CURRENT CONTEMPORARY COMMENT.

In the use of the word "pioneer" I draw a wide distinction between men whose strong brains and true hearts have founded a young state, and men who, for the past half century, have been skulking away from civilization, who have stayed in Oregon since 1859, solely because their horses were not able to wade across to the Sandwich islands; and who stand ready to pull a pistol or bottle-knife whenever they cannot settle a business difficulty solely on their own terms.

In a general way it may be confidently said that our section of country never will have real prosperity so long as its main dependence is the production of wheat for export. It is the first and lowest form of agricultural industry; it is subject to great competition, to great changes of transportation, and to vicissitudes of seasons and markets, that make it the most hazardous of pursuits.

The state board of immigration has decided to fix up a car of the state's products after the coming harvest, place a man in charge of it, and send it the whole outfit around to the different counties and state fairs in the western states for exhibition. The different railroads have agreed to transport the car free of charge, and the cost to the state will be comparatively light.

A recent decision by Secretary Lamar in a swamp land case from California ought to strike terror to the souls of the land-fraud fiends of Oregon. After setting out the facts regarding the statute on the subject, the secretary says: "A careful consideration of all the evidence shows that said tract is subject to periodical overflow in the winter or spring months; but the overflows subside so as not to render the land unfit for successful cultivation by reason of the overflow. The land, therefore, is not swamp and overlaid land within the meaning of the swamp land act, and the claim of the state may be rejected."

The Republican organs throughout the state are clamoring for an extra session of the state legislature this fall for the purpose of electing a U. S. senator. They do not seem to take into consideration the expense that would necessarily ensue, nor do they seem to care.

A suit tried in the state circuit court yesterday, says the Oregonian, goes to show that the Chinese are not alone in the custom of buying and selling women for immoral purposes. Emmanuel Pichet, a French macaque, brought suit against Pierre Simon and Louis Simonard, to recover $400 on money advanced to bring a young woman here from San Francisco.

The Democratic work of intimidating Gov. Moody to keep him from calling an extra session of the legislature is still going on. But they will hardly succeed in their endeavor to obscure the governor's vision to such a degree by their selfish practice, that it will render him unable to see through such motives as lurk behind their outward actions.

While strolling through one of the departments the other day, I had a talk with the appointment clerk upon the subject of the return of the office seekers. He told me that the changes in the civil service during the past three months number between five and ten thousand officials, and yet the pressure for office continues as great as before.

Here is an interesting way to put letters together, continued the clerk, opening a fine morocco-bound book. "All the papers of this applicant are bound in this book. He felt certain that this would favorably attract the attention of the president. But this is the most common way papers come in."

HOW IT LOOKS ON THE OUTSIDE.

A gentleman temporarily resident in San Francisco, who is largely interested in the salmon-packing industry gave the following summary of recent observations on the Columbia, in the east and in Europe to a representative of the California Grocer and Canner. In England people had about given up eating salmon, owing to the imposition of mercenary packers, who attempt to market all their trash and light weight goods in foreign countries.

Better goods are now shipped abroad, and the trade will accept none but standard brands. Stocks in England are light and widely distributed, and are rapidly going into consumption. Practically the English export trade is but a hand to month business. After arrival the goods are rapidly distributed to dealers, and the extensive grocery trade of the country exhausts all supplies before new pack goods are in the hands of consumers.

Good brands are now selling readily in London and Liverpool at 2 1/2c, outside brands, 16c/20c. The Frazer river pack has brought a great deal of discredit on Columbia river fish. Several cases of alleged poisoning have been charged to inferior Frazer packs, which have sold as low as 16c. A number of the packers are now making satisfactory confirmation of the reported shortage in the present season's pack on the Columbia, and they will soon be heard from in this market.

Stocks in the east are not very heavy, but dealers are awaiting the result of July operations. Many of those who are now holding off say they prefer to take their chances at the end of the season. Heretofore they have based calculations on reports of a short pack, and the result has been a loss to them. This year they will not buy largely until the pack is completed. Then if they are asked five or ten cents advance on to-day's prices, they will pay it with good grace.

There is a fair distributive movement from the large eastern cities, and the market for Columbia river fish is widening every year. Easy communication by rail with eastern markets has been a great help to packers in the rapid distribution of goods. The situation on the Columbia is generally pretty well understood. The pack this year will not exceed 400,000 cases. Nearly 150,000 cases have been sold to the east already. There is no local distributive demand, and there will certainly be no surplus this season, if there is enough fish to supply the export demand, which seems hardly probable, as last year over 100,000 cases came to this city and 350,000 cases were exported from Astoria, to say nothing of the eastern shipments, which were not less than 500,000 cases. The prospect for good prices for the season's pack could not be more clearly defined.

A suit tried in the state circuit court yesterday, says the Oregonian, goes to show that the Chinese are not alone in the custom of buying and selling women for immoral purposes. Emmanuel Pichet, a French macaque, brought suit against Pierre Simon and Louis Simonard, to recover $400 on money advanced to bring a young woman here from San Francisco.

Poison at the Front Door.

No article entering so generally into the food of every family has been found more villainously adulterated than baking powder. For the purpose of underselling the "Royal," whose absolute purity and wholesomeness has never yet been questioned, hundreds of dealers are putting up baking powders with cheap and adulterated cream of tartar, which contains lime, earth, etc., adding strength by the free use of alum.

These adulterated powders are "shoved" upon the public with the greatest persistency. They are first given away—left in samples at private residences, with circulars containing bogus analyses and certificates, and false representations as to their value, etc. This fact of itself is sufficient to condemn them. A first-class article will sell on its merits. No manufacturer whose goods are of value can afford to give them away, and none but the cheapest make and most inferior or unmarketable goods require to be distributed free in order to get the public to use them, and this method is adopted only by parties who have failed to dispose of their wares through the ordinary and legitimate channels of trade.

Free samples of articles of food left at the house should be regarded with suspicion. There is no guarantee of their wholesomeness, while there is real danger that they contain a fatally poisonous compound. Many instances of poisoning from the use of such samples are recorded.

The Royal Baking Powder is never given away, sold by means of lotteries, nor accompanied by chromos, spoons, crockery or other gifts, except the gifts of absolute purity, wholesomeness, full weight and superlative leavening power. These gifts are guaranteed with each package. Its own merits have been its chief advertisement, and they have secured for it the constant patronage of the American people to an extent beyond the combined sale of all other baking powders. The Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure and perfect.
