V. Cook is at the Occident. C. A. Reed, of Oysterville, is in the city. E. A. Soule came over from Oysterville yesterday.

The Montgomery Castle and Jan. Nicholson have arrived out. The term Maid of Orleans sailed for Shoalwater Bay last Sunday.

Geo. H. Durham came down from Portland on the Telephone Sunday. The Denman Thompson theatrical troupe are on the incoming steamer.

Oleomargarine is seeing hard times in Iowa. The best country butter is selling at 7 cents. The Oregon is due from San Francisco this morning.

A silver dollar makes a satisfactory weight by which to test letters under the new rules, as it weighs within a fraction of an ounce. Two halves will answer.

By the upsetting of a buggy in which he was going to the city last Sunday, Jas. W. Welch was thrown to the ground, striking on his head and sustaining severe injuries.

A. V. R. Snyder, who sold his paper, the Yamhill Reporter, to D. C. Ireland about a month ago, has concluded to locate in Dallas, Polk county. So the Reporter of the 18th says.

Cashing Relief Corps is talking of a moonlight excursion to Skamokawa on the Telephone next Tuesday. Cashing Post comes hand will add to the enjoyment of the occasion, and the tickets will be four bits to go and return.

C. B. Bagley, of the Olympia Courier, has the contract for the territorial printing at 38 1/2 cents. As it costs 50 cents to set it up, it would appear that the more printing Washington territory orders the more money Bagley will lose.

Barbour of the Walla Walla Journal has resigned as deputy collector of internal revenue. He has discovered that a newspaper man bites off more than he can chew when he tries to run a political office and a newspaper at the same time.

At a called meeting of Astoria Engine Co. No. 1, held last evening, the nomination of F. B. Elbertson for chief engineer of the Astoria fire department previously made by Albert H. & L. No. 1, was endorsed. G. C. Fulton was nominated for first assistant and Aug. Danielson for second assistant.

Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Pral had a pleasant reception at their house last evening, some hundred or so of their friends taking that method of welcoming the young couple upon their return from their bridal tour. A handsome supper was served and a delightful evening enjoyed by the assembled company.

A Portland visitor thinks we of Astoria ought to be thankful for our immunity from fevers, etc., caused by defective sewers. We are devoutly thankful. The tide washes away much impurity and is about as good an example of generalized special Providence as this ungodly age is usually permitted to see.

The Colorado editors, fifty-two of them, will be here to-day. They leave Portland at 8:30 a. m., on the R. R. Thompson, and on their arrival here will be transferred to the Gra. Miles and taken to Ilwaco. It is expected that they will get back to the city about six o'clock in the evening. To-morrow morning they return.

TELEGRAPH TICS. ON THE BEACH. SUICIDE OF THE SECTION LINE ROAD.

A call for a river convention, to be held at St. Paul September 3, has been addressed by the governor of Minnesota to the governors of Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, Wisconsin, Dakota and Montana. Congressional approval is expected.

A CHRONIC SUICIDE. ASTORIA, July 20, 1915. I am not ambitious to be classed among the chronic growlers and often endure unnecessary annoyances rather than say or do anything to disturb the equanimity of any good citizen, but under some circumstances forbearance ceases to be a virtue. This last remark is not original but is applicable.

There are many customs which continue in vogue long after the causes which originated them have ceased to exist. I think the practice of putting a bell on every cow in the neighborhood and allowing her to run at large within the limits of the city is unnecessary, out of date and ought to be prohibited.

In reality, I believe that cows ought not to be allowed to run at large within the city limits. Any person owning a cow should keep her in his own lot or stable, or drive her outside of the city to feed if he wished; but there should be no such objection to the cows if it were not for the everlasting sleep destroying bell. When about a dozen of these city bovines get near your bedroom window in the dead hour of night, with a bell which rings like a siren, and under proper conditions no one would object to a person owning as many as they can take care of, but it certainly is not right to disturb the rest of a large portion of the people of a city to gratify the foolish notion of some one that cannot have a cow without a bell on her; and in this remonstrance I am sure I only echo the sentiments of every citizen who does not happen to own one of the cows.

Hoping this will set some of the owners of these animals to thinking on the subject, I drop it for the present. Pao Boso Puntico.

Grant and Ingalls were great friends, the Oregon statement continued. They were together at West Point, and they are, I believe, good friends to this day. During the war, while Ingalls was the quartermaster general of the army of the Potomac, he and Grant were sitting together one night about a camp-fire when Grant said to Ingalls: "Kufus, I am going to make you commander of the army of the Potomac." But Ingalls objected. He had a very nice place in his quarters, with hundreds of men under him, and he did not want to make the change. Grant persisted, but after a long talk he finally acceded to Ingalls' wishes and did not appoint him. Had Ingalls accepted the position he might have been one of the greatest generals of the United States, and perhaps the lieutenant general. Instead he is a retired officer. I don't know but he regrets what he has been the great mistake of his life. Grant had a high opinion of Ingalls. While he was in Europe on his tour round the world he wrote to a general in the army that he regarded Ingalls as one of the very best men to have commanded the army of the Potomac, and in saying this he did not intend disparagement to any other officer. Cleveland Leader.

ON THE BEACH. SUICIDE OF THE SECTION LINE ROAD.

The Aristocratic Colony on Clatsop Beach and the Democratic Spruce System at Shoalwater Bay. We will take first the aristocratic resort at Clatsop Beach, which is the loveliest place in America for the money it cost. In 1875 a party of San Franciscans visited here and went home in raptures about it. The next thing they heard was that the Southern Pacific railroad folks had decided to build a $350,000 hotel at Monterey to keep the San Francisco elite from going to Oregon to pass the summer months.

The Clatsop plains, which combine the bracing air of the sea with all the beauties of the inland scenery for which Oregon is famous. Here you have trout-fishing in the Nekanicum and grouse-hunting on the little prairies that dot the approaches to the beach. You can take a basket and pick all the wild raspberries, salmon berries and whortleberries that you desire, beside having the chance of a shot at deer or elk, if you so desire; and at the same time you have the seafood to invigorate you, right at the front door. Tillamook head is but a few miles away and there you can get all the mussels you want, while on the beach you can get all the razor clams that you can eat. The latter are, however, rather hard to get at and the man who digs two razors out of a hole big enough to bury himself is generally considered lucky; and in regard to mussels, let us advise the reader never to eat any that are over two inches in length. And in crossing the small rivulets which intersect the beach, here and there one encounters a clam digger should always be provided with quicksands. All the articles of sea-food above enumerated are provided by the manager of the Seaside House, but as for grouse and deer, the hunter feels like furnishing them himself, partly from love of adventure and partly from that spirit of sympathy which prompts Don Cesar to say "Oh, my poor landlord!"

The company of the highest type of Portland's sangre azul, while the bourgeoisie have gone over to Grimes' just half a mile away. At the former place, at a misty dress for dinner, while at the latter, he may go to the table in linen coat or check shirt. At dinner in the Seaside there is a blaz of diamonds that might as well have been left at home; while at Grimes', the order of the day is casual and personal comfort. The south side of the Columbia bar, therefore, carries the fashionable portion of the sea-bathing public, while the north side surpasses it in numbers. The north side, which embraces Ilwaco, Oysterville, Breeseport and South Bend, in fact all the villages on Shoalwater Bay, catches the masses, who still adhere to the Oregon fashion of camping out. And while there are many believers in the comfort of camp life, there are thousands of people who will tell you that camping is but one continuous series of hardships and privations. Yet we believe this to be an error. There are many people who suffer more or less from rheumatism, neuralgia, and other ailments, who find relief in their daily home lives in the very heart of this city; and as remoteness from the center of business and base of supplies always engenders more or less discontent, these poor people multiply their privations as soon as they reach camp. Your truly neat and tidy housekeeper, whose mansion is a jewel case whether it be one or three stories high and whose rooms are taken from the best of the best, in such a place, displays the same restlessness when camped in the silent woods. She is up with the lark, and while her husband is making the camp fire, she is stuffing the clothes into the washtub for the Chinaman's washbasin. When she begins to get breakfast, she makes her husband hang out the blankets to air and raise the foot of the tent in which they have passed the night. Breakfast is made and washed and put away and she sits down under some mighty hemlock with her sewing, while her husband shoulders his rifle and goes into trackless forests in search of deer and turkeys, or to dig rock oysters or mussels, she by his side and gathers shells and seaweed to make, during the long hours of the coming winter, little mantle ornaments as souvenirs of the sunny summer days when the song of the robin and the cuckoo echoed from the leafy bowers overhead. Should she prefer not to accompany him, she has her hammock tried up between two trees and there she lies with a book in hand till she is finally welcomed home as he returns with the spoils of the chase. Should it come on to rain she gathers up everything and rushes indoors, laughing at the storm without. In short, the woman who is a neat housewife at home will be equally so in camp and make a heaven of the bleakest sand dune between San Francisco and Cape Flattery.

The canvas colonies along the shores of Shoalwater Bay are quite numerous, those about Oysterville often exceeding fifty in number. Some of these are made of striped duck and are quite costly, while others are primitive if not slovenly. The best tent we have seen for this purpose is called the "Gypsy Queen" and is divided into three apartments one of which serves as a dining-room while the others are a bed-room and kitchen on either side. The next best is what is called a "Squatter Sovereign," fashioned something after the style of "Nessacook's" shanty tent, being nine feet high at the front and six feet high at the rear and divided into a bed-room and dining-room with an awning outside under which the cooking is done. If the party is restricted alone to the sterner sex, nothing quite as expensive as these tents are needed. A plain 7x10 wall tent with a fly, is large enough for two people or a 10x14 will hold six on a pinch. If the party go inland they might as well leave tents behind, but if they go to the beach a tent is needed as a protection against the coast fogs. Go and enjoy yourselves before the September days come. Remember that the first thing needed to endear gipsy life to you is the possession of a cheerful spirit. It will be a good friend to you when your money is gone. -Sunday Mercury, 19th.

SUICIDE OF THE SECTION LINE ROAD.

J. C. Howerton, brother of Nelson Howerton, one of the proprietors of the hotel at Ilwaco, who has been stopping at the residence of his sister on the section line road, near the school house died yesterday from the effects of an overdose of morphine, which he took about 9 o'clock on Thursday morning. It seems the deceased was a heavy drinker and was in the habit of taking morphine at times. He had been on a protracted spree, went to his sister's house, where he lay down after taking a dose of the drug from a box which laid on a chair beside the bed. He soon became stupid and remained in that condition until past midnight. His friends becoming alarmed, sent for the doctor, who arrived there early in the morning and upon learning the facts in the case, tried to get him to take something to counteract the effects of the poison, but found it impossible to force anything down him, and finding he could do nothing for him, he left. From that time the man never rallied, but at 3 o'clock in the morning he died. Deceased left a note in his pocket-book stating that he was making an overdose for the purpose of ending his life, which had become a burden. His age was 50 years. His brother arrived from Ilwaco last evening. It is not known whether an inquest will be held. -Oregonian, 19th.

ANOTHER STROKE. "What fools these mortals be!" How truly is one half the world made to be robbed by the other half! In an open envelope under a one-cent stamp was received the following printed slip:

This wonderful plan, without danger or loss, Keeps your cash in your hands and without anything to trouble it; And every time that you fold it across, 'Tis plain as the light of the day that you double it.
