The Whiffo leaves out this morning.

There will be a barbecue at Hillsboro on the 4th of July.

Portland is about to organize a much needed children's aid society.

Messrs. Lotan and Ferguson, boiler and hull inspectors are in the city.

The Remonstrant is finishing cargo; the Haddingtonshire has her load engaged.

Judge McGuire came over from Clatsop yesterday. He reports Frank Ward, who was lately injured, much better.

There will be a meeting of the British Benevolent Association at 8 o'clock.

Capt. Chas. F. Powell is in the city and goes to Ft. Stevens to day on a visit of inspection of the government work there.

The Congressionalists propose to give a pleasant entertainment and social at their church on next Wednesday evening.

Phil A. Stokes & Co. received a large consignment of trunks, shoes, clothing, etc., on the last steamer. A full assortment at low prices.

The Clara Parker will take you to Young's river and back—a delightful excursion—tomorrow for fifty cents. She leaves Main street wharf at nine o'clock.

To-night will appear the Baldwin theater company in their latest dramatic success, "The Shadows of a Great City." Reserved seats at New York Novelty store.

A grapevine telegram to Frank Parker, captain Resene house, made oddities of sport yesterday. If it was a sure enough dispatch, the terms might probably be arranged even yet.

County Clerk Trenchard is in receipt of the Oregon laws of 1895. It is a thrilling work and so interesting in its nature that one can hardly tear himself away from it if he once gets reading it.

There will be a special trip made by the R. R. Thompson from Portland to Clatsop today. The boat will leave Portland at 10 A. M. and it is expected passengers will reach the Seaside 8 P. M.

Melaine Januscheck is making phenomenal success with "My Life," which ever played. Crowded houses are testifying to the power of the play and the wonderful dual impersonation of the great actress.

Judge Greene, of Washington territory, who tried to usurp the prerogatives of the Almighty a short time ago, has coined a new word, "ambisexual." The ambiguous character of the word makes its ambivalent meaning somewhat ambiguous.

An Astoria barber is authority for the statement that such a thing as a bald headed boy was never known; that those who have lost the hair of the head are always people of intelligence, and that idiotia invariably have a superabundance of coarse hair.

The new mayor of East Portland in taking office calls attention to the necessity of economy in financial matters, and says that financially East Portland's municipal affairs need an attendant physician and careful nursing. Fire department salaries cost East Portland $700 last year.

The contract to build the pilot boat for use on the bar, has been let by the Oregon state board of pilot commissioners to Jno. Rutter of this city. He is to build and furnish her engine and have her ready to be turned over for inspection by the 1st of next October. The amount available for the purpose is $10,000.

The Shubrick arrived in with a large party from the north yesterday afternoon, being those who had selected a sight on Destruction island for the new lighthouse. The Shubrick put off twenty tons coal at Ft. Robinson, where everything is readiness for the fog signal, which begins operations there next Wednesday.

The recent action of F. A. Moore, of St. Helena, is worthy of notice. While attending court recently in Hillsboro he was offered a large fee to defend a wretch who had been indicted and was about to be convicted on a charge of rape on a girl of fourteen. Mr. Moore emphatically refused. His action is worthy of high praise—and imitation.

One of the few leading stars in the country, that travels in state, befitting a crowned head, is Januscheck. Her parlor is a marvel of luxurious elegance and comfort, and contains not only a splendid suite of apartments for the distinguished tragedienne, but also all the requirements for her manager, Mr. H. J. Sengst, under whose able management she is having a season unsurpassed in its artistic and financial triumphs. Januscheck will appear at Ross' new opera house June 29th and 30th.

Sentinel J. N. Dolph came down from Portland yesterday afternoon to see Astoria, the lower Columbia, and the work going on at the Columbia bar. Senator Dolph takes a great deal of interest in this work and loses no opportunity of making himself thoroughly acquainted with the requirements and necessities of this as well as other sections of the state. He went down to Ft. Canby yesterday afternoon on the Argonaut which Mr. Cook placed at his disposal, and today goes on Mr. Leineweber's boat, the A. E. Field, to see the progress of the government work at Ft. Stevens.

A funny sort of fight occurred in one of the upper town hacks on Chenamus street yesterday morning. The drivers of two opposition hacks got calling each other pet names, and at last one jumped aboard his rival's vehicle and started in to build a man-sard roof over his right eye. The scuffle started the horses to run away, and the fighting pair had to let go to stop the team. As soon as the frightened steeds were quieted, the humans started in again hammering each other, but were finally separated. It was lots of fun for all those who had time to take it in.

A curious thing happened on a prominent street yesterday morning. An elderly gentleman was passing a certain house when there came a crash, and the fragments of a glass bottle of whisky, holding out, were strewn at his feet. The pedestrian made an instantaneous halt, and instead of looking up to see where the bottle came from, he looked down at the bottle which he had just stepped on. He looked at it rapidly with a sheepish look on his face. A moment later a second face peeped over the lintel of a second-story window.

Yesterday a business man brought to The Astorian office some freight bills of the O. R. & N. company, which he had just paid. The usual gong of primage was marked in figures far to see, but a new wrinkle of that contemptible swindle was marked in a separate charge, "C." What in the name of the great Elijah Smith is "C"? We of Astoria have been familiar with multitudinous and long continued means of making us contribute after the fashion of polite road agents who collect compulsory tributes, but "C" rather gets us. What is it for anyhow? If any one or two can explain, there is an eager constituency standing on tiptoes ready and yearning for information.

In answer to a question regarding the tardiness of declaration of the forfeiture of the Astoria land grant, Senator Dolph yesterday told the writer that he had repeatedly visited the general land office in Washington and had directed the attention of the officials in charge to the fact that though the act of forfeiture had passed congress February 2nd, no official notification of the forfeiture had yet been received by Register Borin at Oregon city. The commissioner's reply was that he had an immense amount of business before him and hadn't got to that yet; but he was anxious of giving everything in his department his personal attention and that there were a great many things that he did not care to trust to subordinates. Senator Dolph received the impression that the commissioner is a well meaning and competent official, and that he is desirous of going slow and making no mistake. In this particular instance the public interest demands speedier attention to his business.

PRESS EXCURSION AFTERMATH.

Several little incidents in connection with the Iowa press excursion were not reported because it was in better taste to withhold publication until after they were en route home. Last Monday a gentleman and his wife were standing in front of Stone's window admiring the fruit and particularly the aquarium filled with gold fish. They looked around inquiringly, and presently a well known Portlander who came along, stopped.

With the utmost innocence, the lady, pointing to the goldfish, asked, "Are these young salmon?" On the trip to Astoria on the magnificent Wide West, everyone admired the steamer, and expressed praise in extravagant terms. As the boat came into the Columbia, one of the editors approaching an Oregonian reporter who was sitting near the wheel watching the broad wake of the steamer, asked in earnestness, "Is this side-wheel or stern-wheel boat?" The excursionists arrived in Tacoma about dark, and were taken immediately to the splendid hotel in that city, where they were sumptuously entertained. They left the next afternoon at two. "And there where we made our big mistake," said a Tacoma merchant to a Portlander in the party. "We ought to have got them off at 5 o'clock the next morning. They would have imagined that everything about the town was in keeping with the grand proportions of the hotel, but they still had a day and looked around, and came to the conclusion that the hotel was the only big thing we had to show. It was a great mistake to keep them."

Shadows of a Great City.

We are to have presented at the Ross' Opera house this Saturday evening, June 27, that sterling melo-drama, "Shadows of a Great City," one of the best pieces of the kind yet given to the public. Unlike most melo-dramas to which we have been introduced, "Shadows of a Great City" is an American play, and is American in everything. The scenic effects introduced are realistic, and the characters are types of every-day life seen in any city. The plot is a pleasant denouement from the old repetitions of English melo-dramas. One of the great features of the play is the abundance of incidents, thrilling and exciting, which rapidly follow each other, keeping the auditor interested throughout the play. The company presenting this play is one of the strongest organizations on the road, the names that head it—Lewis Morrison, George Osbourne, and L. R. Stockwell—being a guarantee of its strength and character. Reserved seats on sale at the New York Novelty store.

Meeting Saturday Evening.

There will be a business meeting of the British Benevolent Association at the Rooms of Albert H. & L. Co. No. 1, on Saturday evening, the 27th inst., at 8 o'clock. A full attendance of all members and those desirous of becoming members is requested.

THE HERO IN BLUE OR IN RED.

Confidence Engine company of Los Angeles, Cal., recently celebrated its tenth anniversary with "high jinks," at which Hon. E. F. Spence, mayor of the city, a fireman of thirty years standing, and many other distinguished citizens were speakers. A notable feature of the occasion was the reading of the subjoined poem, written expressly for the festivities by L. E. Mosher. It is a fine production, worthy of the cause, as the cause is worthy of it. Like Mr. Mosher's poem, "The Stranded Bugle," which went the rounds of the press, "The Hero in Blue, or in Red," will be widely copied and read everywhere with pleasure, and especially so wherever the boys run with the machine. The poem is as follows:

Through the night, with their terrible glare,
Where the bells, in the belfries quiver,
Boom out on the ambient air,
Where the danger is dizzy and awful,
Where eyes are kindled with dread,
There rallies the theme of your poet—
The hero in blue, or in red.

He's an every-day hero, but valor
Is not of a time nor a place,
And honor is often withholden
From him we should praise to the skies;
So my lyre is tuned to the measure
To-night of the hero that's shed
On bravery and brawn all about us,
By heroes in blue, or in red.

The warrior, in song and in story,
Is praised for the battles he's won;
But here is a valorous soldier
Who fights where no'er thunders a gun,
And no knight of the lance or the sabre,
Is worthier a place at the head
Of the roll-call of heroes than this one—
Our hero in blue, or in red.

No flame is so fierce 'cross his pathway
But dures he to find a way through—
No parapet towers so high and
It yields him a good point of view;
His axe is the sword of the righteous,
From a conflict he never has fled,
And where he is needed you find him—
This hero in blue, or in red.

Like a meteor flash through the darkness
He speeds where the danger is dire,
And the zeal of the zealot is his,
His eyes greet the billows of fire,
The toppling of walls does not blanch him
As with life held by slenderest thread,
His ringing cheer pierces the darkness—
This hero in blue, or in red.

As a friend he is steadfast and loyal,
As a lover he's tender and true,
While his ways are the ways of the heroes,
That swim 'round the mountains of blue.

His hand-grasp is warm as his heart is,
And we call him "Dick," "Harry," or "Fred,"
But he's always, whenever you find him,
A hero in blue, or in red.

And it's fit that we meet him and greet him
With roses and stanzas of song,
To show that our gratitude reaches
About him the tentacles strong.

So here 'mid the gardens of beauty
We honor him living or dead,
The fire lad, so faithful and ready,
Our hero in blue, or in red.

LINCOLN'S FRIEND.

Making High Officials and Ladies Stand Aside.

George Clark, an eccentric man in humble circumstances, was an early friend of Lincoln, who subsequently removed to New England. He met Lincoln in Boston during a stumping tour in the east. A few years passed and Mr. Lincoln was the man of the hour. Clark, whenever I met him, was talking about him. "I can have any office I want," he said emphatically; "Abraham will look out for me." I thought him a dreamer, and like all his acquaintances, doubted his claim. Shortly after Clark said he was going to have an office, and that in order to get it he must have $12 to pay his fare to Washington. I told him it was a useless undertaking. He laughed at me. "Abraham would not refuse him anything he asked." He had made up his mind to have a post-office. I told him that $12 would only pay his fare, and that everything was so high and the hotels so crowded that he could not live twenty-four hours in Washington. Again he laughed in my face, and then said: "What do I care for high prices and hotels? Abraham will take care of me. All I want is money enough to get there."

Half in earnest, half in jest, the money was raised and Clark went to Washington.

A reception was taking place at the White House, and a number of his plebeian appearance was not only "out of place," but was hustled about in an unceremonious manner and in one way and another deterred from approaching Mr. Lincoln. Clark's patience under the embarrassing situation served him for more than an hour, when hunger and anxiety about a place to "put up for the night," caused him to lose his discretion and become desperate. Mounting a chair just as a foreign minister was about approaching Mr. Lincoln, he sang out, "Abraham!" Mr. Lincoln instantly recognized the speaker. The passing pageant of chivalry and fashion became to his mind like the unreality of a dream from which he had been suddenly aroused, and in all the brilliant assembly he saw only George Clark, the man who had shared with him the hardships and privations of frontier life in the days of small things.

"Make way for my friend!" exclaimed the president, and the surprised ladies and gentlemen paused in astonishment as Mr. Clark approached Mr. Lincoln, and was received with a cordiality and warmth of greeting that had not been accorded any other guest of the evening.

A few minutes later Mr. Lincoln excused himself from the reception and passed into another room with his old friend and closed the door. The scene that followed is known only through Mr. Clark, and, as he was inclined somewhat to exaggerate circumstances, must be considered with some grains of allowance.

Mr. Lincoln, as Clark repeatedly told his friends, was as familiar and off-hand as in their youth. He leaned against the wall and laughed. He was like an overjoyed boy. "You don't know," he said, "how glad I am to see you. The face of an old friend is like a ray of sunshine through dark and ominous clouds. I've shook hands till I'm tired and I never was splitting rails." He inquired where Clark was stopping and if he had been to supper, and when Clark told him that he was "stopping with Abe Lincoln and hadn't had anything of any account to eat since leaving home," he ordered the butler to bring him a plate of food.

While he returned to "finish up the business he had in hand," he finally told Mr. Lincoln the object of his visit and solicited the Lawrence postmaster-ship. Mr. Lincoln laughed at him and said: "You ain't quite up to education, George, to take this kind of a job. But I've fixed you all snug and right. Take this letter." The letter was addressed: "To the collector of the port of Boston." Clark presented himself at the post-office house one morning, and upon being summoned by one and another when he inquired for the collector, remarked that he had a letter from his friend Abraham Lincoln, addressed to the gentleman for whom he had inquired. This opened the doors. The letter said, in substance: "The bearer is my friend, George Clark. Give him the best position he can fill. If he fails in one place give him another." The collector settled him as watch-man on board vessels in the harbor—a berth in which he could sleep as much as he liked—at $1,200 a year.—Corr. Boston Journal.
