

The Daily Astorian. ASTORIA, OREGON: TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1885

FLAXSEED seems to pay about as well as any Oregon crop this year, the Willamette farmers getting $1.50 a bushel, cash, for all they raised, which beats wheat raising.

THE Albany Democrat denies the oft-repeated assertion that the farms of Linn county are covered with mortgages, and says that but a small proportion are. It says: "When one man gets heavily involved the big eyes of the public always see a dozen."

THE Oregon Democratic Journal wants to have the next legislature pass a law compelling the O. R. & N. company to charge no more than two and thirty-ninety-sixths cents to carry a bushel of wheat from The Dalles to Portland.

MURPHY, of the Olympia Standard, who has been running that paper for twenty-five years, says, "There never has been a newspaper published in this place which could pay journeymen's wages to compositors, to say nothing of compensation for editorial work and other expenses, from its legitimate profits. It may be humiliating to acknowledge it, but there is not a station on the railroad between Tenino and Kalama, where there is not a better prospect for a paying list of subscribers than at the capital of the territory."

THERE have been filed in the office of the auditor of Pierce county, Washington territory, the articles of incorporation of the North Pacific Mining and Trust company. The incorporators are Senator John P. Jones, of Nevada, Nelson Bennett, a well known railroad contractor, James M. Buckley, assistant general manager of the western division of the Northern Pacific railroad, C. D. Laughton, lieutenant governor of Nevada, R. J. Weisbach, mayor of Tacoma, and Theodore C. Sears. The capital stock of the company is $1,500,000. The objects of the company are the acquisition of mineral lands, developing of mines, etc., the construction of tramways and their operation.

THE Vancouver board of trade at a recent special meeting adopted a resolution offered by Eugene Semple, instructing the secretary to correspond with boards of trade and municipal authorities of the various cities and towns in the Columbia and Willamette valleys, with a view to calling at an early date a convention at some central point, to devise ways and means and adopt a uniform method for securing the government aid needed in the improvement of the Columbia and Willamette rivers and their tributaries. Mr. Semple observes that the Columbia river is the only stream which breaks through the great system of the Cascade-Sierra Nevada mountain range for a distance of over 1,500 miles, and that it is national in character, and should be considered in the same sense as the lower Mississippi.

THE San Francisco correspondent of the Portland News writes: "There are thousands of unemployed laborers in and about the city. As times grow closer along the coast all the men, who ought to have staid in the newer towns, flocked to the metropolis. Not being skilled in any given line, they are having a hard time of it, and the winter promises to be a pretty tough one for many of them. There is the usual, and more than the usual, run of suicides, and they will probably continue. Any sort of rough work and rough living in the country would be better for them than coming to the city. Here most of them are strangers—utterly unknown; beside the employment offices have for months, been full of applicants. In general a man can get work if he is really bent on finding it, but some places are so much harder than others, as many miners, railroad shovelers, wood cutters and others have found."
