Will-Power a Young Man's Fortune.

President Gates, of Rutger's College, says: "Every young man has a fortune in the fact of his youth. The energy of youth is unblunted by de-feat, or worn by hope deferred. With age one becomes more conservative and looks at as impossible what a younger person would endeavor to accomplish, in many cases with suc-The effort, even if there be a failure, is a grand success. Self-confidence, or self-conceit, if you wish to call it so, is a great thing. A young man's fortune is not to be found in inherited wealth or social position. Every man is the arbiter of his own fortune. Gracious manners or busi ness habits are good things to cultivate, but are not all. Will-power is the young man's fortune. It is the essence of the man. A young man with only little will-power is a fore-gone failure. It should be cultivated Genius is a gift of God and should not cause pride, but an honest pur-suit of duties is an exhibition of willpower and is something to be proud of. Well-directed, educated will-power is what a young man needs." Fixed for the Carnival.

When the evening's fun was over the pair of jolly fellows discarded their costumes and attempted to discard the negro tint of their faces, but, to their dismay, hard scrubbing and a liberal use of soap and water failed to produce any more effect on the black than to make it glow and become if anything, the more realistic. The pair explained the difficulty to a crowd of sympathizers, and by advice a Turkish bath establishment was resorted to; but at the late hour of the night the bath was not in running order, and in despair a prominent druggist was sought out, and while the emba-rassing trouble was explained the druggist was begged to prescribe some solution that would turn the black faces white again. It transpired that the gay carnivalists had on the recommendation of a friend, used hemp-black and lard in the stead of the popular burnt cork, and the man of chemicals assured them that he could not wash their

The Cabinet meetings, are, you know, always secret. Just off the Cabinet room is the library, and when Webster was Secretary of S he it was noticed that the Cabinet meetings were reported in full in certain of the newspapers. Various means were undertaken to find out the leaky member of the Cabinet, but each member up and down denied that he had told anything to anyone. One day Webster excused himself and went out into the library while the others tasked as usual. He found he could hear every word uttered within. He cane back and said he thought the excrets must have gotten out through a correspondent listening in the library. After this the library was leaked during Cabinet sessions, and the reports immediately ceased. An Age of Too Much Reading.

Prof. Blackie says he wishes him-self back in the Middle Ages, when singing was the only sermon and the minstrel the only teacher. We are running too much to books. The people don't come together any more. There are no more grand public reunions of the masses. A man buys a book or a paper, and, hurrying home, shuts the cor and reads. Everybody reads. What Parents Fear.

Many persons—especially parents
