Dr. Sanford's LIVER INVIGORATOR

Is just what its name implies; a Purely Vegetable Compound, that acts directly upon the Liver; curing the many diseases incident to that important organ, and preventing the numerous ailments that arise from its deranged or torpid action, such as Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Biliousness, Constipation, Malaria, Sick-headache, Rheumatism, etc. It is therefore a crutch that "To have Good Health the Liver must be kept in order."
DR. SANFORD'S LIVER INVIGORATOR invigorates the Liver, regulates the BOWELS, Strengthens the System, Purifies the Blood, Assists Digestion, Prevents Fevers. Is a Household Need. An Invaluable Family Medicine for common complaints.
DR. SANFORD'S LIVER INVIGORATOR. An experience of Forty years, and Thousands of Testimonials prove its Merit.
FOR SALE BY ALL DEALERS IN MEDICINES.
For full information send your address for this Book on the "Liver and its Diseases." It is prepared by "DR. SANFORD 24 BEANE ST., NEW YORK CITY."

A Chat with the President.

When President Arthur paid a visit to the great National Park several of the prominent men of Wyoming, including myself, went up to Green river, where the presidential party would leave the special train and, under escort, cross overland to the park. There were half a dozen of us who felt as though the northeast corner of the national fabric rested on our shoulders, and we felt that so long as the president was to visit for a number of weeks within the borders of Wyoming we ought, as a matter of common politeness, to go and give him the freedom of the park and the Shoshone reservation.

In the party we had a member of the supreme court of the territory, the United States Marshal, the present surveyor general of the territory, and myself.

When the president's train arrived, bearing besides the president, General Sheridan, Senator Vest, Secretary of War Lincoln, Colonel Sheridan and others, we waited quite a while for the president to come out and see us, but he remained in his car. Thinking at last that perhaps the president had not heard that we were there, we walked around the train a few times, so that he could see us and call us in and converse with us. But he made no overtures whatever, and we finally had to go into his car and introduce ourselves. He may have been overjoyed to see us, and doubtless was, but he has remarkable control over himself that way.

When the president took my shapely hand in his and Colonel Sheridan told him who I was, he looked me square in the face with a sort of rising inflection as though he might be trying to remember who I was, but could not. At that moment I would have given $2 if I could have thought of the proper thing to say. The more he looked at me with those dark, sorrowful eyes of his and patiently waited for me to say something, the less I seemed to have my mind with me, and I wanted to tell him that in the hurry of starting off, I had left my thinker at home on the piano. At last I got desperate and said: "Mr. President, don't you think we are having rather a backward spring?"

That was nearly two years ago, and he has never, officially or otherwise, gratified my morbid curiosity. He still looked at me in dumb wonder and surprise. Perhaps he felt oppressed with the pomp and glitter of my good clothes.

Marshal Schmitzer and Surveyor General Meldrum dropped into an easy conversation with General Sheridan and fought their battles over again. Just then Judge Blair was presented to the president and I fell into the hands of Secretary Lincoln.

Probably the secretary still wakes up nights and thinks with pleasure of that little chat we had together at Green river. He looked at me in an attentive, and interested way that flattered me at the time very much, but when I saw him a half hour afterwards looking at a young cinnamon bear in the same way, I was no longer proud.

Casualty I looked up at Judge Blair and the president to see how they were coming on. The president had nailed the judge with that same earnest, expectant look, and the judge was feeling of his head to see if it were there, and at the same time was trying to think of a hard word.

Just then the president seemed to think of something that he had left in the other car. He rose and with a firm, dignified step, walked away, and I have never seen him since. Neither has he seen me since.

"It is years since last we met, and we may never meet again; I have struggled to forget, but the struggle was in vain."

Soon afterward we all hastily withdrew. We thought it would be better for us to withdraw before the rest of the party did. It would be more etiquette and bonhomie.

Take it all around, we had a very pleasant call on the party and everything passed off smoothly. Still, I made one resolution on that occasion which I have rigidly adhered to. When I call on another president of the United States it will be when he sends a double barrel quo warranto after me or when I have business with him of an important nature. I shall never call on the president of the United States again just to kill time. The desire to rub up against greatness has been fully glutted in me. The wild yearning to shed a happy smile on the president, who is a total stranger to me, has been thoroughly satiated. Should one of my own family be chosen to that great office and insist on my coming to Washington to run the administration through the holidays, I might do so, otherwise I warn the future presidents of this republic that I will never, never darken their doors.

Why Bismarck Admired Fleury.

Bismarck has nothing but contempt for Democracy. The stories that he likes best are those of men who have outwitted mobs. During the siege of Paris, while he was at Versailles, a pass was applied for by a relative of M. Cuvillier Fleury, the eminent critic and member of the French Academy. The chancellor at once gave the pass saying: "M. Fleury is an admirable man. I know a capital story about him." The story was this: M. Fleury, who had been a tutor to the Duc d'Angouleme, was in 1848 private secretary to the Duchess of Orleans. When the revolutions of February broke out, a rabble invaded the Palais Royal, and the princess resided, and began smashing works of art, pictures, statues and nicknacks. All the household was seized with panic except M. Fleury, who, throwing off his coat, smeared his face and hands with coal, caught up a poker and rushed among the mob, shouting: "Here, I'll show you where the best pictures are." So saying, he plied his poker on furniture of no value and, thus winning the confidence of the ruffians, was able to lead them out of the royal apartments into the kitchen regions, where they spent their fury upon the contents of the larder and cellar. The sequel of this story is very droll, and Bismarck relates it with great relish. A few days after he had saved the Palais Royal, M. Fleury was recognized in the street as the Duchess of Orleans' secretary and mobbed. He was being somewhat roughly hustled, when a hulking water-carrier elbowed his way through the throng and roared: "Let that man be! He is one of the right sort. He led us to the pillage of the Palais Royal the other day!"

His Loss was Her Gain.

"Well madam," said a fashionable physician to a wealthy lady patient, "if you don't like my prescriptions, perhaps you had better try Parker's Tonic, or some other quack stuff." "You don't mean it, Doctor," she answered, "but your advice may be good for all that. Sometimes what you call 'quack stuff' is the best and most scientific medicine, after all." She got a bottle of Parker's Tonic and it cured her of neuralgia arising from a disordered stomach and nerves. She told her friends and now they all keep a doctor at home in the form of Parker's Tonic.

Collect-on-Delivery Young Man.

A fashionable young man of this beautiful village, who is of a very economical turn, has the habit when he sends a note to his girl of adding this postscript: "Give Legro a biscuit for carrying this note." Recently the young lady promptly sent the young man quite a number of biscuits, informing him that he could henceforth prepay postage, and when the rations were exhausted to draw on her for more. A cold wave now blows between that young lady and her collect-on-delivery young man.

What the Boys Told Him.

"I like to know about some office under Cleveland?" he said as he beckoned a lawyer across the street from the door of his saloon.

"Well, what is it?"

"I like to know if I was to have some office. My place was headquarters last fall for some Cleveland glubs, and all der boys tell me I vvas sure of something fat."

"Then you are looking for something?"

"Vhell I dunno. When Cleveland vvas elected der boys began to drop in here. One of 'em he says: 'What a bostmaster you vill make for Detroit. By George! I vvis I vvas you!' Vhell, dot tickles me, you know, and I treat der crowd to peer. Pooty soon another crowd comes in, and one of der poys calls out:

"Let dis convention come to some order. We vvas now in der presence of der next boss of der gustom house. I calls for three cheers for Carl Dunder!"

"When he says dot I feel good all oafar, and it seems right to set oop der peer."

"I see."

"Vhell, almost enafery night a gang comes around to my place to shake me py der hand, and somebody says: 'Hip! hip! hurrah! Carl Dunder vvas solid mit der coming Administration! He picks out der fattest office for himself, and he remembers his friends mit der lean ones!'"

"When somebody talks like dot, I feels shimley and soft, and I tap a new keg of lager. Now I like to ask you if I vvas right. My poy Shake says I doan get so much as a shmell of office, and my oldt woman says der poys make a fool of me."

"I guess they are right."

"Don't you pelief I vvas der gustom house?"

"No, sir."

"Nor der bost-office."

"No, sir."

"Don't I haf some place at $2,000 a year?"

"I doubt it."

"Wasn't I even invited down to Washington to see Cleveland go mit der White House?"

"Not unless you invite yourself."

"Vhell! vhell! So Shake and der old wvman vvas right and der poys vvas putting some soft soap on me."

"Yes."

"Dot vvas all right, but I like to say something, und doan you forget him. To-night dot same crowd comes around here, und somebody vill begin to hurrah for der next bostmaster. You ought to be here! Der dog chill be loose, and I shall haf two glubs handy, and you vill see fifteen men in such a hurry to get outt doors dot you belief some earthquakes vvas shaking oop Detroit! Shust come around und see how a disappointed office-seeker vill handle two glubs und a pull dog!"

Andrew Johnson's Peculiar Oratory.

Andrew Johnson, then Senator from Tennessee, spoke for two long days in opposition to secession. His manner of speaking was peculiar to himself, and not very agreeable. He had two distinct tones of voice, and they were as opposite to each other as possible, and alternated so constantly that an auditor who should have heard without seeing him would almost have thought his speech was made by two different persons. His manner was deliberate, and he spoke extemporane and often in a conversational tone, raising his voice to a loud pitch whenever he was particularly roused or earnest. He had all the Southern peculiarities of pronunciation and said "dissolution" for "dissolution," "keer" for "care," etc. His speeches were rambling and loose in construction and he repeated himself endlessly, and yet, with all these disadvantages, he made so many strong points and brought to bear such a mass and variety of authority that he was very effective.

What is everybody's business is nobody's business. If you have a headache everybody thinks it his duty to prescribe something which he is sure will cure you. Take our advice, pay no attention to them and use St. Jacobs Oil. It conquers pain.
