

The Daily Astorian. ASTORIA, OREGON: THURSDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1885.

It is easier to pay a large debt than a larger one.

Portland newspapers refer to star-goon as "these luscious fish."

Carl Adler is on deck with school books and school supplies at low prices.

Portlandites are eating the second crop of strawberries raised in that vicinity.

The snow on Mt. St. Helens looks as though it were covered with a thin layer of ashes.

Mr. J. F. Hemsaway reports the rainfall in Astoria for September to aggregate 4.24 inches.

The work of cleaning and repairing the Welch hill reservoir is finished and the water again flows into it.

Dr. Kinney offers for sale some choice tide land that will prove a valuable investment to the purchaser.

The Portia cleared for Liverpool yesterday with 25,581 lbs. flour, 132 cases salmon and one pair of elk horns; total value $86,071.

Three car loads of hops from Puyallup, W. T. are en route to England, on the N. P. R. R. through bills of lading issued by that company.

Sullivan, the famous Sullivan, not John L., but Lawrence, has challenged Thos. Ward to fight him for $250, or $500, London prize rules to govern.

The Bala arrived in yesterday and the Gen. W. Elder sailed west laden for San Francisco. The Oregon is due from San Francisco this morning and the State sails.

The News still further identifies Mr. Flanagan, the newly appointed collector of customs at Coos bay, as "a brother of Patrick Flanagan."

It is probably a son of old man Flanagan's.

Down in California a Chinese gambler has to pay the officer only $20 to get off. One of them gave the snap away, in San Francisco lately, and now they have to tangle $40 or be "informed on."

Capt. Balbridge came up from the bar with the Gen. Wright yesterday. The surveying party have finished their operations and go up the river this morning. The work has been eminently satisfactory.

School begins in District No. 1, next Monday. Seven teachers have been engaged for the term. It is thought that an additional teacher will be employed in District No. 18. The Clatsop county teachers all belong to the gentler sex.

Yesterday's Oregonian has a letter on the Pine Creek mines, written by "Eleg." It treats of mines and methods and is chock full of solid sense. The letter ought to be set up in pie, slugged out, and sent to some of the Tillamook miners.

Last June and July the San Francisco trade journals were pool-pooling the statement that salmon would go up this fall and that the pack would be a short one. Now they are vying with each other to see which can publish the strongest effort to bull the salmon market.

E. Z. Ferguson takes his place as assistant deputy collector at the custom house this morning. V. Boelling goes on as inspector, which about completes the list of changes in the second story. Just who will be postmaster is as yet undetermined.

Messrs. Bell, Dickinson and Cleveland being prominently mentioned in connection with the position. Mr. Chance's commission expires next December.

The Tacoma Ledger has it from trustworthy authority that an agent of the Chinese Six companies at San Francisco has written to a prominent Tacoma attorney offering him a retainer fee of $1,000 to try and "paralyze the ordinances of the city of Tacoma bearing upon the Chinese."

The only surprising part of the Ledger's statement is where it says in conclusion, "The offer, we are informed, was declined." The same offer was made to an attorney in Seattle.

Among some freight surprises the Oregonian mentions the fact that Wadhams & Elliott have shipped a carload of cedar lumber, cut near Newwankum, W. T., to Stillwater, Minn.; the agent of a large London firm has secured rates on ten carloads of apples to Liverpool direct; Eastern Oregon and Washington fruit dealers are buying large quantities of Willamette valley fruit. About the most astonishing thing in freight shipments that has lately come under THE ASTORIAN'S observation is the importation of salmon boxes to the Columbia river from California, and the importation of high priced fish from Maine, for home consumption.

U. S. Government Nautical Almanac for 1886 now ready. For sale at Griffin & Rosday.

All new books adopted by schools for sale at introductory prices until January 1st, 1886. Those who have purchased from us any of the new books can have the difference between the regular and introductory prices refunded. GRIFFIN & REED, City Book Store.

A commendable enterprise. Our city is very quick to take up metropolitan ways and customs. Only one year ago, the Portland Y. M. C. A. started educational classes, for their members, and as it has proven to be a success there, our local association has followed in the same track. Our young men can now profitably employ two or three evenings each week in practical studies, without loss of time to themselves, and for a nominal fee. We learn from the officers of the association that the dues are but four dollars a year, less than thirty-five cents a month for a liberal commercial education. The gentlemen who have consented to teach the classes are men of high educational standing and with many years of practical experience as teachers.

SMALL ACCOUNTS.

Comment us to the firm or man who regularly once a month makes a prompt settlement of his small accounts. He is doubtless only one among many; but in doing so he contributes largely to the general good, for every dollar thus set in circulation starts on a mission of good; it enables each person to whom it goes greeting to liquidate thus much of his indebtedness to another, who in turn employs it again for a similar purpose, and so on, like the apostles of old, it goes about doing good. Were every man—let us say every business man—in the community to pay off his small accounts within thirty days from the time of contraction, and not keep on persading himself of their unimportance because they are trifles, the business of the country would be vastly improved. A little effort would conquer the evil habit of neglect, and, apart from the business principle, he would have the proud consciousness not only of having discharged a duty but of having set a good example and enabled others to follow it. All business men, whatever their department of trade, are mutually dependent, and what benefits or injures one affects all more or less, but in no way can each assist and promote the general welfare than by the prompt payment of small accounts. Large accounts being a part of the regular machinery of trade are, as a matter of course, well looked after; they have their time to fall due; their importance is too great, yet it is only by the aggregation of a multitude of small ones that these are provided for. Small accounts have no time of maturity, they are payable "any time"; they remotely resemble what are called debts of honor—"more honored in the breach than the observance," the debtor never thinks that it can be any incumbrance to the creditor to wait for such a trifle, he will get at it some day when he has time, and thus resolves and re-resolves, and the debt continues to keep bad company with the many like it on the books of nearly every dealer in the land.

A RUINED MAN'S PALACE.

A correspondent of the Philadelphia Bulletin, writing from New York, says: "Mr. Villard, it is certain, had no intimation until the last moment of the trouble that was to come upon him and ruin him. He laid his plans for the future with mathematical precision. He had an enormous income and he used it free-handedly. One of his extravagances was a splendid mansion which he built on Madison avenue. When the crash came and he had to meet his debts, the house went out of his grasp with the other assets. This was the hardest blow of all, for Villard had put his heart into his house. That is why, possibly, that the Villard mansion is one of the most beautiful dwellings in New York. The splendor of the impression made by its interior decoration is quite extraordinary. The building itself is copied from an Italian palace. It is part of a group of buildings, six altogether. The Villard house is a right wing of the entire structure. One enters the vestibule by a court and finds himself in an Italian palace, of course on a small scale. The color is that of Sienna marbles and deeper browns. The halls run at right angles with the vestibule, opening at one end into a drawing-room suite and at the other into a music-room. The walls are paneled with Sienna marble of various tints. The walls of the ceiling are inlaid with a Renaissance design. There is a splendid fireplace and above this a relief figure by August St. Gaudens. Throughout the hall and vestibule there are so many exquisite details of workmanship that it is hard to refer to them in a matter of fact way. The dining-room is divided by mahogany pillars into three divisions and is ornamented with gorgeous effect. The walls are hung with ecorché silk wrought in the tints of mahogany. The walls have a resplendent tint of unbroken cream. Slabs of Mexican onyx surround the fireplace. The dining room is paneled in oak; it is divided by a screen of perforated carving. The music room is a lofty apartment in white and gold, and soft pine wainscoting. On the second floor the library is an antique room with a nail-studded ceiling. In fact there are so many wonderful chambers in the house which Mr. Villard will never, it is thought, rest his head in, that one can only sympathize with a man who could have built so noble a structure and then lost it."

CESSATION OF SHIPMENTS.

New York, Sept. 29.—The statement was made this morning that no more Oregon salmon would be shipped here, owing to the fact that the United States Express company had raised rates from Portland to New York. The agent of the express company said to your correspondent: "It is true that we have raised twenty-five cents, but it is simply a restoration of the rate which prevailed prior to July and August. During these months the weather was so hot that the rate was increased from $10.75 to $11. But the Northern Pacific regulates the rate on Columbia river salmon. We have nothing to do with it. Only a few small packages come by express anyway."

INCUMBRANCE PASSENGERS.

SELF-PROTECTION FOR SMOKERS.

"I have seen a physician," says an English contemporary, "stop a surgical operation and light a cigar, and I have seen the same cigar used in lighting other cigars. A brass finisher, on his way home from work, borrows your cigar. He returns it to you with a small quantity of brass dust adhering to it. This dust works itself into your mouth, which is a trifle sore already. The consequence is that your mouth is poisoned, and it may take months to repair the evil. A friend of mine cut his finger the other day. Before the cut had healed, some sort of poison was deposited in it. The hand became stiff and swollen, and finally began to puff up as though it were inflated with air. He came to me, and after I had prescribed for him, we left my office together. I had just lighted a fresh cigar. In the street my friend asked me for a light. I handed him my cigar. When he returned it to me I threw it away, and drawing a fresh cigar from my pocket, lighted it with a match. My friend looked at me in astonishment, and said he was sorry I considered it necessary to throw my cigar away. I told him I did that to show him that he had no more right to handle my cigar with his injured hand than a leper has to kiss a healthy baby. Of course he saw what it meant right off, and was always very careful after that. If I had acted as a great many men and women would consider it right to act, he would have gone around handling cigars promiscuously, and perhaps have caused a great deal of trouble."
