The Astorian Job

According to recent statistics, about 150,000 vessels are engaged in Europe and North America in fishing.

Nearly 700,000 men are engaged in this industry. A ton of fish is said to be equal to 28 sheep. The catch of fish in European countries, the United States and Canada, for a single year, is equal to 42,000,000 sheep. Little account is taken of the harvest of the sea. The fishing boats at Ryemouth, England, use about 47,000,000 mussels, or 620 tons, annually in the haddock fisheries. The annual fish product of the United States is esti-mated to be equal to 5,000,000 sheep. Were it not for the products of the sea, there would be a famine every year in many lands. Food-fishes, systems and clams are decreased or increased according to the draft made sources of supply.

A committee of inquiry has recently been appointed to ascertain, if possible, to what extent the seals near the mouth of San Francisco harbor destroy fish. The testimony thus far is somewhat conflicting. Seals live on fish. They are indiscriminate feeders. No doubt they destroy many tons of fish daily near the mouth of the harbor and many more tons all along the coast. But long before there was any city on the present site of San Francisco seals were just as WHOLESALE AGENTS FOREIGH CREEK, abundant as now, and probably more so. The bay and adjacent waters were alive with fish. But at this date hardly less than 400,000 people are dependent upon fish caught in these waters, taking account, of course of the fish distributed to suburban towns. The immense quantities of salmon are taken from rivers flowing

> For anything that appears to the contrary, seals have been getting their daily rations of fish off the harbor for more than a thousand years. It was not until about 400,000 people and another large amount was drawn in the interest of foreign commerce. that any apparent diminution of fish was noted. It is probable that the fish now taken in the waters of California and Oregon annually are equal to 1,000,000 sheep as a food supply. So great are these resources on the use of liquor have been a matter of endless assertion and contradiction chiefly because he was a man of sober life, who sometimes used whisky free ly, and with such men a single witness who has seen a drink taken will color the gossip of a decide with some story which is a concretion of falsehood about a single grain of truth. Gen. Rawlins early saw that safety in the trials, temptations and exposures of camp-life lay in total abstinence, and while he controlled the headquarters mess the only liquor was in the staff surgeon's chest, and precious little of that. In the campaigning, which stretched from Shiloh on, Gen. Rawlins was relentless on any evasion of this rule. An officer on Gen. Thomas' staff tells a story of on these supplies, or the care or nega visit to Gen. Grant's headquarters in the field during the Vicksburg lect touching the protection of these campaign, where he was made at home in the headquarters mess. It was a Mississippi June, hot and dusty, and he was surrounded by old West Point friends; but first the afternoon, supper, and then thd evening work away without word or sign of "how" as they used to say in the Seventh cavalry. At last he ventured on a suggestion, a limid, halting remark to the surgeon on headquarters staff, who, in a whisper, explained that Gen. Rawlins was "death on" liquor, but that toward taps the surgeon's shelter tap might hold something. An hour later found the officer and the surgeon sitting on each side of a cracker-box which carried a tin cup, a goblet and a bottle-the one bottle in headquarters. There was a gurg-ling sound, the aroma of old rye on the air, and outside came a steptwo men looked guiltily at each other; the flap of the shelter-tent moved— the lips of the surgeon shaped the words: "It's Rawlins"—and the flap flew back and Grant himself stepped half in, reached out without a word, seized the goblet, emptied it and re-tired, as silently. by cattlemen. Many of these cattle companies control more than 100,000 each. The drive of cattle last year from Texas alone produced the owners about $5,000,000. The Wyoming Stock-growers' association began op erations a little more than ten years ago with ten members and 20,000 head of cattle. That association now has a membership of over four bundred, and owns 2,000 000 head of cattle, worth not less than $40,000,000. business of cattle-growing has not cheapened the cost of meat to the In 1868 the estimated value of a Texan steer fit to drive to market, was $4.50. In 1884 the estimated value was $17. So great were the profits of the business, which ranged from 30 to 60 per cent., that the cattlemen began to look around for larger domains. The Indian reservations in the territories attracted their attention. The cattlemen obtained a footbold on

Purely Vegetable Compound, that acts directly upon the liver; curing the many diseases incident to that important organ, and preventing the numerous ailments that arise from its deranged or tornio action, such as Dyspepsia Jaundice, Biliousness, Costweness Melaria, Sick-headache, Rheumattern etc. It is therefore a ruism that "To have Good Health he Liver must be kept in order."

The cattlemen obtained a foothold on some of the reservations in Montana, Idaho and Dakota. They then made a raid on the Indian territory, leasing large areas of land at two cents an acre, until they had covered something like 4,00,000 acres. It is from these lands that they have been moved off. Some of them are now heading for New Mexico, but not without some opposition from that quarter. The governor of the territory says that there is room enough for all the cattle bere which it is proposed to remove from the Indian territory.
