such a task makes necessary, is something of which few men are capable. That Mr. Noltner has been able to physically survive twenty-seven years of such a strain does credit to his organization.

The fact that all he has to show for it is a vast and varied collection of valuable reminiscences suggests to others the advisability of pausing before they press on in his footsteps. Twenty-seven years of hard work should yield a man that many thousands of dollars, and that is putting a very modest estimate on the average savings of a worker. That Mr. Noltner has worked hard and patiently and earnestly is a fact patent to any one that knows him and it is a disgrace to the party to which he gave the best years of his life in this state to make it necessary or possible for one of its steady wheel-horses and most faithful workers to say:

"I have sacrificed my time and money, and to-day retire with only one consolation, which is, that my successor may reap the reward of my labor and build upon the foundation which I have successfully laid, a strong and lasting paper. I have at all times aimed to make the paper the organ of the party, and not of any individual, ring or clique. I have conducted it as I deemed to be the best interests of my party, state and country. My convictions in the principles of Democracy have been my guide in all my labors, and I have given everything to advance these principles. If I have not committed any error during my life in journalism, I should not be human. It is now twenty-seven years since I commenced publishing and editing Democratic papers in Oregon, and with the exception of about six months of that time I have been constantly engaged in the profession. I am the senior member of the craft in this state, and my hope now is, that I have served my time, and that I shall not be compelled to return again to a field of labor which has cost me so much time, anxiety and trouble. The Democratic party of Oregon has become a part of my family household. I have stood by it and upheld it under all and every circumstance, and whatever good I have done, is all I now have to reward me for these many years of toil."

There is a United States flag at the war department the history of which the authorities know nothing except that it was found in the confederate war department and is marked with the name "5th Illinois volunteer infantry." The flag shows evident signs of hard fighting in its neighborhood, for it is pierced in many places with bullet holes, and through the starry field and in ten places in the silk stripes are gaping holes where shells have torn their way. There is no flagstaff attached, and the folds are deeply stained with broad stripes of blood, hinting that some gallant color-sergeant had torn it from the staff and folded it away in his own breast to save it from capture, and had poured out his own life's blood on the flag he had sworn to defend. Perhaps this paragraph may meet the eye of some one who can tell where it was captured, for the war department officials do not know.

And now it appears from apparently authentic Washington dispatches that editors of "partisan" Democratic newspapers stand no show of getting office under the present administration. That's good—for the editors. Any editor who would accept any office, state, national, county, city or otherwise and at the same time try to run his paper successfully will find himself in the same fix as a man who would try to ride two horses each going different ways at the same time.

BLAINE AND CLAY.

It is thought probable that Mr. Blaine will never again be a candidate. He believes that his chances are exhausted. It is said that Blaine has a queer belief about his future, based upon the marked similarity in the career of Henry Clay and his own. Early in life both went from their native states to Kentucky. Both entered public life as members of their state legislatures. Mr. Clay was speaker of the lower house in Kentucky. Mr. Blaine filled a similar position in the Maine legislature. Mr. Clay was a member of congress afterwards and served as speaker sixteen years. Mr. Clay was first elected to the senate to fill a vacancy. Mr. Blaine was appointed to the senate, but also to fill a vacancy. Mr. Clay resigned his seat in the senate to accept the secretaryship of state from John Quincy Adams. Mr. Blaine resigned the senatorship to become secretary of state under Garfield. Mr. Clay was three times the candidate for the Whig nomination. He was twice defeated in convention. He was finally nominated in 1844, but was defeated by James K. Polk. Mr. Blaine was beaten twice in the national conventions, nominated in the third one, and was defeated by Grover Cleveland. Mr. Clay's letters on the Texas question are held to be a parallel in their evil effects upon the writer to some of Mr. Blaine's letters. The abolitionists in New York, in 1844 threw their vote to Birney and thereby gave the state to the Democracy. It is claimed that last year if it had not been for the votes given to St. John, Blaine would have carried New York. The vote of New York decided the election in favor of the Democrats in 1844, and again in 1884. Mr. Clay was never a candidate after his final defeat, and it is believed by Mr. Blaine's friends that he will never again be presented to the public as a candidate. The parallel between his career and that of Clay's will probably remain unbroken.

The fiscal year ends next Tuesday, and according to receipts from internal revenue, customs and miscellaneous sources, the falling off in the estimates for the year will be about $10,000,000; $2,000,000 in internal revenue, $4,000,000 in customs, and $4,000,000 in miscellaneous. The expenditures will be greater for pensions and deficiencies than was anticipated, so that the surplus for the fiscal year will probably be between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000 less than calculated by Secretary McCulloch in his report to congress last year, leaving a surplus of about $20,000,000 instead of $39,000,000.

To Whom It May Concern.

I TAKE PLEASURE IN STATING THAT Mrs. Mary J. Jenson, holder of the ticket purchased by me from Messrs. Bowarth & Johns of this city over the Clatsop Steamship line and Pennsylvania R. R. and connecting lines, arrived safely in Astoria ten days from Stanzburg, having received during the trip every attention from the officers and employees of the steamship and railroad lines above named, who addressed her in her own language. Her baggage arrived in Astoria in good order on the same boat with herself.
I can cheerfully recommend all who want to travel over the fastest and safest line, and at the same time have the very best of treatment in every respect, to buy their tickets over the Clatsop Line.
