Holy Tattooing.

The custom of tattooing the body formerly existed in all parts of Polyformerly existed in all parts of Polynesia, but is now generally abandoned, except among the ruder islanders. The process was substantially as follows: The artist first drew the desired pattern upon the body of his subject; then taking a fine-toothed comb, made of shell or bone, he dipped it into a liquid composed of the pulverized coal of the candlenut and oil, and placing it on the spot caused it to puncture the skin by a blow with a mallet. Soon a bluish spot caused it to puncture the skin by a blow with a mallet. Soon a bluish color appeared under the skin, which did not fade for many years. The first marks were made about the time of puberty, but so painful, and even dangerous was the process that it was not finished at once, but the pattern was elaborated year by year up to advanced age. The designs were mostly arrangements of curved lines, showing great artistic skill and approximate the statement of the skill and approximate the statement of the skill and approximate the skill approximate the skill and approximate the skill approximat showing great artistic skill and appearing to the eye like a drapery of fine lace work. Often figures of men, ine lace work. Often figures of men, birds, dogs, fishes or other objects were pictured. The extent of the person covered by tattoo varied on different groups, but the thighs were invariably marked. High chiefs were exempt from the custom, as were the lowest class of freemen, slaves, and to a great extent women. slaves, and to a great extent women. Various theories have been proposed to account for the practice, but the only satisfactory one finds its ground in religion. The figures of living objects, so common are the totems of the individual or tribe in which the individual or tribe in which guardian spirits are believed to reside. The operator is always a priest, and the patient is tabu, "holy," during the process. The primitive idea seems to have been that by drawing the visible emblem of a deity upon the person his favor was thereby segured. Later this concention federates. cured. Later, this conception faded out, and the custom came to be simply a mode of ornamentation or mark of social distinction. The chiefs were not fattooed because themselves partaking of the divine nature, they did not require it, and the rest were ex-empt because they did not deserve

A poor old tattered, scarred, pun hobbled into an undertakers and leaning its crutch against a coffin warmed its hands at the fire. "What do you want?" demanded the undertaker. "Sir," replied the poor pun humbly, "I have been dead and buried many a year, but have fallen into the hands of resurrectionists and here I am. I have heard that a new funny paper is to be started and called in to ask for some kind of hermetically scaled grave for my ashes. I have con-cluded that cremation is my only hope.

Cure For Piles.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some effection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, flatnleney, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, after getting warm is a com-

What Parents Fear.

Many persons-especially parents object to quack nostrums as likely to engender or encourage a love for strong drink. They are right. Bet-ter to die of disease than of drunken-ness. The use of Parker's Tonic does not involve this danger. It not only builds up the system, curing all ments of the stomach, liver and kidnevs, but it stimulates without intoxicating and absolutely cures the appetite for liquor.
