Notice to Advertisers. THE ASTORIAN guarantees to its advertisers the largest circulation of any newspaper published on the Columbia River.

This paper is on file at the St. Charles Hotel, Portland, Or.

C. T. Thomas goes to Ilwaco this morning. Trolling for salmon is a present favorite sport at Seattle.

Logs are $6 a thousand on the Sound with prospects of an advance. The Columbia arrived yesterday afternoon. The Oregon sailed at 5.

The Birmah has 26,000 cases salmon aboard. She takes on 11,500 more. The Astoria campers leave for Clatsop beach, on the Sam at 7:30 this morning.

The I. X. L. Packing company will hold its annual meeting on the 31st inst. It is said that there are 100,000 cases salmon in England and 35,000 in Australia.

The Oregonian declares that sheel would feel cool by contrast to a Portlandite. The run of tom cod is increasing and anyone can have a mess that wants to catch the little codlets.

The sale of the furniture of the Astor House will be continued by E. C. Holden at ten o'clock this morning. John Robinson's circus shows here on the 31st. He advertises a good display and gives all the details.

The hop crop throughout the state is uncommonly good; but raisers will not pick them unless they can get it done for 35 cents a box. R. B. Marlon's fine bay horse, "Doc," died in his stable yesterday morning. The animal was valued at $250 and is a loss to its owner.

Cool breezes from the ocean yesterday dispelled the dense smoke, and made a pleasing contrast to the heaviness of the few preceding days. The tide of travel has set the other way and seafarers are returning inland. Wonder if there will be a road to Clatsop when next the summer visitors head this way.

Forty thousand dollars are reported to yet remain unpaid by the O. & C. R. R. of the debts contracted before its assignment. Receiver Koehler expects to pay most of the amount of the coming fall with the earnings of the road.

A fair house greeted the Madison Square theater company last evening in their matchless rendition of the famous play "The Rajah." They are all thorough in their profession and make up as good a theatrical company as ever appeared in Astoria. This is the first troupe Carl Adler has managed, and the arrangements he made for the comfort and convenience of the public deserve commendation.

John McDonald and Pepper Taylor, two United States prisoners, were taken to San Francisco on the Oregon yesterday in charge of Sergeant L. Michael, of Fort Walla Walla. They are both sentenced to three years on Alcatraz island for desertion from the Second cavalry, at Fort Walla Walla on May 12, 1885. McDonald is 29 years old and is a native of New York; Taylor is 24 years old and was born in Delaware.

Visit of Father Upchurch. Father Upchurch, the honored founder of the A. O. U. W., arrived on the Columbia yesterday morning and was met and welcomed by a committee from Seaside Lodge No. 12 of this city. The original programme was to have a social reception at the lodge yesterday evening and a public meeting at some suitable hall this evening, but the absence of the gentlemen who were expected to accompany Mr. Upchurch made it necessary to forego the latter part of the programme. In the evening he met Seaside Lodge at the lodge room and was welcomed in a speech by J. Q. A. Bowley. Others present also made congratulatory addresses. The founder of the order responded by giving an account of the order, of his travels, and made some excellent suggestions. He leaves for Portland on the Telephone this morning.

Giving the Soap Away. The steamer R. R. Thompson, while on her way from Portland to Astoria, Sunday evening, ran into a fishing net below Banier, entangling the trawline in her wheel. The steamer put into Banier, where the net was taken off and the journey to Portland was resumed. The question now is, who is the owner of the net? Whoever it was, violated the laws of Oregon by fishing for salmon out of season, and is liable to arrest. There were no lights on the end of the net, and some individuals were earning a few shakies and taking great risks.—News, 18.

A Great Trail—Not to be Forgotten. Even the best writers often make slips. What is written for a daily newspaper is often so hurried as to preclude revision.—Oregonian, 18.

Turps. Eastern Turpentine in quantities of suit at WILSON & FISHER'S. If there is any body in Astoria that desires success in business, it is Jeff. At his own expense he has built and thrown open for traffic a sidewalk from the rear of the Telephone Saloon to the Roadway. May he live long and get his reward in this world.

From San Diego. Just received per Fannie Adele, the Finest and Freshest Honey. None Better. For sale only at Foard & Stokes'.

At Frank Fabre's. Board for $2.50 a month. The best in the city. Dinner from 5 to 7.

W. Lussier of San Francisco has engaged in the photograph business with Crow the leading photographer. Get your photographs taken at Crow's gallery by W. Lussier of San Francisco.

WHAT OTHERS SAY. Contemporary Comment Regarding the Wheat Shipments of the Island Empire.

In discussing the question, with THE ASTORIAN, of shipping wheat in sea-going vessels, the Oregonian takes the ground that all the wheat raised in Oregon, and for that matter, Washington territory too, will always be shipped from Portland, for it says "it is less costly to bring vessels to Portland than to boat the wheat to Astoria." The Oregonian, no doubt, bases its position, that Portland will be the only wheat market for the country for all time to come, on the theory that as Portland has heretofore been successful in keeping the Columbia river from being opened, she can always do so, and thus will all the wheat have to be hauled to tidewater, (which means Portland), by rail. But suppose this state of things will not always exist and that the Columbia river will at some future time be opened to navigation, would the Oregonian then say that it is less costly to boat the wheat up to Portland and load it into vessels to be transported back again than to load at Astoria?—Pendleton Tribune, 7.

The ASTORIAN answers an article in the Oregonian regarding the commerce of the Columbia, in a very sharp and pointed manner. It clearly shows that other towns in Oregon have an interest in the great "River of the West," besides "Portland and Vancouver," although the metropolitan has for a number of years past attempted to control the whole commerce of this natural artery. It is time for the Oregonian and the merchants of Portland to understand that the Columbia river does not take its rise in that city, and that its outlet to the ocean is not through the mouth of the Willamette. Astoria and the inland empire have been almost entirely ignored for many years past, and the chief city of the state, and in almost every instance there has been no attention paid to any enterprise in which the seaboard and interior were directly interested. There is a tendency to concentrate the wealth of the metropolis. As much consideration has been paid to dredging the Willamette as to the improvement of the bar at the mouth of the Columbia, while the interior of the northwest, drained by this mighty river has received no attention at all. It is time that the country outside of Portland should awaken to a true realization of their position in times past, and do something to divorce these sections from the grasping greed of the Willamette city.

The development of eastern Oregon in the few years past has made it one of the most important agricultural sections of the northwest, and the attention of the westward-bound producers has been attracted to some other shipping point than Portland. While the discriminating rates in favor of that city continue, it will have the advantage of any other town in Oregon; but when the inland highway to the ocean is cleared of obstructions, Astoria, the seaport of Oregon, will command the trade of this section. How long our people will have to wait for the opening of the river, with the opposition of the railroads and the wealth of the metropolis against it, we cannot tell; but a giant effort can be made by all sections interested, and the importance of the work made known to our congressional representation. And all efforts in this direction will be heartily seconded by Astoria, which for long years has been forced to play second fiddle to the rolling dynasty which presides at the mouth of the Willamette.—Dallas Times Mountaineer.

It is a late hour in the day for Portland to wake up to the fact that the opening of the Columbia for continuous navigation was their best means of salvation. But they have been too fearful of the claims which Astoria would put in for the business of the eastern empire in case the river was fully opened to the sea, and even now they look on Astoria as in the way of deriving great benefits from the opening of the river to continuous navigation to the sea. The facts are, Portland is beginning to foresee that she has no easy task to hold the supremacy against the places where God and nature designed that the most business should be done on this northwest coast. The struggles for the perpetual mastery here are incessant and almost unending, and she deserves great credit for the energy she has displayed, only she has expended this energy in the wrong direction in endeavoring to force transportation and business away from the channels where they properly belong. When the Columbia river is rendered continuously navigable to the sea from this great inland empire, Portland can no more hold the trade of this same inland empire than can San Francisco.—Leviston, Idaho, Teller, 15.

ufarfaztaz Mrs. Le Drotte. NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 17.—Mr. Emilio Le Drotte was engaged in casting bolts for his rifle at his residence to-day. His wife was assisting him, and he requested her to put the bolts in his pouch horn. By mistake she placed the hot bolts in the powder horn, and a tremendous explosion followed. This instantly killed three of the children, and severely wounded Mr. and Mrs. Le Drotte and the mother children. It is thought that Mrs. Le Drotte will not recover. The furniture of the house was shattered and the bones wrecked. The walls on two sides of the room were blown out.

Look Out For Them. It is the prevailing opinion at Alkali that the recent fire at that place was the work of a gang of toughs who are following Robinson's circus through the country. Of course the circus folks are not to blame, and they worked nobly to subdue the flames. One of the performers had his skull broken and was presented with a purse by appreciative admirers in Alkali.—News, 18.

IT MEASURED EIGHTEEN FEET ACROSS. The item in yesterday's ASTORIAN about the alleged octopus or devil fish at North Beach has been received with incredulity by those who affect to believe that devil fish do not grow so large. As proof that the matter was not exaggerated the following evidence is submitted, the narrator's name being withheld by special request:

"Some years ago some devil fish appeared in a harbor where several schooners were lying, and the sailors, who were Swedes and had never seen one of the fish before, were then playing around in the harbor, and thought it would be a good joke to spear one. So they took a light skiff and a pair of old whale harpoons and ropes that belonged to the schooner and started out. In a short time one of the boats got alongside of a sea-bat, and a rouser it was, too. When they struck it you'd have thought the whole bottom had been hit, and a second later that boat was rushing up the harbor at a rate she never went before. It was a blind lead, though, and the fish had to turn, and the skiff was jerked around so quickly that she half filled, and one man was tumbled overboard as they found out.

"Up the channel they went, some yelling for the boat and the others to cut the line as it was evident that she would fill in a moment; but it happened that the only man who had a knife had been dropped overboard, and as they couldn't get the line untied, they had to let it go. They said afterward they were about to jump overboard and let everything go, when the fish changed its course and headed right for one of the harborers. They had to jump then, anyhow, and as they went overboard, the fish dove under the vessel, and the skiff struck her side with a crash, and was knocked all to pieces. They did not get up to the surface until later, to which the line was made fast, went off with the fish. The men were picked up, and two days later the devil fish floated ashore. It measured about 18 feet across, and was estimated to weigh a ton."

TRouble All Around. Last Tuesday, August 11, Miss Jennie Lee died very suddenly. This is a very distressing case. When preacher Nichols left here for parts unknown, Mr. Lee deserted his family to follow him. Some time ago the only son, a young man of 22 or 23, went down the Columbia to seek work, and was supposed to be at Oak Point. During harvest the daughter was taken sick with typhoid fever, but so far recovered and she was considered out of danger. Sitting up in the bed taking food and joking with some friends, she remarked that she "could eat an apple if they would let her have it." Just then her mother went into the kitchen, but had scarcely reached it when the girl dropped dead. The suddenness of her daughter's death coupled with other matters, drove the mother distracted, and she had to be taken to the hospital for a day or two. A telegraphic dispatch was sent to Oak Point, where the son, Charles W. Lee, was supposed to be, but the answer came back that he could not be found. The dead girl was kept out of the ground as long as possible in the hope that her brother would come, but as he did not, she had to be buried with her mother as the only mourner.—La Fayette Correspondence Oregonian.

NAMING THE BOY. Simon Gardner, a citizen of Blossom Grove, recently addressed an important letter to the governor. The following is an extract from the communication: "I have this here day named a fine boy after you. He is as lively as a harvest hand's appetite and can squall louder than a goat. How I do wish you could see him. His mother was dead set in naming him after his uncle John, because John keeps a store, but I says, 'No, no, mother, says I, 'we will name him after the governor of this here state. We ain't never showed our respect for none of the governors, and it's high time, let me tell you.' 'What's the use in naming him after the governor?' says mother; 'I'll forget it in five minutes and never will send the child nothing and he is needing of everything.' 'Tut, mother, John won't give him anything.' 'Yes, he will,' mother says. 'John will do the right thing, see if he doesn't.' I wouldn't give up, though, and now the child is named after you. How I wish you could see him. He is mighty scarce o' duds, but he's got a voice like a calf. He is the spiciest chap I ever seen in my born days. Mother wants to bet me that you won't send him nothing, but she I don't bet sense I took to preaching. She 'lows that you air stingy, but I know a heap better than that. If you want to disappoint mother send—I was going to say send down something, but never mind. How I do wish you could see him.'—Arkansas Traveller.

Catching Salmon in Japan. Japan must be the salmon fisher's paradise. Professor Milne, of earthquake celebrity, has recently visited the Kurile islands, which stretch between Japan and Siberia, with the object of studying the volcanoes there. He sailed around the island of Iturup, which is about 713 miles long by eighty broad, and which is inhabited here and there along the coast by Ainos, who are engaged in fishing during the season. Here is his description of the abundance of fish: "The fish which are caught are salmon and salmon trout. These exist in such numbers during the summer and autumn season that their fins sticking out of the water near the entrances to the rivers look like tangled masses of fish while the rivers it is but little exaggeration to say that the pools are mixtures of fish and water, with a rifle bullet you may pierce four or five at a single shot. The shingle shoals are often covered with fish, which in their struggle for existence have become so weak that, having once returned ashore, they are unable to return to deeper water. A single haul of a small seine brought to land a huge heap of fish, varying in weight from four to twenty pounds, the number of which we roughly estimated at 5,000."

A Startling Discovery. Physicians are often startled by remarkable discoveries. The fact that Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and all Throat and Lung diseases is daily curing patients that they have given up to die, is startling them to realize their sense of duty, and examine into the merits of this wonderful discovery; resulting in hundreds of our best Physicians using it in their practice.
