Fiching in August.
There are several prominent reasons which furnish sufficient argument, if argument is necessary, against any probability of salmon fishing on the Columbus in August. First and foremost, it is is unprofitable, the salmon that are coming innow are of the white, razor back variety, nud are of a kind that ne packer with the slightest regard for his reputation would allow to go out under his brand; it is unwise: the few miserable cases more that would be packed would deteriorate the entire pack in commercial standing; it is unnecessary into a soft is one of those things that are inexplicible. ## HE HAD LIGHT.

But it Was Rough on the Landlord.

One night, says Burdette, I was shave ing myself preparatory to the evening's entertainment, in a small room of an conomical hotel. The room, as usual, was arranged with special reference to the comfort and convenience to the guest who shaved himself. The gas bracket with its single burner, was high up on the wall above the head of the guest. The bureau, holding the mirror in its gaunt arms, stood on three legs away over on the opposite side of the room, as far away from the gas and the window as it could get. The gas being economically it could get. The gas being economically administered, burned with a feeble blue light, and occasionally coughed in a hec-tic manner, as though it would go out the first time the door opened. My friend, the commercial traveler from Bridgeport, who sat watching me with tears in his eyes, said: "Aren't you often annoyed by the miserably small amount of gas you are permitted to burn in these little hotels?" I said that the illuminalittle hotels?" I said that the illumina-tion of my apartments—I always call my room apartments—seldom reached that degree of brilliancy that enabled me to find the bed without first falling over all the chairs, to wit, one chair in the apartments. He went to his room and in a moment reappeared. in the apartments. He went to his room and in a moment reappeared. "Here," he said "is something right in my line, and it's just what you want. With these little tongs you can take off any burner in the United States, see? And with them you put in place of the stingy fellow, this twenty-four foot burner, like this." And look, a fanlight as big as a piece of pie blazed up and flooded the room with radiance. Even the accumulated lint and burned match es of years under the bureau rejoiced in the wonderfal light. "Be careful" said my benefactor, "and take off your own burner every morning." While we talked, the landlord, passing down the hall, opened the door without knocking and looked in. "Oh!" he said, "excuse me; but I saw the glare or-er the transom, and thought the room was on fire." But we said "Oh! no," and went on talking about the Bartholdi stat-nette, and the landlord didn't say any-thing, but just stood and looked at the gas jet, and kept looking and looking. At last he went away and we heard him sigh wearily as he tottered down stairs to order the bread cut thin for supper, and scratch eggs, which were at that time sity cents a dozen, of the bill of to order the break cut thin for supper, and scratch eggs, which were at that time sirty cents a dozen, off the bill of fare. Four years I carried my friend's gas fitting apparatus up and down the land with me; sometimes I broke the old burner and sometimes broke the new one, but I never broke the tongs, and I never again shaved in the dark if there was any gas in the house.
