PRESIDENTIAL PROCLAMATION.

The president of the United States has just received the sad tidings of the death of that illustrious citizen and ex-president of the United States, General Ulysses S. Grant, at Mt. McGregor, in the state of New York, to which place he had lately been removed in an endeavor to prolong his life. In making this announcement to the people of the United States the president is impressed with the magnitude of the public loss of a military leader, who was in the hour of victory magnanimous, and amid disaster serene and self-sustained. Who, in every station, whether as a soldier or as a chief magistrate twice called to power by his fellow-countrymen, stood unwaveringly in the way of duty, undeterred by doubt, single-minded and straightforward. The entire country has witnessed with deep emotion his prolonged and patient struggle with a painful disease, and has watched by his couch of suffering with tearful sympathy. The destined end has come at last, and his spirit has returned to the Creator who sent it forth. The great heart of the nation that followed him with love and admiration, bows now in sorrow above him dead—tenderly mindful of his virtues, his great patriotic services and the loss occasioned by his death. In testimony of respect to the memory of General Grant, it is ordered that the executive mansion and the several departments in Washington be draped in mourning for a period of thirty days, and that the public business houses shall on the day of funeral be suspended, and the secretaries of war and of the navy will cause orders to be issued that appropriate military and naval services be rendered on that day.
In witness whereof I have set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.
Done at the city of Washington this 23d day of July, A. D. 1885, and of the independence of the United States, the one hundred and tenth.
GROVER CLEVELAND,
By the President,
T. F. BAYARD, Sec'y of State.

GRANT'S LAST MOMENTS.

The morning had passed five minutes beyond 8 o'clock and there was not one of the strained and waiting watchers but who could mark the nearness of the life to its final ebbing. Dr. Douglas noted the nearness of the supreme moment, and quietly approached the bedside. As he bent above it the sorrow of the gray-haired physician seemed closely allied with that of the family. Dr. Shray also drew near. It was seven minutes after 8 o'clock, and the eyes of the general were closing. His breathing grew more hushed as the functions of the heart and lungs were hastened to the closing of the ex-president's life. A peaceful expression seemed to be deepening in the firm and strong-lined face, and it was reflected as a closing comfort in the sad hearts that beat quietly under the stress of loving suspense. A minute more passed and was closing as the general drew a deeper breath. There was an exhalation like that of one relieved of a long and anxious tension. Members of the group were impelled each a step nearer the bed, and each waited to note the next respiration, but it did not come. There was absolute stillness in the room and a hush of expectancy, so that no sound broke the silence, save the singing of birds in the pines outside the cottage and the measured throbbing of the engine that all night had waited by the mountain depot. "It's over," quietly spoke Dr. Douglas, and there came then heavily to each witness the realization that General Grant was dead. Then the doctors withdrew, the nurse closed the eyelids and composed the dead general's head, after which each of the family group passed to the bedside, one after the other, and touched their lips upon the quiet face so lately stilled.
Sensible Advice on Cooking.
A wide-awake paper says, "A family fed on fried breakfast, with the juice all solidified and the steak full of grease, and sodden potatoes and heavy bread, suffers not only in stomach but in nerve and brain." Yes, and the family will have dyspepsia, debility and bad blood. Give them Brown's Iron Bitters and drive those diseases out. Mr. J. Hoehn, Delio, Ohio, writes, "I have used Brown's Iron Bitters for impurity of blood, and am greatly benefited."

Things that will wear are not to be had cheap. Whether it be a fabric or a principle, if it is to endure it must certainly cost something.
