STUNG TO DEATH BY WASPS.

BALTIMORE, Md., June 25.—Wm. P. Thompson, a farmer living nine miles southwest from North Branch creek, in Allegany county, was working in a cornfield yesterday when he noticed what he supposed to be bees swarming around the stump of an old oak tree standing in a fence-corner. He approached and rashly attempted to investigate them by striking the stump with his hoe. In an instant a whole nest of wasps, probably 500 or 600 strong, attacked him. They settled all over his head, and the man was soon rushing frantically to the house, screaming for help. The wasps clung to him with remarkable persistency, and when he reached his home his wife was compelled to beat them off with a broom. He had been stung in a horrible manner. There was scarcely a piece of skin as big as a penny on his head which had not been pierced by the wasps' stings. He had just had his hair cut with a clipper, and the wasps found no difficulty in getting in their work all over his scalp. One of them had settled in his left eye and stung the eye-ball. In two hours Thompson's head had swollen to a monstrous size, his left eye protruding and he was a terrible spectacle. The man suffered great agony until 2 o'clock this morning, when he expired. The most singular feature of the case is that the head has swollen considerably since death. Thompson left a wife and six children.

KILLED BY HIS STEPSON.

STURTON, Mo., June 25.—William Caldwell, living nine miles southwest of this place, was shot and instantly killed Saturday morning by his stepson, who is about grown and generally regarded as of rather unsound mind. Sunday afternoon Caldwell severely reproved his son for the indifferent manner in which he had performed some work, and threatened punishment if the work was not more satisfactory on Monday. Brooding sullenly over what in his diseased imagination appeared an act of oppression and injustice, he vowed vengeance, but nothing was thought of it. Sunday morning the young man arose early, secured his father's shotgun, and, carefully loading it with a heavy charge of buckshot, descended to the door-yard, where his father was quietly awaiting breakfast. Stopping within fifteen paces of the unfortunate man, the young ruffian coolly brought his weapon to a rest, and with a curse pulled the fatal trigger. Caldwell fell dead in his tracks, forty buckshot having penetrated his abdomen and side, tearing the body in a most sickening manner. He never spoke after the shot. The murderer escaped to the woods but cannot evade capture as a posse of enraged citizens are on his track. Caldwell was somewhat addicted to drink, and was overbearing when in his cups.
