Great Rendering of the Gld Nong 939 Voices

Gen. Howell Cobb visited Andersonville on the Fourth of July, 1864, to look into the alleged desertion of the guards. It was a critical time, and there were 34,000 Federal pris-oners in the stockade. If any considerable number of the guards de-serted it was feared that the prisoners would make a break and overrun the country. The correspondent of the Indianapolis Sentinel says that General Cobb collected the guards near the stockade and commenced a ringing speech in which he reminded them of the important trust confided to them and urged them to do their duty. Before the speaker had uttered more than a few sentences, about fifty prisoners in the stockade were heard singing the first verse of the "Star Spangled Banner." When the When the chorus was reached, with detonations like an explosion, 5,000 voices were

The star spangled banner, oh, long may it wave O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.

The deafening noise broke into the speech, but when the roar subsided and only a few score voices were heard singing the second stanza, Wirtz hastened to have the singing stopped. The narrator of the story

Says:—
The verse was sung and the chorus reached again. The congregation numbered 10,000 more than before. Heaven! what a swell of sound! The very air seemed to quiver with the concussion, the stockade wall to tremble. The guards on the mount were stunned with wonderment. Wirtz, who had reached the great gate, stood stock still as if paralyzed. The soldiers forming the square were all now facing the prison.
"The storm lulled, the speaker

sought to resume, but his manner was disconcerted. Wirtz was moving nervously about, but essaying nothing. They heard the breeze of song sweeping along the lines of the third stanza, but knew it only foreboded the return of the tempest. And now Getting "Acclimated" in Texas.

A man who moves to Texas from the old States has to be very cautious until he has had time to look around. If he has a little money he had better keep it low down in his pocket for a few months or he will get acclimated. By acclimation they mean losing what you brought with you and getting so reduced that you can't get away if you want to. An old acquaintance asked me yesterday if I got acclimated, and I told him yes and that I had written home for money to take me back to Georgia. "Happy man," said he, "if you have any left at home, for but few who come here leave any behind, and by the time we accliniate them they are properly humble and go to work and in a year or so are reconciled to stay.'

Scientific Miscellany

In some cases, cocoaine, the new local anæsthetic, has proven an ef-fective remedy for hay fever.

Two French investigators have found that the electric resistance of most pure metals decreases with a lowering of temperature.

The sound of thunder, Palmieri finds, cannot be heard more than thirteen miles, while lightning may be perceived at a far greater distance. So called "harvest lightning" must come from a distant storm, as there can be no lightning without rain and thunder.

Lyell estimated that the gorge of Niagara River wascut out in about 35,-000 years, but surveys to determine the present recession of the falls in-dicate that the work may have been done in 10,000 years. During fortyone years the average annual wear of the rock was 234 feet.

Captain Traut, a British navigator, was surprised to find that an iceberg encountered in the Atlantic on July 16th, exerted no appreciable influence on the temperature of the surround-ing water, the thermometer standing at about 57 degrees for several miles on either side of the immense ice mass and within a few hundred feet

The first specimen of archalopteryx, the fossil link between birds and reptiles, was discovered in Germany n 1860, and was sold to the Pritish Museum for $3,500. A second specimen, more perfect, was secured a few years ago, and was finally sold to the Berlin Museum for about $5,000. These fossils have afforded a strong argument to supporters of the Dar-winian theory of development.

From time to time interesting archicological discoveries, illustrating the commerce and luxury of ancient Rome, have been made near Monte Testaccio. Colossal remains of a great emporium built about 200 s. c. still exist. In 1868 a considerable portion of the quays was found, with many blocks of fine marble, and now two warehouses have been un earthed, one filled with elephants tusks, and the other with centils.

TERRESTRIAL TEMPERATURE. -In investigations now being carried on by the German Government, a shaft sunk in the earth is found to be heated to 120 degrees at a depth of about 4,500 feet. If the temperature increases regularly downward at this rate, the boiling point of water should be reached at a depth of about two miles, and the melting point of platinum at forty-five miles. From this calculation it is thought that the earth's crust cannot be more than one-ninetieth of its radius.

JUPITER'S GREAT SPOT .- The famous red spot which appeared on the planet Jupiter in 1878, and after attracting universal attention and most entirely away, is reported by Mr. Denning, an English astronomer to be again becoming darker and more conspicuous. A search of astro-nomical records has shown that this spot is indentical with one seen by two observers in 1843. If such is the case, it must represent some permanent Jovian feature of immense size.

LUNAR GEOGRAPHY .- The mountains and hollows on the moon which have thus far been given names on the maps of astronomers are as follows: Mountains-The Apennines, the Caucasus, the Alps, Taurius, Baemus, the Altai Mountains, the Cordilleras the Riphae Mountains, the Carpa thians, and the Hercynian Mountains. Hollows or valleys—The Chrisian Sea, the Sea of Fertility, the Sea of Nectar, the Tranquil Sea, the Serene Sea, the Sea of Dreams, the Sea of Death, the Dreamy Marsh, the Cold Sea, the Sea of Vapors, the Middle Bay, the Sea of Clouds, the Sea of Mist, the Bay of Enidemies, the Mist, the Bay of Epidemics, the Stormy Ocean, the Showery Sea, the Sea of Rainbows, the Sea of Dews, and Humboldt's Sea.

Pasteur's Success.-Vast po sibilities have been suggested by the success of Pasteur's method of protecting cattle and sheep from anthrax by inoculation with the attenuated virus, as there seems to be no reason for believing that we may not simi-larly ward off the attacks of other deadly contagious diseases of man and beast. The efficacy of this system is shown by the report just made by a Belgian Government com mission. Since the spring of 1883 many vaccinations have been performed at Herve on farms where anthrax is constantly present, and the investigators have fully satisfied themselves that l'asteur's preserves both sheep and cattle from the disease. Among a thousand fully grown cattle which have been vaccinated no case of anthrax has been observed, while the non-vaccinated have died as usual. The protective influence has lasted one year in ninety per cent of the young ani-mals, while among all mature animals the duration for each inoculation is at least two years.

as well as toward parents and uncles and aunts, it will have little to learn as it grows older. I know a bright and bewitching child who was instructed in table etiquette, but who forgot her lessons sometimes, as even older people do now and then. The arrangement was made with her that for every solecism of this sort she was to pay a fine of five cents, while was to pay a fine of five cents, while for every similar carelessness in her elders she was to exact a fine of ten cents, their experience of life being longer than hers. You may be sure that mistress Bright Eyes watched the proceedings at that table very carefully. No slightest disregard of the most conventional etiquette escaped her quick vision, and she was an inflexible creditor and a faithful debtor. It was the prettiest sight to see her when conscious of some failure on her own part, go unhesitatingly to her money box and pay
